"It has been alleged," says Mr. McCulloch, "that Malthus was under considerable obligations to some of Wallace's speculations; and no doubt they may have afforded him hints, though of a less palpable kind than those afforded by the works of James Stuart, Franklin, Townsend, Bruckner, and others."—*Lit. of Polit. Waller, Edmund, the son of Robert Waller, and a connection by marriage (through his uncle, William Hampden, father of the famous John Hampden) of Oliver Cromwell, b. at Coleshill, Hertfordshire, March 3, 1605; inherited whilst yet in his boyhood an estate of £3500 a year; received his education at Eton and King's College, Cambridge; commenced his legislative career (so it is alleged) as a member for Amersham of the third Parliament of James I., which met in January, 1621, and concluded a long service as a representative of Saltash in the first and only Parliament of James II., which convened on his accession in May, 1685; was married to his first wife, Anna Banks, "a great heiress in the city," July 15, 1631, and after her early death wooed unsuccessfully, in poetical numbers, (as Sacharissa,) Lady Dorothy Sidney, (who married in 1639 Henry Lord Spencer, subsequently Earl of Sunderland, and in 1652 Robert Smythe, Esq.,) eldest daughter of the Earl of Leicester; again invoked his muse, and, with like ill success, chanted the praises (as Amoret) of Lady Sophia Murray; consoled himself for his double—at least—disappointment by the hand and heart of Miss Mary Bresse or Breaux, who in one sense, certainly, satisfied his ambition and brought him "family," for she presented him, at due intervals, with five sons and eight daughters; in 1643 was detected in a plot for the re-establishment of the authority of Charles I., was imprisoned for a year and fined £10,000, and only saved his life by abject submission, betrayal of his friends, and exile from his home; about 1653 was permitted to return to England, and became a great favourite with Cromwell, who often visited the poet's mother (always a professed royalist) at her house at Beaconsfield; in 1654 celebrated the praises of Cromwell in A Panegyric to my Lord Protector, and in 1660 welcomed his royal successor by verses To the King upon his Majesty's Happy Return; died at Beaconsfield, October 21, 1687. The favourite editions are Nos. XIII. and —XXV. The Works of Edmund Waller, Esq., in Verse and Prose, published by Mr. Fenton, Lon., 1729, (some 1730,) 4to, with portrait of Waller by Vertue, and other embellishments. See Dibdin's Lib. Comp., 733. To these should be added, The Passion of Dido for Æneas, as it is incomparably expressed in the Fourth Book of Virgil, translated by Edmund Waller and Sidney Godolphin, Esqrs., 1658, sm. 8vo. Some of his speeches were published separately from his poems. "He was joined with Lord Buckhurst in the translation of Corneille's Pompey, and is said to have added his help to that of Cowley in the original draught of the Rehearsal." His poems are chiefly brief and occasional, though among them is a description of Divine Love, in six cantos.

"The characters by which Waller intended to distinguish his writing are sprightliness and dignity: in his smaller pieces he endeavours to be gay; in the larger, to be great. Of his airy and light productions the chief source is gallantry, that attentive reverence of female excellence which are commonly occasional, and the Gothic ages. As his poems are commonly occasional, and his addresses personal, he was not so liberally supplied with grand as with soft images; for beauty is more easily found than magnanimity. The delicacy which he cultivated restrains him to a certain nicety and caution, even when he writes upon the slightest matter. He has, therefore, in his whole volume nothing burlesque, and seldom anything ludicrous or familiar. He seems always to do his best; though his subjects are often unworthy of his care. . . . But of the praise of Waller, though much may be taken away, much will remain; for it cannot be denied that he added something to our elegance of diction, and something to our propriety of thought; and to him may be applied what Tasso said, with equal spirit and justice, of himself and Guarini, when, having perused the 'Pastor Fido,' he cried out, if he had not read 'Aminta' he had not excelled it."—DR. JOHNSON: Life of Waller, in his Lives of Eng. Poets, P. Cunningham's ed., 1854, i. 250, 260.

Read the whole of this Life and Mr. Cunningham's illustrative Notes.

"Waller was the first refiner of English poetry, at least of English rhyme; but his performances still abound with many faults; and, what is more material, they contain but few and superficial beauties. Quietly, wit, and ingenuity are their ruling character. They aspire not to the sublime, still less to the pathetic. They treat of love without making us feel any tenderness, and abound in panegyric without exciting admiration. The panegyric, however, on Cromwell contains more force than we should expect from the other compositions of this poet."—HUME: Hist. of England, ch. xlii.: The Commonwealth. See, also, ch. lvi.

With like carelessness Bishop Atterbury, who meditated an edition of Waller's Poems, tells us (Preface to Waller's Poems, 1690) that Waller was "the parent of English verse, and the first that showed us that our tongue had beauty and numbers." Surely it was not reserved for the poets of "Charles's days" to make this pleasing discovery. Dryden, Prior, and Pope are among the eminent critics who commend the sweetness of Waller's verse; and in other respects, also, he has been advantageously compared with some of his contemporaries:

"Waller has a more uniform elegance, a more sure facility and happiness of expression, and, above all, a greater exemption from glaring faults, such as pedantry, extravagance, conceit, quaintness, obscurity, ungrammatical and unmeaning constructions, than any of the Caroline era with whom he would naturally be compared. We have only to open Carew or Lovelace to perceive the difference; not that Waller is wholly without some of these faults, but that they are much less frequent. If others may have brighter passages of fancy or sentiment, which is not difficult, he husbands better his resources, and, though left behind in the beginning of the race, comes sooner to the goal. . . . In his amorous poetry he has little passion or sensibility; but he is never free and petulant, never tedious, and never absurd. His praise consists much in negations; but, in a comparative estimate, perhaps negations ought to count for a good deal."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, 4th ed., 1854, iii. 472. See, also, 42, 484.

"Waller, whom you proscribe, sir, owed his reputation to the graces of his manner, though he frequently stumbled, and even fell flat; but a few of his smaller pieces are as graceful as possible: one might say that he excelled in paintings in enamel, but could not succeed in portraits in oil, large as life."—HORACE WALPOLE to J. Pinkerton, (on his Heron's Letters): Letters, ed. 1861, viii. 564.

His latest critic concludes his survey with these remarks:

"There are not, perhaps, two hundred really good lines in all Waller's poetry. Extravagant conceits, feeble verses, and defective rhymes are constantly recurring, although the poems, being mostly short, are not tedious. Of elevated imagination, profound thought, or passion, he was utterly destitute; and it is only in detached passages, single stanzas, or small pieces, finished with great care and elegance, as the lines on a lady's girdle, those on the dwarfs, and a few of the lyrics, that we can discern that play of fancy, verbal sweetness, and harmony which gave so great a name to Waller for more than a hundred years."—ROBERT CARRUTHERS: Life of Waller, in Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., xxi., 1890, 691.

"Waller was smooth, but Dryden taught to join

The varying pause, the full resounding line."

The long majestic march, and energy divine."—POPE.

Prefixed is a treatise on conic sections, treated in a new light.

"The book, next to the elements, which was put into his [Isaac Newton's] hands was Wallis's Arithmetic of Infinites, a work well fitted for suggesting new views in geometry and calling into activity the powers of mathematical invention. Wallis had effected the quadrature of all those curves in which the value of one of the co-ordinates can be expressed in terms of the other without involving either fractional or negative exponents. Beyond this point neither his researches nor those of any other geometer had yet reached, and from this point the discoveries of Newton began."—PROF. JOHN PLAYFAIR: Encyc. Brit., Dissert. Fourth, 8th ed., (1853,) 634. See, also, Enc. Brit., xx. 523, and Index.

"It is the first work in which a copious history of the subject was mixed with its theory. The defect of this history has been adverted to in Vieta, col. 370; but, when this is passed over, it may safely be said that the algebra of Wallis is full of interest, even at the present time, not only as an historical work, but as one of invention and originality."—*Knigh's Eng. Walpole, Rt. Hon. Horace, (Horatio,) Earl of Orford, considered by most of his contemporaries and biographers to have been the third and youngest son of Sir Robert Walpole (infra) by Catherine Shorter, his first wife, was born October 5, 1717, and educated at Eton and at King's College, Cambridge; travelled for two years on the continent, (see GRAY, THOMAS,) and on his return home, September, 1741, took his seat as M.P. for Callington; exchanged for Castle Rising, 1744, and from 1754 to 1768, when he retired from Parliament, represented King's Lynn. By the favour of his reputed father, he enjoyed for many years before his death three sinecure offices, Usher of the Exchequer, Comptroller of the Pipe, and Clerk of the Estreates,—the profits of which (several thousands of pounds per annum) enabled him to enlarge his Strawberry Hill residence (purchased in 1747) from a cottage to a Gothic villa, and to fill it with works of art,—many of them of great value and rarity. In 1791, by the death of his nephew George, third Earl of Orford, he succeeded to the title and estates of his family; but, with his usual affectation, he appeared rather to despise than to value his new honours,—never took his seat in the House of Lords, and, to avoid the use of his title, sometimes signed himself, The Uncle of the late Earl of Orford. He died at his house in Berkeley Square, London, March 2, 1797, in his 80th year. He was never married.

I have remarked that Horace Walpole was considered by most of his contemporaries and biographers to have been the son of Sir Robert Walpole. The inference from this statement will naturally be that there were some who thought otherwise. My explanation shall be conveyed in the words of Walpole's latest editor:

"It is said that, latterly, Sir Robert Walpole and his wife did not live happily together, and that Horace, the youngest, was not the son of the great Prime Minister of England, but of Carr Lord Hervey, elder brother of Pope's antagonist, and reckoned, as Walpole records, of superior parts to his celebrated brother, John. The story rests on the authority of Lady Louisa Stuart, daughter of the minister Earl of Bute, and grand-daughter of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu. She has related it in print in the Introductory Anecdotes to Lady Mary's Works; and there is too much reason to believe that what she says is true."—PETER CUNNINGHAM: Pref. to his ed. of Walpole's Letters, 13 Sept. 1858, q. v. for Mr. Cunningham's reflections on this delicate theme.

Was it so then, indeed, that this eager retailer of scandal appertaining to so many great families was himself, all unconsciously, ("for we have no evidence whatever that a suspicion of spurious parentage ever crossed the mind of Horace Walpole."—Cunningham, ubi supra;) so vulnerable in the very tenderest point? It may be so; but I am bound to say that Mr. Cunningham's reasons for crediting Lady Stuart's story appear to me altogether inconclusive.

The portrait of Horace has often been sketched, and perhaps never so vividly as by a great artist lately withdrawn from us in the prime of his wonderful powers:

"He was, unless we have formed a very erroneous judgment of his character, the most eccentric, the most artificial, the most fastidious, the most capricious, of men. His mind was a bundle of inconsistent whims and affectations. His features were covered by mask within mask. When the outer disguise of obvious affectation was removed, you were still as far as ever from seeing the real man. He played innumerable parts, and over-acted them all. When he talked misanthropy, he out-Timoned Timon. When he talked philanthropy, he left Howard at an immeasurable distance. He scoffed at Courts, and kept a chronicle of their most trifling scandal,—at Society, and was blown about by its slightest veerings of opinion,—at Literary Fame, and left fair copies of his private letters, with copious notes, to be published after his decease,—at Rank, and never for a moment forgot that he was an Honourable,—at the practice of Entail, and tasked the ingenuity of conveyancers to tie up his villa in the strictest settlement.

"The conformation of his mind was such that whatever was little seemed to him great, and whatever was great seemed to him little. Serious business was a trifle to him, and trifles were his serious business. To chat with blue-stockings,—to write little copies of complimentary verses on little occasions,—to superintend a private press,—to preserve from natural decay the perishable topics of Ranelagh and White's,—to record divorces and beds, Miss Chudleigh's absurdities and George Selwyn's good sayings,—to decorate a grotesque house with pie-crust battlements,—to procure rare engravings and antique chimney-boards,—to match odd gauntlets,—to lay out a maze of walks within five acres of grounds,—these were the grave employments of his long life. From these he turned to politics as to an amusement. After the labours of the print-shop and the auction-room, he unbent his mind in the House of Commons. And, having indulged in the recreation of making laws and voting millions, he returned to more important pursuits,—to researches after Queen Mary's comb, Wolsey's red hat, the pipe which Van Tromp smoked during his last sea-fight, and the spur which King William struck into the flank of Sorrel."—LORD MACAULAY: Edin. Rev., Oct. 1833, (lviii.) 227, 228; repub. in his Essays.

Against this verdict Miss Mary Berry (see her Advertisement in Walpole's Letters, 1840, 6 vols. 8vo) earnestly protests: yet Macaulay's sketch agrees very well with Walpole's portrait by his own hand:

"I am certainly the greatest philosopher in the world, without ever having thought of being so: always employed, and never busy; eager about trifles, and indifferent to every thing serious. Well, if it is not philosophy, at least it is content."—Letter to Hon. H. S. Conway, Aug. 18, 1774, Cunningham's ed., 1861, vi. 109. See, also, extracts from his Letters, infra.

"Horace Walpole was an agreeable, lively man, very affected, always aiming at wit, in which he fell very short of his old friend George Selwyn, who possessed it in the most genuine but indescribable degree."—LORD OSSORY: Walpole's Letters, Cunningham's ed., 1861, v. 256, n.

"Walpole was the last surviving disciple of the school of St. Evremont, Chaulieu, &c.,—a tribe of philosophers who united study with amusement, and sentiment with vivacity; but in him the levity of the French Epicureans was invigorated by the masculine strength of the British character."—WRANGHAM.

"His figure," remarks Miss Hawkins, in the reminiscence of her early residence at Twickenham, "was not merely tall, but, more properly, long and slender to excess; his complexion, and particularly his hands, of a most unhealthy paleness. His eyes were remarkably bright and penetrating, very dark and lively; his voice was not strong, but his tones were extremely pleasant, and, if I may so say, highly gentlemanly. I do not remember his common gait. He always entered a room in that style of affected delicacy which fashion had then made almost natural: chapeau bras between his hands, as if he wished to compress it, or under his arm; knees bent, and feet on tiptoe, as if afraid of a wet floor. His dress in visiting was most usually, in summer, when I most saw him, a lavender suit, the waistcoat embroidered with a little silver, or of white silk worked in the tambour, partridge silk stockings and good buckles, ruffles and frill generally laced. I remember, when a child, thinking him very much under-dressed if at any time, except in mourning, he wore homed cambric. In summer no powder, but his wig combed straight and showing his very smooth, pale forehead, and queued behind in winter, powder."

"In the evening," says Madame D'Arblay, "came in Mr. Walpole; gay, though caustic; polite, though sneering; and entertainingly epigrammatical. I like and admire, but could not love nor trust him."

Let us quote something better, from one who knew him better:

"The affections of his heart were bestowed on few, for in early life they had never been cultivated; but they were singularly warm, pure, and constant; characterised not by the ardour of passion, but by the constant pre-occupation of real affection. . . . To the friends of his own election his devotion was not confined to professions or words: on all occasions of difficulty, of whatever nature, his active affection came forward in defence of their character or assistance in their affairs."—MISS BERRY: Advertisement, dc., ubi supra. "The first edition of the 'Anecdotes' was of three hundred, of the two first volumes; and of as many of the third volume, and of the volume of 'Engravers.' Then there was an edition of three hundred of all four. . . . Of my new fourth volume I printed [about Oct. 1, 1780] six hundred; but, as they can be had, I believe not a third part is sold. This is a very plain lesson to me, that my editions sell for their curiosity, and not for any merit in them; and so they would if I printed Mother Goose's Tales, and but a few. As my 'Anecdotes of Painting' have been published at such distant periods, and in three divisions, complete sets will be seldom seen: so, if I am humbled as an author I may be vain as a printer; and when one has nothing else to be vain of, it is certainly very little worth while to be proud of that."—*To Rev. "I do not doubt that there is a swarm of diminutive inaccuracies in my 'Anecdotes':—well, if there is, I bequeath free leave of correction to the microscopic intellects of my continuators. "The actors in the romance are strikingly drawn, with bold outlines becoming the age and nature of the story. Feudal tyranny was perhaps never better exemplified than in the character of Manfred. . . . The applause due to chastity and precision of style, to a happy combination of supernatural agency with human interest, to a tone of feudal manners and language sustained by characters strongly drawn and well discriminated, and to unity of action, producing scenes alternately of interest and of grandeur,—the applause, in fine, which cannot be denied to him who can excite the passions of fear and of pity,—must be awarded to the author of The Castle of Otranto."—*SIR WALTER SCOTT: Biog. "The Castle of Otranto (which is supposed to have led the way to this style of writing) is, to my notion, dry, meagre, and without effect. It is done upon false principles of taste. The great hand and arm which are thrust into the court-yard, and remain there all day long, are the pasteboard machinery of a pantomime; they shock the senses, and have no purchase upon the imagination. "The 'Historic Doubts' are an acute and curious example how minute antiquarian research may shake our faith in the facts most pointedly averred by general history. Also repub. at end of Dallaway's and Wornum's edits. of Anecdotes of Painting.

"It is the translation of my 'Essay on Modern Gardens' by the Duc de Nivernois. I believe I mentioned it to your Ladyship. You will find it a most beautiful piece of the genuine French spoken by the Duc de la Rochefoucault and Madame de Sévigné."—To the Countess of Ossory, Sept. 17, 1785: Letters, ed. 1861, ix. 12. See, also, 16, 56.

15. Hasty Productions, by Lord Orford, Norwich, 1791, 8vo: 25 copies, some of which were burnt by his executrix, Mrs. Damer, the productions being "clever but very free." He also published a number of political tracts, &c., (see Bohn's Lowndes, 2820, 2822), wrote Nos. vi., viii., x., xiv., xxviii., ciii., clx., and cxv. of The World, and the concluding World Extraordinary, containing the character of Henry Fox, afterwards Lord Holland, and was the author of some poetical pieces in Dodsley's Collection.

Walpole projected a complete edition of all his works from the Strawberry Hill press, and about 1770 et seq. prepared there two volumes which are included in—16. The Works of Horatio Walpole, Earl of Orford, illustrated with upwards of 150 Portraits, edited by Robert Berry, &c., (see BERRY, MARY), Lon., 1798, 5 vols. 4to, £10 10s.; 1 p., r. 4to, £21. Sir M. M. Sykes, Pt. 2, 644, in hog-skin, £24 13s. 6d. For contents and notices of this edition, see Lon. Mon. Rev., 1798, ii. (xxvi.) 323, iii. (xxvii.) 31, 171, 271. 17. Reminiscences, Written in 1788, for the Amusement of Miss Mary and Miss Agnes B.—y, 1805, fol.: 25 copies privately printed from No. 16, at the expense of Lord Frederick Campbell. Illustrated with 200 portraits, Stowe, 5733, £15 15s. Lord Orford's Reminiscences, Lon., Sharpe, 1818, 12mo, pp. 120. Horace Walpole's Reminiscences, and Walpoliana, Bost., 1820, 12mo. In Cunningham's ed. of Walpole's Letters these Reminiscences will be found in vol. i., pp. lxxvii., cxlv. In 1840 Mary Berry edited, for the first time, the sixty letters addressed by Walpole to (his two "wives," as he called them) Agnes and herself: see 17, WALPOLE'S LETTERS AND CORRESPONDENCE, No. VII. Walpole left many other MSS., and from these have been published from time to time many volumes, which we shall classify as: 17. WALPOLE'S LETTERS AND CORRESPONDENCE; 18. WALPOLE'S MEMOIRS AND JOURNAL.

17. WALPOLE'S LETTERS AND CORRESPONDENCE.

I. Letters to George Montagu, Esq., from the Year 1736 to 1770, Lon., 1818, 4to; 1 p., imp. 4to, £3 3s.; 2d ed., 1819, 4to. Reviewed in Lon. Quar. Rev., xix. 118, (by J. W. Croker); *Edin. V. Letters to Sir Horace Mann, [1741–1760.] British Envoy at the Court of Tuscany; Now first Published from the Originals in the Possession of the Earl of Waldegrave; Edited [with a Memoir] by Lord Dover, 1833, 3 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1833, (some 1834), 3 vols. p. 8vo; 3d ed., 1834, 3 vols. p. 8vo; N. York, 1833, 2 vols. 12mo. Reviewed in Edin. Rev., lviii. 227, (by Lord Macaulay),—and in his Essays.—see BERRY, MARY; Westm. Rev., xix. 361; Lon. Mon. Rev., cxxii. 221; Lon. Gent. Mag., 1834, i. 22, 130, 364; Lon. Athen., 1833, 354, 382, 397; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1833, 337, 356, 374, 458.

VI. Letters to Sir Horace Mann, &c., 1760 to 1785; Now first Published from the Original MSS.; Concluding Series, Lon., 1843–44, 4 vols. 8vo; Phila., 1844, 2 vols. 8vo. Reviewed in Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxii. 516, and lxxiv. 395, (both by J. W. Croker); Lon. Gent. Mag., 1843, ii. 227; N. Amer. Rev., lxi. 422, (by C. F. Adams.)

VII. Letters, including Numerous Letters now first Published from the Original Manuscripts, (arranged Chronologically, with Explanatory Notes; edited by John Wright.) Lon., Bentley, 1840, 6 vols. 8vo, £4 4s.; again, 1844, 6 vols. 8vo; again, 1846, 6 vols. 8vo, £3 3s.; Phila., 1842, 4 vols. 8vo. Contains I., II., IV., V., and some (to Mary and Agnes Berry, &c.) before unpublished. Reviewed in Lon. Athen., 1840, 68, 206, 365, 548, 709, 942, 962; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1840, 50, 163, 307, 445, 766, 827; N. Amer. Rev., lv. 1, (by C. F. Adams.)

VIII. Letters addressed to the Countess of Ossory, from the Year 1769 to 1797; Now first Printed from Original MSS.; Edited, with Notes, by the Rt. Hon. R. Vernon Smith, M.P., Lon., April, 1848, 2 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., Dec. 1848, 2 vols. 8vo. Reviewed in Edin. Rev., lxxxviii. 339, (same in Bost. Liv. Age, xx. 29); Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxxiii. 110, (by J. W. Croker); Lon. Athen., 1848, 453, 483, 506; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1848, 306, 325, 357.

IX. The Correspondence of Horace Walpole, Earl of Orford, and the Rev. William Mason; Now first Published from the Original MSS.; Edited by the Rev. J.

Mitford, 1850, (some 1851,) 2 vols. demy 8vo. Reviewed in Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxxix. 135; Lon. Gent. Mag., 1851, ii. 45; Lon. Athen., 1851, 493, 520, 548; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1851, 339, 403; Lon. Exam., 1851, (same in Bost. Liv. Age, xxix. 563.)

But all former collections of Walpole's Letters were superseded by—

X. The Letters of Horace Walpole, Earl of Orford; Edited by Peter Cunningham; Now first Chronologically Arranged, (with nearly 50 portraits after Reynolds, Romney, Gainsborough, &c., engraved on steel,) Bentley, 1857-58, 9 vols. 8vo, 10s. 6d. ea.; Bohn, (Eng. Gent. Lib., i.-ix.,) 1861, 9 vols. demy 8vo, 9s. ea.

"In addition to the series of 'Letters by Walpole' already in print, (and forming nearly 20 volumes in 4to and 8vo, as originally published,) this new edition includes numerous [117] important letters, now for the first time communicated to the Editor from the original MSS. in possession of various families of distinction, [and 35 letters now first collected.] By the advantage of a chronological arrangement of the entire correspondence, it forms a complete domestic history of English society, fashion, art, and literature, chronicled by a writer of unsurpassed wit and unflagging brilliancy during three-quarters of the last century. The variorum Notes of Agar, Ellis, Mitford, and others, combined with those of the present Editor, throw all possible light on the transactions of the bygone days which live again in the pages of their accomplished historian and annalist."—Advertisement, 1858.

"Mr. [Richard] Bentley said that Walpole was the best letter-writer that ever took pen in hand; that he wrote with the greatest ease imaginable, with company in the room, and even talking to other people at the time."—WILLIAM COLE: Athen. Cantab.; Nichols's Illust. of Lit., vii. 573.

I add some quotations:

"Incomparable letters."—LORD BYRON: Pref. to Marino Faliero.

"The best letter-writer in the English language."—SIR WALTER SCOTT: Life of Horace Walpole.

"His epistolary talents have shown our language to be capable of all the graces and all the charms of the French of Madame de Sévigné."—MISS BERRY.

"Of letter-writers by profession we have, indeed, few; although Horace Walpole, bright, fresh, quaint, and glittering as one of his most precious figures of Dresden china, is a host in himself."—MISS MITFORD: Recollections of a Lit. Life, ch. xxxii.

"Read, if you have not read, all Horace Walpole's letters, wherever you can find them: the best wit ever published in the shape of letters."—REV. SYDNEY SMITH: Letter (No. 186) to Edw. Davenport, Foston, Nov. 19, 1820: Mem. of Rev. S. Smith, ii.

"Walpole's 'Letters' are generally considered as his best performances, and, we think, with reason. His faults are far less offensive to us in his correspondence than in his books. His wild, absurd, and ever-changing opinions about men and things are easily pardoned in familiar letters. His bitter, scoffing, depreciating disposition does not show itself in so unmitigated a manner as in his 'Memoirs.' A writer of letters must be civil and friendly to his correspondent, at least, if to no other person."—LORD MACAULAY, for the mere merits of his style that Walpole's Letters are, we think, destined, more surely perhaps than any other work of his or our age, to immortality; it is because these Letters are in fact a chronicle—much more minute and particular than Holinshed or Hall—of every occurrence and of every opinion which attracted or deserved public attention, either at home or abroad, during one of the busiest half-centuries of European history. . . . Walpole's great History of his Own Times."—Rt. Hon. J. W. CROKER: Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxii. (Sept. 1843) 517, and lxxxiii. (Sept. 1848) 118.

"I refrain to quote from Walpole regarding George, for those charming volumes are in the hands of all who love the gossip of the last century. Nothing can be more cheery than Horace's Letters. Fiddles sing all through them; wax-lights, fine dresses, fine jokes, fine plates, fine equipages, glitter and sparkle there; now and then such a brilliant, laughing, smouldering Vanity Fair as that through which he leads us. Hervey, the next great authority, is a darker spirit."—THACKERAY: George the Second.

"Compare Walpole's Letters in Mr. Cunningham's excellent new edition."—THACKERAY: The Virginians, vol. ii. ch. xxx., n.

I read through the whole of these Letters,—from the front cover of vol. i. to the back cover of vol. ix., not omitting even the Rev. Mr. Mason's, which are about as affected and stupid as any that I remember. My time I cannot recall; but I may, by this hint, save somebody else's. Skip Mason's.

18. WALPOLE'S MEMOIRS AND JOURNAL.

I. Memoirs of the Last Ten Years [1751-1760] of the Reign of King George II.; from the Original MSS., (edited by Lord Holland,) 1822, (some 1828,) 2 vols. r. 4to, £5 5s.; same, save some misprints, and Edited, with a Preface and Notes, by the late Lord Holland, on title-page 1846, (some 1847,) 2 vols. 8vo. Reviewed in Edin. Rev., xxxvii. 1, (by Rev. Sydney Smith); Lon. Quar. Rev., xxvii. 178, (by J. W. Croker); Lon. Mon. Rev., xlviii. 1; Lon. Gent. Mag., 1822, i. 235; Lon. Athen., 1846, 1013, 1043, 1069, 1149; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1846, 921. See, also, T. Moore's Memoirs, iv. 225, 303, vi. 79, Blackw. Mag., xi. 370, 479.

"Have you read Lord Orford's Memoirs of his own Time? It is acid and lively, but serves, I think, to show how little those who live in public business, and of course in constant agitation and intrigue, know about the real and deep progress of opinions and events."—SIR WALTER SCOTT: Lockhart's Scott, ch. lv.

II. Memoirs of the Reign of King George III., [from his accession to 1771;] Now first Published from the Original MSS.; Edited, with Notes, by Sir Denis Le Marchant, Bart., 1845, (some 1847,) 4 vols. 8vo; Phila., 1845, 2 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., Lon., 1851, 4 vols. 8vo. Reviewed in Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxvii. 253, (by J. W. Croker); Blackw. Mag., lvii. 353, (same in Sir A. Alison's Essays, iii. 310); Dubl. Univ. Mag., xxv. 227, xxvi. 327; Lon. Athen., 1845, 831, 855, (see, also, 1846, 1294; 1860, i. 716); Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1845, 559; N. Amer. Rev., lxi. 422, and lxii. 269, (both by C. F. Adams); H. B. Wallace's Lit. Criticisms, 124. See, also, HERVEY, JOHN.

"Walpole's Correspondence and Memoirs, in many respects, are highly valuable, and will always be referred to, as throwing much important light on the parliamentary and court transactions of the middle of the eighteenth century."—SIR ARCHIBALD ALISON: Essays, 1850, i. 325.

III. Journal of the Reign of King George the Third, from the Year 1771 to 1783; being a Supplement to his Memoirs; now first Published from the Original MSS.; Edited, with Notes, by Dr. Doran, Lon., 1859, 2 vols. demy 8vo.

"These volumes abound in literary and social gossip."—Notes and Queries.

"They are prejudiced, incomplete, angry,—not always borne out by after-facts; but they have a genuine stamp on them, and Horace Walpole's seal was, in regard to the device and sharpness of impression, no common one."—Lon. Athen., 1859, i. 148. See, also, 9.

Dr. Doran does not find Walpole's MS. Commonplace-Book, evidently intended for the press, of a proper character for publication.

To Walpole's Letters and Correspondence, and his Memoirs and Journal, may be added—Memoirs of Horace Walpole and his Contemporaries, including Numerous Original Letters, chiefly from Strawberry Hill; Edited by Eliot Warburton, 1851, 2 vols. 8vo; red. to 10s., 1853. Condemned by Lon. Gent. Mag., 1851, ii. 45; Lon. Athen., 1851, 425; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1851, 251, 403.

"In his multitudinous collection nothing was incongruous, nothing out of place; every thing was well arranged, every thing was complete in its way. Some things might be finical, some trifling; yet all gave evidence of good taste, of refined intellect, and of a range of thought, of occupation, of amusement, far, far higher than could be challenged by any other votarist of fashion of that time. Horace Walpole was himself a living specimen of the rarity which he prized. Strawberry Hill and its master were alike unique."—MRS. STONE: Chronicles of Fashion,—English Society.

Walpole's professed estimate of his own pursuits, and of his productions, was sufficiently humble:

"Every thing," he writes to Cole, in 1781, "tells me how silly I am! I pretend to reason, and yet am a virtuoso!"

"In my latter age," he confesses to Pinkerton, "I discovered the futility both of my objects and writings: I felt how insignificant is the reputation of an author of mediocrity, and that, being no genius, I only added one more name to a list of writers that had told the world nothing but what it could not as well be without."

And again, when quoting Pope's description of the wits of Charles's days, "The mob of gentlemen who write with ease," he adds, "Into that class I must sink; and I had rather do so imperceptibly, than to be plunked down to it by the interposition of the hand of a friend who could not gainsay that sentence."

And when declining a eulogistic dedication of Beloe's Aulus Gellius, (Dec. 2, 1797,) he thus addresses the translator:

"Next to being ashamed of having good qualities bestowed on me to which I should have no title, it would hurt me to be praised on my erudition, which is most superficial, and on my trifling writings, all of which turn on most trifling subjects. They amused me while writing them, may have amused a few persons, but have nothing solid enough to preserve them from being forgotten with other things of as light a nature."—Walpole's Letters, Cunningham's ed., 1861, ix. 448.

"It is most true, sir, that, so far from being prejudiced in favour of my own writings, I am persuaded that, had I thought early as I think now, I should never have appeared as an author. . . . I know how trifling my own writings are, and how far below the standard that constitutes excellence: as for the shades that distinguish the degrees of mediocrity, they are not worth discrimination."—To J. Pinkerton, Oct. 27, 1784: Letters, ed. 1861, viii. 515. See, also, 208, 209, 210, 269, 288.

"I have been so foolish as to be an author, (of which I most heartily repent.) It is not only exposing oneself, but giving others an opportunity to expose one; and therefore, being already one of that general set of fools, it matters little if I am ranged in any particular class. . . . A name so insignificant as mine, and which will every day grow more obscure, or be remembered only by my follies."—To the Earl of Harcourt, Sept. 1, 1787: Letters, ut supra, ix. 105.

"I have several reasons for lamenting daily that I ever was either author or editor. . . . I have been long vexed at the ridiculous prices given for my editions. It could not be flattering to the vainest author or editor upon earth; for their dearness is solely to be attributed to their scarcity; and a collector who pays extravagantly for a rare book will never read in it, or allow anybody else; for the virgin purity of the margin is as sacred with him as the text."—To the Countess of Ossory, Sept. 15, 1787: Letters, ut supra, ix. 110. See, also, 133, 164, 449.

I was to give some extracts exhibiting his own estimate of his character:

"Unalterable in my principles, careless about most things below essentials, indulging myself in trifles by system, annihilating myself by choice, but dreading folly at an unseemly age, I contrive to pass my time agreeably enough, yet see its termination approach without anxiety. This is a true picture of my mind."—To Hon. H. S. Conway, June 20, 1776: Letters, ut supra, vi. 353.

"I would fling up my patent to-morrow if it was capable of making me do one servile act, if it deterred me one moment from following the dictates of conscience and friendship. Both in Parliament and out of it, I will say and do what I think right and honest. I was born free, and I will live and die so, in spite of patents and places. I may be ruined, as Mr. Conway has been, but I will preserve my honour inviolate. If I did not, I might receive you here with more magnificence, but I had rather receive you, as I hope to do, without a blush. You know the passion I have for Strawberry Hill; but, trust me, at this moment I know I could with pleasure see it sold, if reduced to it by suffering for my country and my principles."—Letters, ut supra, iv. 244.

"It was always Walpole's foible to disclaim a professed pursuit of public favour, for which, however, he earnestly thirsted. . . . There was much affectation in this, which accordingly met the reward which affectation usually incurs; as Walpole seems to have suffered a good deal from the criticism which he seemed to despise, and occasionally from the neglect which he appeared to court."—SIR WALTER SCOTT: Life of Walpole.

"That feeble writer [Horace Walpole] has too long incumbered our libraries with his masses of cobwebs, his ponderous volumes of flimsy effusions."—DR. THOMAS BROWN: Edin. Rev., ii. (April, 1803) 239.

"It is the fashion to underrate Horace Walpole: firstly, because he was a nobleman, and secondly, because he was a gentleman; but, to say nothing of the composition of his incomparable letters, and of the Castle of Otranto, he is the 'Ultimus Romanorum,'—the author of the Mysterious Mother, a tragedy of the highest order, and not a puling love-play. He is the father of the first romance and of the last tragedy in our language; and surely worthy of a higher place than any living writer, be he who he may."—LORD BYRON: Preface to Marino Faliero, 1820.

"What, then, is the charm, the irresistible charm, of Walpole's writings? It consists, we think, in the art of amusing without exciting. He never convinces the reason, nor fills the imagination, nor touches the heart; but he keeps the mind of the reader constantly attentive and constantly entertained. . . . No one who has written so much is so seldom tiresome. In his books there is scarcely any of those passages which in our school-days we used to call skip. Yet he often wrote on subjects which are generally considered as dull,—on subjects which men of great talents have in vain endeavoured to render popular. . . . He rejects all but the attractive parts of his subject. He keeps only what is in itself amusing, or what can be made so by the artifice of his diction. The coarser morsels of antiquarian learning he abandons to others, and sets out an entertainment worthy of a Roman epicure,—an entertainment consisting of nothing but delicacies,—the brains of singing birds, the roe of mullets, the sunny halves of peaches. . . . We own that we expect to see fresh Humes and fresh Burkes before we again fall in with that peculiar combination of moral and intellectual qualities to which the writings of Walpole owe their extraordinary popularity."—LORD MACAULAY: Edin. Rev., lviii. (Oct. 1833) 235, 238, 239.

I am now (1870) able to make a valuable addition to my Walpoliana, viz.: Extracts from the Journals and Correspondence of Miss Berry, from the Year 1783 to 1852; Edited by Lady Theresa Lewis, Longmans, 1865, 3 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1866, 3 vols. 8vo. Reviewed in Edin. Rev., Oct. 1865, Lon. Quar. Rev., No. cccxxvii., Jan. 1866, Brit. Quar. Rev., Jan. 1866, Lon. Reader, 1865, ii. 391, 421, 452. To my article BERRY, MARY, I add that she wrote in 1801 a comedy in five acts, called Fashionable Friends, which was produced at Strawberry Hill in 1801, (Prologue and Epilogue by Joanna Bailie,) and subsequently on a public stage. She survived Walpole nearly fifty-six years, dying Nov. 21, 1852, in her 90th year, (b. March, 1763.) Agnes Berry died Jan. 1852, in her 88th year, (b. May, 1764.) Few women moved so long and so acceptably in fashionable society, and knew so many distinguished persons, as Mary and Agnes Berry. For Walpole's first notice of them, see his letter to the Countess of Ossory, Oct. 11, 1788, (Letters, ed. 861, ix. 152, 163, et seq.) For an obituary notice of Miss Berry, see Gentleman's Magazine, 1853, i. 96.

Did Horace Walpole wish to marry Mary Berry? It is taken for granted that he did. Lady Lewis remarks,

"It has often been a matter of speculation whether Lord Orford's great attachment to Miss Berry had ever led to any explicit declaration of a wish to obtain her consent to their union in marriage. Notwithstanding the frequent professions of equal attachment to both sisters, it is easy to see throughout the correspondence that Miss Berry herself was his first object. The dread of being thought ridiculous by playing the part of a more than septuagenarian lover no doubt acted as a constant check upon the indulgence of such hopes as he might have reasonably entertained as a younger man; and so entirely dependent was he on the society of Miss Berry and her sister for what remained to him of pleasure in life, that, even if impelled by the wish to secure to himself the absolute right to her companionship and attentions as a wife, he probably feared to lose her friendship by proffering the hand she might not accept; yet it was admitted by those best entitled to know, that at one time Miss Berry was conscious that the choice was within her power; but she clung to his friendship too warmly and too sincerely not to sedulously guard him from the expression of any feeling she could not fully return. She accepted his friendly affection without reserve. He was spared the mortification of ever learning from her lips that more he could never expect."—Extracts, &c., ut sup., ii. 20.

Now, I am satisfied that Walpole had no intention that his hand should follow his heart. He writes to them, October 10, 1790, "As wives and darling children I have loved and do love you; and, charming as you both are, I have no occasion to remind you that I am past seventy-three." He writes to the Countess of Ossory, May 29, 1792, "In short, they are extraordinary beings, and I am proud of my partiality for them; and since the ridicule can only fall on me, and not on them, I care not a straw for its being said that I am in love with one of them,—people shall choose which: it is as much with both as either, and I am infinitely too old to regard the qu'en dit-on."

"And why should he," writes Mary Berry to a friend, "when, without the trouble or the ridicule of a marriage, he enjoys almost as much of my society, and every comfort from it, that he could in the nearest connexion? As the willing offering of a grateful and affectionate heart, the time and attentions I bestow upon him have hitherto given me pleasure. Were they to become a duty, and a duty to which the world would attribute interested motives, they would become irksome." Doubtless she would have refused any proffer of the kind: her heart belonged to General O'Hara. To our references we add Pegge's Anec. of the Eng. Lang., ed. by Rev. H. Christmas, Appendix iii.: Notes from a MS. of Horace Walpole, Earl of Orford, on the Names of Localities in London, 1844, 8vo; *Lon. Quar. Nor must I omit to notice: Lettres de la Marquise du Delfand à Horace Walpole, écrites dans les Années 1766 à 1780, auxquelles sont jointes des Lettres de Madame du Delfand à Voltaire, écrites dans les Années 1759 à 1775, publiées d'après les originaux déposés à Strawberry-Hill: Nouvelle Édition, augmentée des Extraits des Lettres d'Horace Walpole, (revue et complétée sur l'édition originale de Londres, 1810,) et précédées d'une Notice sur Madame du Delfand par M. A. Thiers, Paris, Firmin Didot, 1864, 2 vols.

"The bibliographical history of the letters addressed to Horace Walpole is worth a passing notice. He left them, when he died, to his friend Miss Mary Berry, by whom they were published in London in 1810, [4 vols. 8vo.] The following year they were also published in Paris; and since then have been, we believe, three editions, the last in 1827. It was to that of 1824 that M. Thiers, who was then winning his literary spurs, wrote the biographical notice reprinted as a preface to the two volumes we have before us."—Lon. Reader, 1864, ii. 320.

The first French edition is dated 1812, 4 vols. 8vo; the 2d ed., 1824, (with a new title-page, 1827,) 4 vols. 8vo. The London edition was reviewed in Edin. Rev., Feb. 1811, 290-311, and in Lon. Quar. Rev., May, 1811, 498-528, (by J. W. Croker.) This beautiful, brilliant, frivolous, and unprincipled old woman died in 1780, aged 83. May her "tribe" decrease!

Walpole, Horatio, Lord Walpole, brother of Sir Robert Walpole, and also a distinguished statesman, was b. 1678, and d. 1757. He was the author of Answer to the Latter Part of Bolingbroke's Letters on the Study of History, Lon., 1762, sm. 4to, privately printed, 2d ed., 1763, 8vo, and of some anonymous political pamphlets pub. 1730 et seq. His Letter on Proposed Alterations of the Thirty-Nine Articles, written in 1751, was pub. King's Lynn, 1863, 8vo. See Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors, iv. 225; Smollett's Eng., Reign Geo. "The prudence, steadiness, and vigilance of that man, joined to the greatest possible lenity in his character and his politics, preserved the crown to this royal family, and with it their laws and liberties to this country."—EDMUND BURKE: Appeal from the New to the Old Whigs, 1791, 8vo.

"Few men ever reached and maintained for so many years the highest station which the citizen of a free state can hold, who have enjoyed more power than Sir Robert Walpole, and who have left behind them less just cause of blame, or more monuments of the wisdom and virtue for which his country has to thank him."—LORD BROUGHAM: Edin. Rev., lxxi. 179.

"He retired, after more than twenty years of supreme power, with a temper not soured, with a heart not hardened, with simple tastes, with frank manners, and with a capacity for friendship. No stain of treachery, of ingratitude, or of cruelty rests on his memory."—LORD MACAULAY: Edin. Rev., lviii. 242.

"The fact of a man with an estate of about 2000*l.* a year at first, and which never rose to much above 4000*l.*, having lived extravagantly, and amassed above 200,000*l.*, is not at all explained by Mr. Coxe; and it is mainly on this expensive living and accumulation of fortune that the suspicions which hang over his memory rest."—LORD BROUGHAM: States. Time of Geo. III., ed. 1855, i. 312, n.

But hear something on the other side:

"His enemies pay him the compliment of saying, 'They do believe now that he did not plunder the public, as he was accused (as they accused him) of doing, he having died in such circumstances.' . . . It is certain he is dead very poor: his debts, with his legacies, which are trifling, amount to fifty thousand pounds."—Horace Walpole to Sir H. Mann, April 15, 1745: Letters, ed. 1861, i. 349.

"He was born to 2500*l.* a year, left a nominal estate of 8000*l.*, and died 50,000*l.* in debt."—To Rev. W. Mason, April 18, 1777: Letters, ut supra, vi. 430.

"My father's whole collection, [of pictures,] of which alone he had preserved the prices, cost but 40,000*l.*, and after his death there were three sales of pictures, among which were all the long-lengths of Vandeyke but three."—To Rev. W. Cole, July 12, 1779: Letters, ut supra, vii. 227.

The remainder of the collection was, in 1779, sold to the Emperor of Russia for £40,555. So there was a great profit on the pictures. Horace describes his late father—or, to be perfectly safe, I will say the late premier—in terms which provoke a smile:

"To conform myself to the views of the excellent man, the glory of human nature, who made us all what we are, has been constantly one of the principal objects of my whole life. . . . My father is ever before my eyes,—not to attempt to imitate him, for I have none of his matchless wisdom, or unswerving virtue, or heroic firmness; but sixty-two years have taught me to gaze on him with ten thousand times the reverence that—I speak it with deep shame—I felt for him at twenty-two, when he stood before me."—To the Earl of Orford, Oct. 5, 1778, and To Sir H. Mann, Aug. 19, 1779: Letters, ut supra, vii. 132, 243. See, also, 483, viii. 531, ix. 486.

"After much unjust abuse heaped upon him, there seems now to be a great disposition to bestow upon him unqualified praise. He was probably the most dexterous party-leader we have ever had,—equally skilled to win royal favour, to govern the House of Commons, and to influence, or be influenced by, public opinion."—LORD CAMPBELL: Lives of the Lord Chancellors: Lord Hardwicke, ch. cxxxiv., n. (q. v.)

"But certainly the most remarkable example of the evils produced by popular interference with the foreign policy of the State is afforded by the Spanish armament at the close, and which occasioned the close, of Sir Robert Walpole's glorious, because peaceful, administration; and this, as already remarked, is also the most glaring instance upon record of the mischiefs produced by party. The public voice was raised by the incentives of faction to clamour for war, or at least to complain of alleged maltreatment experienced by smugglers in the Spanish Settlements, marauding under the English flag. Walpole was driven from power and succeeded by his adversaries, who afterwards declared privately, as Mr. Burke has recorded, that their only motive for raising the outcry against keeping the peace was the hopelessness of being enabled by any other means to overthrow his long-continued ministry."—LORD BROUGHAM: Hist. and Polit. Dissert., ed. 1857, 95.

"He cared for letters no more than his master did; he judged human nature so meanly that one is ashamed to have to own that he was right, and that men could be corrupted by means so base. But with his hireling House of Commons he defended liberty for us: with his incredulity he kept Church-craft down. There were parsons at Oxford as double-dealing and dangerous as any priests out of Rome; and he routed them both. He gave Englishmen no conquests, but he gave them peace, and ease, and freedom; the three per cents nearly at par, and wheat at five and six and twenty shillings a quarter."—THACKERAY: George the Second.

Walsingham, or Walsinghamus, Thomas, a monk of the Benedictine abbey of St. Alban's, ("and very probably regius professor of history in that monastery about the year 1440." Bishop Nicolson), was the author of two valuable historical works: 1. Historia Brevis, ab Edwardo Primo ad Henricum Quintum, Lon., 1574, fol. 2. Ypodigma Neustrie vel Normannie, ab Irruptione Normannorum usque ad Annum sextum Regni Henrici Quinti, 1574, fol. These (Nos. 1 and 2) are two of the three portions, (the third is Ælfredi Regis Res Gestæ), each pagged separately, of a volume edited and pub. by Archbishop Parker. See Dibdin's Typ. Antiq., and his Lib. Comp. Both are also contained in Camden's Anglica, Normannica, Hibernica, Cambrica, & Veteribus Scripta, Franc., 1603, fol.

"His short history begins at the conclusion of Henry III.'s reign, where Matthew Paris ended his; and he might well seem to be Paris's continuator, were his language answerable to his matter. The account he gives is well enough, and we are indebted to him for many things not taken notice of by any other writer of those times. Indeed, his reign of King Edward II. is wholly borrowed from Sir Thomas de la More. His Ypodigma Neustrie, as he calls it, has a more particular regard to the affairs of Normandy."—BR. Walton, Brian, D.D., b. at Cleveland, North Riding of Yorkshire, 1600, was educated at Magdalene College and Peter-House, Cambridge, and subsequently taught school and served as a curate in Suffolk and London; became successively Rector of St. Martins Orgar, London, of Sandon, Essex, and St. Giles-in-the-Fields, London. He was also chaplain to Charles I. Having espoused the side of the clergy in the London tithe dispute, (see BREWSTER, SAMUEL, and Abstract of Dr. Walton's Treatise on the Payment of Tithes and Oblations in London, Lon., 1641, 1662, 4to,) he became obnoxious to the Puritans, who sequestered his livings and forced him to fly to Oxford,—a fortunate event, as he thus gained leisure for the preparation of the great work with which his name will ever be honourably connected. Soon after the Restoration he was appointed Chaplain to Charles II., and, Dec. 2, 1660, consecrated Bishop of Chester. He was installed Sept. 11, 1661, and d. in London, Nov. 29 of the same year. His publications which follow must accompany each other. 1. Introductio ad Lectionem Linguarum Orientalium Hebraicæ, Chaldaicæ, Samaritanæ, Syriacæ, Arabicæ, Persicæ, Ethiopicæ, Armenicæ, Copticæ, Lon., 1654, 12mo or 18mo; 1655, 12mo; Editio secunda priori emendatior, 1655, 12mo; 1815, fol.: 100 copies, of which 97 were destroyed by fire, March, 1822. This was the harbinger of No. 2. See No. 3.

"This little tract is really well written, and must have been very useful at the time it was published."—DR. ADAM CLARKE: Bibl. Dict., ii. 11.

See, also, Bibl. Sussex, vol. i., Part 2, 74. 2. Biblia Sacra Polyglotta, complectentia Textus Originales, Hebraicum cum Pentateucho Samaritano, Chaldaicum, Græcum, Versionumque antiquarum Samaritanæ, Græcæ LXXII Interpretum Chaldaicæ, Syriacæ, Arabicæ, Ethiopicæ, Persicæ, Vulgatæ Latine, quicquid comparari poterat; Cum Textum et Versionum Orientalium Translationibus Latinis, &c.: Cum Apparatu, Appendicibus, Tabulis, variis Lectionibus, Annotationibus Indicibus, &c.: Editit Brianus Walton, S.T.D., Londini, imprimebat Thomas Roycroft, 1657, 6 vols. fol.; 12 copies (all with the royal preface) on l. p., r. fol.

"In many of the copies the lines of the preface which mention the Protector are cancelled, and Charles II. is introduced in his place; hence the original are called Republican copies, the latter Royal copies. In some copies are found a dedication to Charles II. (reprinted 1811, fol.) and an Advertisement to the Subscribers, &c. In most copies, over the fourth and fifth answers in Explicatio Idiotismorum, in the Apparatus Criticus, a paper, containing other fourth or fifth answers, is pasted. Dr. Walton received more or less assistance from Archbishop Usher, Drs. Edmund Castell, Thomas Hyde, Edward Pocock and Lightfoot, and Messrs. Alexander Huisi, Samuel Clarke, Louis de Dieu, John Selden, Thomas Greaves, Abr. Whelock, Herbert Thorndike, Bruno Ryves, Dudley Loftus, Thomas Pierce, &c. The work is not so handsome as either of the three preceding Polyglotts, (the Complutensian, the Antwerp, the Parisian), but is more useful than these. Nine languages are used in it, though no one book of the Bible is printed in so many. In the New Testament the four Gospels are in six languages; the other books, in five; those of Judith and the Maccabees, in three.

"All the preceding Polyglotts were eclipsed in use and excellence, if not in splendour and size, by that which is called the English and London Polyglot."—CARZOVIVUS.

"Walton's Polyglot is the most complete biblical apparatus in any language."—Williams's Chris. Preacher, 5th ed., 1843, 268.

"This Polyglot is of the utmost importance to a critic, not only on account of the extracts which it contains from a variety of important MS., but particularly on account of the Oriental versions, from which he must collect various readings to the New Testament."—Bishop Martin's trans. of Introduct. to the New Test. by Michaelis.

The excellent John Owen (p. 1472, supra) was not one of those who considered Walton's Polyglot a valuable addition to Christian literature: he thought that the latter had greatly exaggerated the number of various readings, and feared that his admissions and critical principles would lead to popery or infidelity. These views he was rash enough to give to the world in A Vindication of the Purity and Integrity of the Hebrew and Greek Texts of the Old and New Testaments, in some Considerations on the Prolegomena and Appendix to the Late Biblia Polyglotta: published in his treatise of the Divine Original, &c. of the Scripture, &c., Oxf., 1658, 8vo or 18mo; 1659, 8vo, 12mo, or 18mo; also in Owen's Collective Works. This elicited from Walton—4. The Considerator Considered, or a Brief View of Certain Considerations upon the Biblia Polyglotta, the Prolegomena and Appendix thereof, Lon., 1659, 8vo, 12mo, or 18mo; 1660, sm. 8vo; republ. in Todd's Memoirs of Walton. Walton's vindication was complete. See Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon., iv. 106, and Fasti, ii. 85; Thomson's Life of Owen; Chalmers's Institutes of Theology, i. 287: On Scripture Criticism. We have already indicated some proper companions for the Polyglot and the other works above named: see BEVERIDGE, WILLIAM; CASTELL, EDMUND; POOL, or POOLE, MATTHEW, after No. 7. Add, also, Paraphrasis Chaldaica in Librum Priorem et Posterioem Chronicorum; Auctore Rabbi Josepho, Rectore Academiæ in Syria: cum Versione Latine Davide Wilkins, Cantab., 1715, 4to; Amst., 1725, 4to. The MS. from which this was printed was written in 1477. The Targum is correctly printed, and the Latin version is said to be good. Proposals for new editions of Polyglott Bibles were issued by Rev. Josiah Pratt, Oxf., 1797, 4to, (4to Bible,) and Lon., 1799, 8vo, (8vo Bible,) and by Rev. Dr. Adam Clarke, 1810, fol., (see Class. Jour., iv. 493-497, Bibl. Sussex., 66-68); but these projects came to naught. Dr. E. Williams also contemplated a Britannio Polyglott Bible: see Williams's Christian Preacher, 5th ed., 1843, 270. New editions of Walton's Polyglott and Castell's Lexicon, (now sold together for £30 to £40,) brought up to the present stage of Biblical learning, are much needed.

The Memoirs of Walton have been already referred to: see TODD, HENRY JOHN, No. 13. See, also, Biog. Brit.; Lloyd's Memoirs; Bliss's *Wood's Athen. "Here awaiteth the sound of the last trump Brian Walton, Lord Bishop of Chester. Reader, look for no farther epitaph on him whose very name was epitaph enough. Nevertheless, if thou lookest for a larger and louder one, consult the vocal oracles of his fame, and not of this dumb marble. . . . So that the Old and New Testament may well be his monument, which he erected with no small expense of his own. Therefore he little needs the pageantry of pompous titles emblazoned, or displayed in heralds' books, whose name is written in the book of life."—From the inscription on his monument in St. Paul's Cathedral, English translation in Bliss's Wood's Fasti, ii. 84, 85.

Walton, Izaak, the "Father of Angling," b. at Stafford, August 9, 1593, after acquiring moderate competency as a London sempster or linendraper, retired from business in 1643, and, after enjoying for forty years afterwards the society of his books, his angle, his friends,—some of them among the most famous Englishmen of their time,—d. at Winchester, at the house of his son-in-law, Dr. William Hawkins, Prebendary of Winchester Cathedral, Dec. 15, 1683, in his 91st year. He was twice married: first, in 1626, to Rachel Floud, a descendant of Archbishop Cramer, who d. 1640; secondly, about 1647, to Anne Ken, half-sister of Bishop Ken, who d. 1662. Walton acquired merited honours as the historiographer and eulogist of angling and as a biographer; and it is safe to predict for his name in both capacities a literary immortality.

EDITIONS OF THE COMPLETE ANGLER; OR, THE CONTEMPORATIVE MAN'S RECREATION.

The figures do not indicate the numbers of the editions, unless the latter be stated.

I. 1st ed., Lon., 1653, 16mo. pub. at 1s. 6d. Utterson, in 1852, £11 15s.; Pickering, £11 11s.; G. Daniel, in 1864, with MS. notes by Wm. White, of Crickhowell, £27 10s. XXXVII. A. Murray & Son's Reprints of edit. of 1653, 1869, cr. 8vo, 1s.

I must give a few opinions on this charming pastoral: "Whether we consider the elegant simplicity of the style, the ease and unaffected humour of the dialogue, the lovely scenes which it delineates, the enchanting pastoral poetry which it contains, or the fine morality it so sweetly inculcates, it has hardly its fellow among any of the modern languages."—SIR JOHN HAWKINS.

"Let me take this opportunity of recommending the amiable and venerable Isaac Walton's Complete Angler; a work the most singular of its kind, breathing the very spirit of contentment, of quiet, and of unaffected philanthropy, and interspersed with some beautiful relics of poetry, old songs, and ballads."—REV. W. L. BOWLES: Bowles's Pope, i. 135.

"Indeed, the Complete Angler, whether considered as a treatise on the art of angling, or a beautiful pastoral, abounding in exquisite descriptions of rural scenery, in sentiments of the purest morality, and in unaffected love of the Creator and his works, has long been ranked among the most popular compositions in our language."—SIR N. HARRIS NICOLAS.

"Among all your quaint readings, did you ever light upon 'Walton's Complete Angler'? I asked you the question once before: it breathes the very spirit of innocence, purity, and simplicity of heart: there are many choice old verses interspersed in it: it would Christianize every discordant angry passion. Pray make yourself acquainted with it."—Charles Lamb to Coleridge, Oct. 28, 1796: Talfourd's Works of Lamb, ed. 1867, 13.

"Peter Garrick, the elder brother of David. I think he was an attorney, but he seemed to lead an independent life, and talked all about fishing. Dr. Johnson advised him to read Walton's Angler, repeating some verses from it."—Piozzi MS., in Croker's Boswell's Johnson, ed. 1848, 415, n.

"Izaak Walton's Complete Angler, which, from the bare title, might be thought only a sporting book, but will be recognized by every student of English literature as one of the most precious gems in the language."—DR. G. W. BETHUNE: Advert. to the American Edition.

"Certainly it was not the least among the many excellencies of Izaak Walton's charming book that he helped to render popular so many pure and beautiful lyrics."—MISS MIFFORD: Lit. Recollec., ch. xv.

"Walton's Complete Angler, published in 1653, seems by the title a strange choice out of all the books of half a century; yet its simplicity, its sweetness, its natural grace, and happy intermixture of graver strains with the precepts of angling, have rendered this book deservedly popular, and a model which one of the most famous among our late philosophers, and a successful disciple of Isaac Walton in his favourite art, [Sir Humphry Davy,] has condescended [in his Salmonia] to imitate."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, 4th ed., 1854, iii. 360.

See, also, Blakey's Lit. of Angling, 1856, 120, 136, 191, 331; Walton and Cotton's Club Rules and Regulations, privately printed, 1821, 4to.—published Pickering, 1840, 8vo: one copy on vellum, Pickering, Part 2, £2 10s.; Waltonian Chronicle, 1834, 12mo; A Journey to Beresford Hall, in Derbyshire, the Seat of Charles Cotton, Esq., &c., by W. Isaac Walton, a Drama, (still in MS.,) priced by Pickering £2 12s. 6d., by Charles Dance, was performed at the Royal Olympic in London in 1839: see Specimens in Blakey's Lit. of Angling, 136. At the end of Blakey's volume, pp. 293-335, will be found A Bibliographical Catalogue of Books on Angling, by J. Russell Smith. This is based on the Catalogue of Sir Henry Ellis, published in the British Bibliographer in 1811, Pickering's Bibliotheca Piscatoria, 1836, 12mo, and the Waltonian Library appended to Dr. Bethune's edition of the Complete Angler, 1847, pp. 151-196. I add the titles of some books published within the last few years:

I. The Chronicle of "The Compleat Angler" of Izaak Walton and Charles Cotton: Being a Bibliographical Record of its Various Phases and Mutations, Editions, Illustrations, &c. &c., by Thomas Westwood, 1864, sm. 4to, 5s. Commended by Lon. Reader, Aug. 13, 1864, ii. 196.

II. Tweed and Don; or, Recollections and Reflections of an Angler for the Last Fifty Years, by James Locke, Esq., 1860, cr. 8vo.

"Written in a true Waltonian spirit. . . A pleasing and instructive volume."—Lon. Times, Oct. 17, 1860.

III. The American Angler's Book, &c., by Thad. Norris, Phila., 1864, sm. 4to. See No. VII., infra.

IV. Index to the Original and Inserted Illustrations contained in "The Complete Angler," (Walton and Cotton:) Pickering, Publisher. Five Volumes, with 1026 Illustrations, comprising Portraits, Views, Zoological Plates, Original Drawings, Oil Paintings, Pen-and-Ink Sketches, Coloured Engravings, &c. &c., N. York: Privately Printed, 1866, 4to: 50 copies.

V. A Bibliographical Catalogue of the Waltonian Library belonging to the Estate of Robert W. Coleman, deceased, late of Cornwall, Lebanon County, Pennsylvania, N. York; printed for private circulation, 1866, r. 8vo, pp. 149. Worth in 1870 about $3.

"The collection of this Waltonian Library was the life-long labour of the late Rev. G. W. Bethune, deceased, from whose estate it was purchased by Mr. Coleman, who has added somewhat to it, and who had intended that it should become a complete Waltonian Library. This catalogue was prepared during Mr. Coleman's lifetime, and seventy-five copies only have been printed in fulfilment of his cherished intention."

VI. A Book on Angling, with Plates, &c., Lon., Mar. 1867, p. 8vo, 15s.; 2d ed., Sept. 1867, p. 8vo.

VII. American Fish Culture, by Thad. Norris, Phila., 1868. See No. III., supra; ROOSEVELT, ROBERT B., Nos. 1, 2; VENABLES, ROBERT.

I conclude this division of my subject with a few lines which I think will not displease my "Waltonian" readers:

"I have been a great follower of fishing myself, and in its cheerful solitude have passed some of the happiest hours of a sufficiently happy life."—Foley's Natural Theology.

EDITIONS OF WALTON'S LIVES.

Some opinions on Walton's Lives will probably be expected:

"Isaac Walton, adorned with a guileless simplicity of manners, claims from every good man the tribute of applause. It was his ambition to commend to the reverence of posterity the merits of those excellent persons, whose comprehensive learning and exalted piety will ever endear them in our memories."—DR. ZOUCH.

"These Lives, in the estimation of an eminent prelate, 'not only do ample justice to individual piety and learning, but throw a mild and cheerful light upon the manners of an interesting age, as well as upon the venerable features of our mother-church. . . . Dr. Zouch's ample notes unite rich instruction and very agreeable entertainment.'"—BISHOP JEAUX.

"To swell the lists of eulogists of these delightful pieces of biography . . . were an idle and perhaps unprofitable task. . . . Dr. Zouch (as his Life of Sir Philip Sidney, 1808, in 4to, too palpably testifies) was not a fit editor of Walton."—DR. DIBBIN: Lib. Comp., ed. 1825, 528, n.

"He [Dr. Johnson] talked of 'Isaac Walton's Lives,' which was one of his most favourite books. Dr. Donne's Life he said was the most perfect of them."—BOSWELL: Life of Johnson, Croker's ed., 1848, 452. See, also, Index.

"The Tragedy of Othello, Plato's records of the last four scenes of the career of Socrates, and Isaac Walton's Life of George Herbert are the most pathetic of human compositions."—WM. WORDSWORTH: Memoirs by C. Wordsworth.

"Biography, considered as an art, has been destroyed by the greatest of all biographers, James Boswell. His success must be forgotten before Plutarch or Isaac Walton will find either rivals or imitators."—SIR J. STEPHEN: Edin. Rev., lxvii. 180.

Mr. Hallam, (Lit. Hist. of Europe, 4th ed., 1854, ii. 25, n.,) questioning some stories in the Life of Hooker, remarks that Walton "seems to have been a man always too credulous of anecdote." See, also, Blackw. Mag., xlv. 309, 312, xlviii. 201; Amer. Mon. Rev., iii. 30.

"There are no colours in the fairest sky
So fair as these. The feather whence the pen
Was shaped that traced the lives of these good men,
Dropped from an angel's wing. With moistened eye
We read of faith and purest charity
In statesman, priest, and humble citizen.
O! could we copy their mild virtues, then
What joy to live, what blessedness to die!
Methinks their very names shine still and bright
Apart—like glow-worms in the woods of spring,
Or lonely tapers shooting far a light
That guides and cheers—or seen, like stars on high,
Satellites burning in a lucid ring
Around meek Walton's heavenly memory."

WORDSWORTH.

Walton was also the author of several sets of verses prefixed to volumes published by his contemporaries, and of some other minor literary performances: see the Life of Izaak Walton, including Notices of his Contemporaries, by Thomas Zouch, D.D., 1823, (some 1824,) fp. 8vo, l. p., 4to, 1826, 12mo; and Works by, and ascribed to, Isaac Walton, in Bethune's ed. of The Complete Angler, 1847, &c., 199–203. See, also, CHALKHILL, JOHN, (repub. by S. W. Singer, Chiswick, 1820, 12mo,) proved by Sir N. H. Nicolas to have been a relation of Walton's second wife, (a copy of Thealma and Clearchus is priced in Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 120, £8 8s.;) SKEFFINGTON, SIR JOHN. "Happy Old Man! whose worth all mankind knows
Except thyself,—who charitably shows
The ready way to virtue and to praise,
The way to many long and happy days."

THOMAS FLATMAN, died 1672.

"Not many English authors have possessed a more attractive or more strictly idiomatic style, not Walton; but Walton had no classical learning, and his orthography hogre for haut goût (Complete Angler, edition of 1653, p. 160) shows that he knew as little of French."—G. P. MARSH: Lects. on the Eng. Lang., 1860, Lect. IV.

I am pleased to be able to conclude this article by the announcement that Walton's townsmen of the present generation (I write in 1870) propose to pay a long-neglected debt of their predecessors, by erecting in Stafford a memorial to one who did so much to commemorate the virtues and accomplishments of his own contemporaries.

Warburton, Eliot Bartholomew George, b. near Tullamore, Ireland, 1810, and educated at Queen's College and Trinity College, Cambridge; was called to the Irish Bar, but soon abandoned the law for the oversight of his Irish estates and the pleasures of society, foreign travel, and literature. He was lost in the Amazon Royal Mail steam-packet, destroyed by fire on the passage to the West Indies, Jan. 4, 1852. 1. Warburton, William, D.D., b. December 24, 1698, at Newark; left school (he was never at college) in 1715; served as an attorney's clerk until April, 1719; was admitted to one of the courts at Westminster, and for about four years practised as an attorney at Newark; received deacon's orders, 1723; became Vicar of Gryesly, 1726; Rector of Burnt or Brant Broughton, near Newark, 1728; Chaplain to the Prince of Wales, 1738; Preacher to Lincoln's Inn, 1746; Prebendary of Gloucester, 1753; Chaplain-in-Ordinary to George II., 1754; Prebendary of Durham, 1755; Dean of Bristol, 1757; Bishop of Gloucester, 1759; d. at Gloucester, June 11, 1779.

When he first came to London (in 1726) he became intimate with Theobald, Concanan, and other antagonists of Pope, and cast in his lot with them; but a timely defence (in seven Letters in The Works of the Learned, 1739–40) of The Essay on Man gained him the friendship of the poet, an introduction to Prior Park, and eventually the hand and fortune of Miss Gertrude Tucker, niece to Ralph Allen, the proprietor of that splendid estate. His marriage to Miss Tucker occurred in September, 1745; she inherited her uncle's property on his death, in 1764; in 1781 married the bishop's former chaplain, the Rev. John Stafford Smith, (who thus became owner of Prior Park;) and in 1788 defrayed the expenses of Bishop Hurd's edition of her first husband's Works in 7 vols. 4to.

We have already so often had occasion to notice the literary friendships and quarrels of this doughty polemic, that a reference to a number of preceding articles (ut infra) will save the repetition of many statements which otherwise would naturally be expected in the present sketch. Among Warburton's publications are the following. 1. Miscellaneous Translations, in Prose and Verse, from Roman Poets, Orators, and Historians, Lon., 1723, (some 1724,) 12mo. Anon., and suppressed, but in Tracts by Warburton and a Warburtonian.

"This was Dr. Warburton's first Publication, is very scarce, and is bought up, by his order, as often as it appears in any public Catalogue."—MS. note by George Stevens in his copy. See Bibl. Patritiana, 227.

2. Parrials and Philosophical Enquiry into the Causes of Prodiges and Miracles, as related by Historians, 1727, 12mo. Anon., and suppressed, but in Tracts by Warburton and a Warburtonian.

3. The Alliance between Church and State; or, The Necessity and Equity of an Established Religion and a Test Law demonstrated from the Essence and End of Civil Society, upon the Fundamental Principles of the Law of Nature and Nations, 1736, 8vo: anon.; 2d ed., 1741, 8vo; 3d ed., 1748, 8vo; 4th ed., 1766, 8vo.

"His work is one of the finest specimens that are to be found, perhaps, in any language, of scientific reasoning applied to a political subject."—BISHOP HORSLEY: Review of the Case of the Protestant Dissenters, 1786.

"Of the minor works of Warburton, perhaps the most useful, at this time unquestionably the most important and interesting, is 'The Alliance between Church and State.' . . . This acute and comprehensive work."—REV. T. D. WHITAKER: Lon. Quar. Rev., vii. 402.

"His once famous book on 'The Alliance between Church and State,' in which all the presumption and ambition of his nature was first made manifest."—LORD JEFFREY: Edin. Rev., iii. 345.

Mr. Gladstone (The State in its Relations with the Church, 1838, 8vo) remarks that the propositions of this "work generally are to be received with qualification;" and he coincides with Bolingbroke in the opinion that Warburton's whole theory rests on a fiction. (See review of Gladstone's Church and State in Lord Macaulay's Essays.) See, also, Lon. Mon. Rev., xxiv. 89; 1 Co. Lit., Hargrave's note, L. 2, c. 3, sect. 96.

4. The Divine Legation of Moses Demonstrated, on the Principles of a Religious Deist, from the Omission of the Doctrine of a Future State of Rewards and Punishments in the Jewish Dispensation: in Six Books: Books I., II., III., in 1 vol. 8vo, Jan. 1737–8; 2d ed., Nov. 1738, 8vo; 3d ed., 1742, 8vo; 4th ed., 1755, 2 vols. 8vo, (reviewed in Lon. Mon. Rev., xiii. 294;) 5th ed., 1766, 2 vols. 8vo, (reviewed in Lon. Mon. Rev., xxxv. 226.) Books IV., V., VI., in 1 vol. 8vo, 1741; 2d ed., 1742, 8vo; 3d ed., 1758, 2 vols. 8vo, (reviewed in Lon. Mon. Rev., xix. 321, 417; see, also, 436;) 4th ed., 1765, 3 vols. 8vo, (reviewed in Lon. Mon. Rev., xxxiii. 127, 169.)

Books VII. and VIII. never appeared. Book IX. was first published in Warburton's Works, 1788, 7 vols. 4to, and republished in the Supplemental volume to his Works, 1788, 8vo, (which contains, also, Three Sermons, Directions for the Study of Theology, and Remarks on Neal's History of the Puritans: see NEAL, DANIEL,) and in the new edition of his Works, 1811, 12 vols. 8vo.

The tenth, being the last and best, edition of the Divine Legation, to which is prefixed a Discourse by way of General Preface, containing some Account of the Life, Writings, and Character of the Author, by Richard Hurd, D.D., Lord-Bishop of Worcester, carefully revised, with General Index, &c., by James Nicholls, was published 1845, (some 1846), 3 vols. 8vo, £1 7s. A French translation of book iv., sect. ii.-vi.,—Essai sur les Hiéroglyphiques des Egyptiens, &c.,—was published at Paris, 1744, 2 vols. 12mo.

Perhaps no work in English Theology has attracted more attention among the learned than The Divine Legation of Moses. In describing its design and character I shall adduce the language of some of Warburton's best reviewers:

"We are now to consider this mighty man more distinctly in his works. Of these the most illustrious, and alone sufficient to confer immortality on any name, is The Divine Legation of Moses, a work so original in its conception, so vigorous in its execution, enlivened by so many sallies of an exuberant imagination, and diversified by so many entertaining episodes and excursions, that, after having struggled through the first impediments of prejudice and detraction, it took its place at the head,—we do not say of English theology only,—but almost of English literature.

"To the composition of this prodigious performance Hooker and Stillingfleet could have contributed the erudition, Chillingworth and Locke the acuteness, Taylor an imagination even more wild and copious, Swift, and perhaps Echard, the sarcastic vein of wit; but what power of understanding, excepting that of Warburton, could first have amassed all these materials and then compacted them into a bulky and elaborate work so consistent and harmonious? The principle of the work was no less bold and original than the execution. That the doctrine of a future state of reward and punishment was omitted in the books of Moses, had been insolently argued by infidels against the truth of his mission, while divines were feebly occupied in seeking what was certainly not to be found there otherwise than by inference and implication. But Warburton, with an intrepidity unheard of before, threw open the gates of his camp, admitted the host of the enemy within his works and beat them on a ground which was now become his and theirs. In short, he admitted the proposition in its fullest extent, and proceeded to demonstrate that from that very omission, which, in all instruments of legislation merely human, had been industriously avoided, that a system which could dispense with a doctrine the very bond and cement of human society must have come from God, and that the people to whom it was given must have been placed under his immediate superintendence. . . . Warburton's Divine Legation is one of the few theological, and still fewer controversial, works, which scholars perfectly indifferent to such subjects will ever read with delight."—REV. T. D. WHITTAKER, D.D.: Lon. Quar. Rev., vii, 397, 398, 399.

This review has been highly commended:

"So masterly a piece of criticism has rarely surprised the public in the leaves of a periodical publication."—I. D'ISRAELI: Quarrels of Authors: Warburton.

"An article of uncommon ability."—Chalmers's Biog. Dict., xxxi. 106, n.

I continue my quotations respecting The Divine Legation:

"A work in all views of the most transcendent merit, whether we consider the invention or the execution. A plain, simple argument, yet perfectly new, proving the divinity of the Mosaic law, and laying a sure foundation for the support of Christianity there, is drawn out to great length by a chain of reasoning so elegantly connected that the reader is carried along with it with ease and pleasure; while the matter presented to him is so striking for its own importance, so embellished by a lively fancy, and illustrated from all quarters by exquisite learning and the most ingenious disquisition, that in the whole compass of modern or ancient theology there is nothing equal or similar to this extraordinary performance."—BISHOP HURD: Discourse, &c. on Warburton, 1794, 4to.

"So many beautiful thoughts, such an ingenious illustration of them, such a clear connection, such a deduction of notions, and so much learning upon so useful a subject, all expressed in proper and fine language, cannot but give an intelligent reader the greatest satisfaction."—BISHOP FRANCIS HARE.

"I am well informed that Warburton said of Johnson, 'I admire him, but I cannot bear his style,' and that Johnson, being told of this, said, 'That is exactly my case as to him.' The manner in which he expressed his admiration of Warburton's genius and of the fertility of his materials was, 'The table is always full, sir. He brings things from the north and the south, and from every quarter. In his 'Divine Legation' you are always entertained. He carries you round and round, without carrying you forward to the point; but then you have no wish to be carried forward.' He said to the Rev. Mr. Strahan, 'Warburton is perhaps the last man who has written with a mind full of reading and reflection.'"—BOSWELL: Life of Dr. Johnson, ch. lxxi.

"On the learned Warburton, then in the outset of his fame, Bentley remarked [on the perusal of vol. i. of The Divine Legation, it is said] that there seemed to be in him a voracious appetite for knowledge, but he doubted if there was a good digestion."—RICHARD CUMBERLAND: Memoirs, 1806. See MILTON, JOHN, (p. 1307.)

"Warburton's Divine Legation delighted me more than any book I had yet [at 15] read. . . . The luminous theory of hieroglyphics, as a stage in the progress of society between picture-writing and alphabetic character, is perhaps the only addition made to the stock of knowledge in this extraordinary work; but the uncertain and probably false suppositions about the pantheism of the ancient philosophers and the object of the mysteries (in reality, perhaps, somewhat like the freemasonry of our own times) are well adapted to rouse and exercise the adventurous genius of youth."—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH: Life, ch. i.

"Warburton, with all his boldness and ingenuity, was not profoundly read in the Greek philosophers: he caught at single sentences which favoured his own views, rather than fully represented the spirit and opinions of his authors. The great proof of the discernment of Warburton was his dim second-sight of the modern discoveries in hieroglyphics," &c.—H. H. MILMAN, D.D.: Life of Gibbon, 1839, 8vo, 223.

See, also, his Hist. of Lat. Chris., vol. viii. b. xiv. ch. viii.

"The Divine Legation of Moses is a monument, already crumbling into dust, of the vigour and the weakness of the human mind. If Warburton's new argument proved any thing, it would be a demonstration against the legislator who left his people without the knowledge of a future state. But some episodes of the work, on the Greek philosophy, the hieroglyphics of Egypt, &c., are entitled to the praise of learning, imagination, and discernment."—EDWARD GIBBON: Miscell. Works, ed. 1837, 88, n.

It will be remembered that Gibbon wrote his Critical Observations on the Design of the Sixth Book of the Æneid (repub. in his Miscellaneous Works, ed. 1837, 670-692) to confute a hypothesis of Warburton's in the Divine Legation: see GIBBON, EDWARD, (p. 662;) Field's Memoirs of Dr. Parr, i. 263.

"His 'Divine Legation of Moses,'—the most learned, most arrogant, and most absurd work which has been produced in England for a century."—LORD JEFFREY: Edin. Rev., xvii. 346.

"Parts of his system are true, and important, and well supported; but his main principle is a fallacy: unfounded in itself, and incapable of demonstrating the Divine Legation of Moses, were it even true."—Orme's Bibl. Bib., 457.

"To any one who had read the extracts in the last Note, but still more to one who was familiar with the ancient writers from whose works they are taken, it might appear quite impossible that a question should ever be raised upon the general belief of antiquity in a Future State, and the belief of some of the most eminent of the philosophers, at least, in a state of rewards and punishments. Nevertheless, as there is nothing so plain to which the influence of a preconceived opinion and the desire of furthering a favourite hypothesis will not blind men, and as their blindness in such cases bears even a proportion to their learning and ingenuity, it has thus fared with the point in question, and Bishop Warburton has denied that any of the ancients, except Socrates, really believed in a future state of the soul individually and subject to reward or punishment. He took up this argument because it seemed to strengthen his extraordinary reasoning upon the Legation of Moses. It is therefore necessary first to state how his doctrine bears upon that reasoning.

"His reasoning is this. The incultation of a future state of retribution is necessary to the well-being of society. All men, and especially all the wisest nations of antiquity, have agreed in holding such a doctrine necessary to be inculcated. But there is nothing of the kind to be found in the Mosaic dispensation. And here he pauses to observe that these propositions seem too clear to require any proof. Nevertheless, his whole work is consumed in proving them, and the conclusion from the whole, that therefore the Mosaic law is of Divine original, is left for a further work, which never appeared; and yet this is the very position which all, or almost all, who may read the book, and even yield their assent to it, are the most inclined to reject. Indeed, it may well be doubted if this work, learned and acute as it is, and showing the author to be both well read and well fitted for controversy, ever satisfied any one, except, perhaps, Bishop Hurd, or ever can demonstrate any thing so well as it proves the preposterous and perverted ingenuity of an able and industrious man.

"That such was very far from being the author's opinion, we have ample proof. He terms his work 'A Demonstration.' He describes his reasoning 'as very little short of mathematical certainty,' and 'to which nothing but a mere physical possibility of the contrary can be opposed;' and he declares his only difficulty to be in 'telling whether the pleasure of the discovery, or the wonder that it is now to make, be the greater.' Accordingly, in the correspondence between him and his friend Bishop Hurd, the complete success of the 'Demonstration' is always assumed, and the glory of it is made the topic of endless and even mutual gratulation, not without pity and even vituperation of all who can remain dissatisfied, and who are habitually and complacently classed by name with the subjects of Pope's well-known satire.

"The two things which the author always overlooked were the possibility of the human law-giver making an imperfect system, and of sceptics holding the want of the sanction in question to be no argument for the divine origin of the Mosaic law, but rather a proof of its flowing from a human and fallible source. . . . It seems, therefore, not too much to say that the 'Divine Legation' does not more completely fail in proving the grand paradox which forms the main object of the argument, and which has been parodied by Some Jenyns in his most injudicious defence of Christianity, than it does in supporting the minor paradox which is taken up incidentally as to the real opinions of the ancients, and which, it must be admitted, is indeed quite unnecessary to the general argument, and as little damages it by its entire failure as it could help it by the most entire success."—LORD BROUGHAM: Discourse on Natural Theology, Note IX., p. 167, 174, ed. Lon. and Glasg., 1856; and in Paley's Nat. Theol., ed. Lon., 1855, Note IX., 203, 212.

Warburton, who afterwards complained that his work was fallen upon in so outrageous and brutal a manner as had scarcely been pardonable had it been "The Divine Legation of Mahomet," replied to his critics in the two following books: 5. Remarks on several Occasional Reflections, in Answer to Dr. Middleton, Dr. Pococke, Dr. R. Grey, and others; serving to explain and justify divers Passages in the 'Divine Legation,' &c., 1745, 8vo. 6. Part 2, in answer to the Rev. Doctors Stebbing and Sykes, 1746, 8vo. 7. Shakspear Plays, with a Comment and Notes by Pope and Warburton, (the editor,) 1747, 8 vols. 8vo, £2 8s. Originally announced in The Works of the Learned for Jan. 1739-40.

"Such is the felicity of his genius in restoring numberless passages to their integrity, and in explaining others which the author's sublime conceptions or his licentious expression kept out of sight, that this fine edition of Shakspeare must ever be highly valued by men of sense and taste; a spirit congenial to the author breathing throughout, and easily atoning for the little mistakes and inadvertencies discoverable in it."—BISHOP HURD: Discourse, &c. on Warburton.

"Is it possible that the man who wrote this should ever have read The Canons of Criticism? [See EDWARDS, THOMAS.] And, on the other hand, is it to be supposed that he who took so lively an interest in the literary fortunes of his friend should not have read them?"—REV. T. D. WHITAKER: Lon. Quar. Rev., vii. 390.

"He [Hurd] cries up Warburton's preposterous notes on Shakspeare, which would have died of their own folly though Mr. Edwards [in his Canons of Criticism] had not put them to death with the keenest wit in the world. But what signifies any sense when it takes Warburton for a pattern, who, with much greater parts, has not been able to save himself from, or rather has affectively involved himself in, numberless absurdities—who proved Moses's legation by the sixth book of Virgil?—a miracle, (Julian's Earthquake,) by proving it was none? and who explained a recent poet (Pope) by metaphysical notes ten times more obscure than the text?"—Horace Walpole to Rev. Henry Zouch: Letters, ed. 1861, iii. 291. See, also, ii. 166, 257, v. 366.

"This edition, founded on Pope's, is thought to be the worst of all, and was never esteemed. The editor does little more than make his author a stalking-horse for the display of his own learning; though some of his conjectures and illustrations are happy."—Bohn's Lowndes, Part 8, (1863,) 2260: Shakspeare.

Of all the commentators upon Shakspeare, Mr. Douce thinks that Warburton "was surely the worst." "My chief purpose here is to prove the numerous interpositions of Providence in defeating Julian's attempt."—Preface, P. 2.

"The gravest, the least eccentric, the most convincing, of Warburton's works."—REV. T. D. WHITAKER: Lon. Quar. Rev., vii. 404.

"Cannot be read without the impression that no supernatural incident, unrecorded by holy writ, has equal pretensions to credibility, or greater need to be satisfied with its champion."—REV. J. J. BLUNT: Lon. Quar. Rev., xxxviii. 310.

"Of all Warburton's works, The Doctrine of Grace is that which does least honour to his heart, and perhaps, though written with all his native spirit, to his head."—REV. T. D. WHITAKER: Lon. Quar. Rev., vii. 406.

"He [Dr. Johnson] called Warburton's 'Doctrine of Grace' a poor performance, and so, he said, was Wesley's Answer. 'Warburton,' he observed, 'had laid himself very open.'"—BOSWELL: Life of Dr. Johnson, ch. xxxiii.

"That it is possible to have all the powers of Warburton, and be greatly in the dark on the truths of the gospel, is made sufficiently evident by his Treatise on the Doctrine of Grace."—Bickersteth's C. S., 4th ed., 300.

For notices of other literary labours of Warburton, see BOLINGBROKE, HENRY ST. JOHN, VISCOUNT; BURROUGHS, SAMUEL; COCKBURN, MRS. CATHERINE, (the Preface to the Remarks is by Warburton;) CLARENDON, EDWARD HYDE, EARL OF; CONCANEN, MATTHEW; EVANS, ARISE OR RICE, (and TAYLOR, HENRY, an Arian, No. 3;) JARVIS, CHARLES, (the additional sheet to Jarvis's Preface is by Warburton;) POPE, ALEXANDER: II. COLLECTIVE EDITIONS OF POPE'S WORKS, i.: 7. THE DUNCIAD; 8. AN ESSAY ON MAN.

A collective edition of Warburton's Works, edited by Bishop Hurd, was published at the expense of the author's widow (ut supra) in 1788, 7 vols. 4to: 250 copies. In the same year appeared A Supplemental Volume of Bishop Warburton's Works, being a Collection of all the new Pieces contained in the Quarto Edition, 1788, 8vo. To the 7 vols. 4to, 1788, must be added, Discourse by way of General Preface to the Quarto Edition of Bishop Warburton's Works, containing some Account of the Life, Writings, and Character of the Author, (by Bishop Hurd,) 1794, 4to: 250 copies, privately printed. See Nichols's Lit. Anec., v. 639. Add also the two following:

I. Tracts by Warburton and a Warburtonian, [Dr. Hurd,] not admitted into the Collections of their Respective Works, 1789, 8vo: see PARR, SAMUEL, D.D., No. 5.

II. Letters from a Late Eminent Prelate [Warburton] to one of his Friends, [Hurd,] Kidderminster, (1808,) 4to; 2d ed., Lon., 1809, 8vo; 3d ed., 1809, 8vo; N. York, 1809, 8vo. Reviewed in Edin. Rev., xiii. 345, (by Lord Jeffrey, and repub. in his Contrib. to Edin. Rev., 1853, 880;) Lon. Quar. Rev., ii. 401, (by Rev. T. D. Whitaker.) See, also, Lon. Mon. Rev., 1809, iii.; and Lon. Gent. Mag., 1835, i. 18, 354, 355.

A new edition of Warburton's Works, with Hurd's Discourse (1794, 4to) prefixed, was pub. Lon., 1811, 12 vols. 8vo. Contents: Vol. I., Life; Divine Legation of Moses, Books 1, 2, Sect. 3; II., Divine Legation, Book 2, Sect. 4-6; III., Divine Legation, Book 3, Sect. 1-6; IV., Divine Legation, Book 4, Sect. 1-6; V., Divine Legation, Book 5, Sect. 1-6, Book 6, Sect. 1-4; VI., Divine Legation, Book 6, Sect. 5, 6, Book 9, Chap. 1-6; VII., Alliance between Church and State; Postscript and Index; VIII., Julian's Attempt to Rebuild the Temple at Jerusalem; The Doctrine of Grace; IX., X., Sermons; Discourse on the Lord's Supper; Directions for the Study of Theology; XI., Vindication from Webster's Aspersions; Commentary on Pope's Essay on Man; Remarks on Tillard's Book; Remarks on Several Occasional Reflections, Parts 1, 2; XII., Remarks on Several Occasional Reflections, concluded; Letter to the Editor of the Letters on the Spirit of Patriotism; View of Lord Bolingbroke's Philosophy; Remarks on Hume's Natural History of Religion; On Neal's History of the Puritans; Letter concerning Literary Property; Appendix: being Letters between Dr. Middleton and Warburton, and Lowth and Warburton. From the review of this edition (or vols. i.-vi. of it) in Lon. Quar. Rev., vii. 383, by Rev. T. D. Whitaker, we have had occasion more than once to quote. To these 12 vols. should be added—I. The Tracts, 1789, 8vo, and—II. Letters, 1809, 8vo, ut supra; III. Warburton's Letters to the Rt. Hon. Charles York from 1752 to 1770, 1812, 4to, pp. 105; privately printed by Lord Hardwicke; and the following volumes:

IV. A Selection from the Unpublished Papers of the Right Reverend William Warburton, D.D., Late Lord-Bishop of Gloucester, by the Rev. Francis Kilvert, M.A., 1841, 8vo. Reviewed in Lon. Gent. Mag., 1841, i. 339, (see, also, ii. 485;) Lon. Athen., 1841, 219; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1841, 183.

V. Memoirs of the Life and Writings of the Right Rev. Richard Hurd, D.D., Lord-Bishop of Worcester; with a Selection from his Correspondence and other Unpublished Papers, by the Rev. Francis Kilvert, M.A., 1860, 8vo. Reviewed in Lon. Athen., 1860, ii. 158; Lon. Sat. Rev., &c. Gray characterized Hurd as "the last man in England who left off stiff-topped gloves."

VI. The Life of William Warburton, Lord-Bishop of Gloucester from 1760 to 1779; with Remarks on his Works, by the Rev. John Selby Watson, 1863, 8vo. This book seems to have been elicited by the following:

"A good Life of Warburton, embracing the literary history of the period in relation to him and to his immediate contemporaries, is much to be desired."—Notes and Queries, Second Series, vol. ii. 96.

Mr. Watson's volume has been well received:

"Exhaustive treatment is the capital recommendation of this Life. We have here, in one bale, consigned to posterity, all that it can want to know about The Divine Legation, its author, his quarrels and his friendships."—Lon. Reader, 1863, i. 111.

"Mr. Watson's character of his hero is drawn with a firm and not a very tender hand. A question remains whether such a man as he has painted was worth the zeal, labour, patience, and ability which Mr. Watson has expended on the picture."—Lon. Athen., 1863, i. 147. Also reviewed in Edin. Rev., July, 1865, art. i.

In the preparation of a new edition of his Life, it is to be hoped that Mr. Watson will be permitted the use of the Pope and Warburton Correspondence, consisting of about 150 letters, mostly unpublished, acquired in the year 1864 by the British Museum.

We should not omit to state that Warburton, in his lifetime, gave £500 as a foundation for the Warburtonian Lectures on Prophecy: see lists of those that have been published, in *Horne's Bibl. WARBURTON'S LITERARY CHARACTERISTICS.

"He joined to a most athletic strength of body a prodigious memory, and to both a prodigious industry. He had read almost constantly fourteen or fifteen hours a day for twenty-five or thirty years, and had heaped together as much learning as could be crowded into a head. In the course of my acquaintance with him I consulted him once or twice,—not oftener, for I found this mass of learning of as little use to me as to the owner. The man was communicative enough, but nothing was distinct in his mind. How could it be otherwise? He had never spared time to think,—all was employed in reading; his reason had not the merit of common mechanism. When you press a watch or pull a clock, they answer your question with precision; but when you asked this man a question, he overwhelmed you by pouring forth all that the several terms or words of your question recalled to his memory; and if he omitted any thing, it was the very thing to which the sense of the whole question should have led him and confined him. To ask him a question was to wind up a spring in his memory, that rolled on with vast rapidity and confused noise till the force of it was spent; and you went away with all the noise in your ears, stunned and uninformed. I never left him that I was not ready to say to him, 'Dieu vous fasse la grace de devenir moins savant.'"—LORD BO-

LINGBROKE: Essay on the Study of History: Bolingbroke's Works, 1754, 5 vols. 4to, ii. 330.

"He was a man of vigorous faculties, a mind fervid and vehement, supplied by incessant and unlimited inquiry with wonderful extent and variety of knowledge, which yet had not oppressed his imagination nor clouded his perspicacity. To every work he brought a memory full-fraught, together with a fancy fertile of original combinations, and at once exerted the powers of the scholar, the reasoner, and the wit. But his knowledge was too multifarious to be always exact, and his pursuits too eager to be always cautious. His abilities gave him a haughty confidence, which he disclaimed to conceal or modify; and his impatience of opposition disposed him to treat his adversaries with such contemptuous superiority as made his readers commonly his enemies, and excited against the advocate the wishes of some who favoured the cause. He seems to have adopted the Roman emperor's determination, oderint dum metuant; he used no allurements of gentle language, but wished to compel rather than persuade.

"His style is copious without selection, and forcible without neatness; he took the words that presented themselves; his diction is coarse and impure, and his sentences are unmeasured."—DR. JOHNSON: Lives of the Eng. Poets: Pope: Cunningham's ed., 1854, iii. 68. See, also, Index, and Croker's Boswell's Johnson, Index.

"Mr. Warburton is the greatest general critic I ever knew; the most capable of seeing through all the possibilities of things."—POPE: Spence's Anecdotes, by Singer, ed. 1820, fol. 327.

"The learning and abilities of the author [of The Divine Legation] had raised him to a just eminence; but he reigned the dictator and tyrant of the world of literature. The real merit of Warburton was degraded by the pride and presumption with which he pronounced his infallible decrees: in his polemic writings he lashed his antagonists without mercy or moderation; and his servile flatterers, (see the base and malignant Essay on the Delicacy of Friendship), exalting the master-critic far above Aristotle and Longinus, assaulted every modest dissenter who refused to consult the oracle and to adore the idol. In a land of liberty, such despotism must provoke a general opposition; and the zeal of opposition is seldom candid or impartial."—EDWARD GIBBON: Miscell. Works, ed. 1837, 87. See, also, 22, 670.

"With eloquence so vigorous, knowledge so various, and genius so splendid, Warburton might justly have laughed at the censure of his contemporaries upon his want of skill in verbal criticism and his want of practice in Latin composition."—DR. PARR: Bibliotheca Parriana, 645.

"The English language, even in its widest extent, cannot furnish passages more strongly marked either by grandeur in thought, or by felicity in expression, than are to be found in the works of Bishop Warburton."—DR. PARR.

"Warburton's love of paradox is well known. His levity, dogmatism, and surliness have often been exposed. His love of notoriety and of the marvellous was certainly stronger than his attachment to truth. While his talents will always be admired, his character will never be respected."—ORME: Bibl. Bibl., 457.

"The currents of life had drifted Warburton on divinity as his profession, but nature designed him for a satirist; and the propensity was too strong to yield even to the study of the Gospels."—SIR J. STEPHEN: Edin. Rev., lxvii. 507.

"The first name that occurs to us of one who conjoined this original strength with this acquired scholarship is Grotius. Cudworth had both; Chillingworth had both; Brian Walton had both; Samuel Clarke had both; Warburton had pre-eminently both."—DR. THOMAS CHALMERS: Works, iii. 267.

"The most dogmatical and arrogant of disputants."—SIR J. MACKINTOSH: Edin. Rev., xlv. 7, and in his Works, ed. 1854, i. 509.

"A divine of almost unrivalled erudition (Jortin excepted) in his day."—H. H. MILMAN: Hist. of Lat. Chris., vol. viii. b. xv. ch. viii., n.

"Warburton, we think, was the last of our great divines—the last, perhaps, of any profession—who united profound learning with great powers of understanding, and along with vast and varied stores of acquired knowledge possessed energy of mind enough to wield them with ease and activity. The days of the Cudworths and Barrows, the Hookers and Taylors, are gone by. . . . He was not only the last of our reasoning scholars, but the last also, we think, of our powerful polemics. His breed, too, we take it, is extinct; and we are not sorry for it. . . . The truth is, that this extraordinary person was a Giant in literature—with many of the vices of the Gigantic character."—LORD JEFFREY: Edin. Rev., xlii. (Jan. 1808) 343, 344, 345.

The intimacy existing between Pope and Warburton—greatly, as we have seen, to the advancement of the fortunes of the latter—is an interesting chapter of literary history; and we shall doubtless gratify our readers by quoting a letter from the admiring poet to the doughty polemic, after Warburton's return from a visit of nearly a fortnight to Twickenham:

"TWICKENHAM, June 24, 1740.

"It is true that I am a very unpunctual correspondent, though no unpunctual agent or friend; and that, in the commerce of words, I am both poor and lazy. Civility and compliment generally are the goods that letter-writers exchange, which, with honest men, seems a kind of illicit trade, by having been for the most part carried on and carried furthest by designing men. I am therefore reduced to plain inquiries, how my friend does, and what he does? and to repetitions, which I am afraid to tire him with, how much I love him. Your two kind letters gave me real satisfaction, in hearing you were safe and well, and in showing me you took kindly my unaffected endeavours to prove my esteem for you, and delight in your conversation. Indeed, my languid state of health, and frequent deficiency of spirits, together with a number of dissipation, et aliena negotia centum, all conspire to throw a faintness and cool appearance over my conduct to those I best love; which I perpetually feel and grieve at; but, in earnest, no man is more deeply touched with merit in general, or with particular merit towards me, in any one. You ought therefore in both views to hold yourself what you are to me in my opinion and affection; so high in each that I may perhaps seldom attempt to tell it you. The greatest justice and favour too that you can do me is to take it for granted.

"Do not therefore commend my talents, but instruct me by your own. I am not really learned enough to be a judge in works of the nature and depth of yours. But I travel through your book [The Divine Legation, &c.] as through an amazing scene of ancient Egypt or Greece, struck with veneration and wonder, but at every step wanting an instructor to tell me all I wish to know. Such you prove to me in the walks of antiquity; and such you will prove to all mankind; but with this additional character, more than any other searcher into antiquities, that of a genius equal to your pains, and of a taste equal to your learning. I am greatly obliged to you for what you have projected at Cambridge, in relation to my Essay, [a translation of it into Latin prose, suggested by Pope:] but more for the motive which did originally, and does consequently in a manner, animate all your goodness to me, the opinion you entertain of my honest intention in that piece, and your zeal to demonstrate me no irreligious man, [see POPE, ALEXANDER, p. 1632, supra.] I was very sincere with you in what I told you of my own opinion of my own character as a poet, and I think I may conscientiously say, I shall die in it. I have nothing to add, but that I hope sometimes to hear you are well, as you shall certainly now and then hear the best I can tell of myself."—Pope's Works: Roscoe's ed., 1847, viii, 418.

Sir George Anson, Governor of Chelsea Hospital, Aug. 13, 1846, aged 81. 1. An Enquiry into the Foundation and History of the Law of Nations in Europe, from the Time of the Greeks and Romans to the Age of Grotius, Lon., 1795, 2 vols. 8vo; DUBL., 1795, 2 vols. 8vo.

"He who should take it up with the expectation of finding in it authoritative dicta upon any point in question would be disappointed; while the lover of history will be agreeably surprised to find himself wandering, and wandering with profit, through the most flowery paths of the history of the middle ages."—Hon. E. Phipps: Memoirs of Ward, i. 16.

This may remind the reader of Canning's remark that Ward's law-books were as pleasant as novels, and his novels as dull as law-books. Mr. Phipps observes that the Enquiry was favourably noticed by the Annual Register: it was also commended, as "replete with various and extended erudition," by Lon. Mon. Rev., 1796, iii. 381, and (see Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxxvii. 245) is quoted as a text-book both by Martens and Mr. Justice Story.

"In a late publication, from the title of which some attention to dates might have been expected, we are told that 'Hobbes's book De Cive appeared but a little before the treatise of Grotius;' whereas, in point of fact, Hobbes's book did not appear till twenty-two years after it. A few copies were indeed printed at Paris, and privately circulated by Hobbes, as early as 1642; but the book was not published till 1647. (See 'An Inquiry into the Foundation and History of the Law of Nations in Europe,' &c., by Robert Ward, of the Inner Temple, Esq., London, 1795.) This inaccuracy, however, is trifling, when compared with those committed in the same work in stating the distinguishing doctrines of the two systems."—DUGALD STEWART: Dissert. First, Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., i. 90, n.

2. A Treatise of the Relative Rights and Duties of Belligerent and Neutral Powers in Maritime Affairs; in which the Principles of the Armed Neutralities, and the Opinions of Hübner and Schlegel, are fully discussed, Lon., 1801, 8vo, pp. 190. See, also, CROKE, ALEXANDER, LL.D.; No. 3. infra.

"Exhausted all the law and learning applicable to the question."—1 Kent, Com., 128.

3. An Essay on Contraband: being a Continuation of the Treatise of the Relative Rights and Duties, &c., 1801, 8vo, pp. 83. This and No. 2 are noticed, without censure, in Lon. Mon. Rev., 1801, ii. 307. 4. View of the Relative Situations of Mr. Pitt and Mr. Addington previous to and on the Night of Mr. Patten's Motion: by a Member of Parliament, 1804, 8vo; 2d ed., 1804, 8vo. This elicited a Letter to Robert Ward, Esq., M.P., &c., 1804, 8vo. See Lon. Mon. Rev., 1804, i. 328, ii. 219. 5. An Inquiry into the Manner in which the Different Wars of Europe have commenced during the Last Two Centuries, 8vo. Intended as a justification of Pitt's capture of the Spanish treasure-ships, October 5, 1804: see accounts of this sad affair in Lon. Gent. Mag., 1804, 1059, 1066, 1186.

6. Tremaine; or, The Man of Refinement, 1825, 3 vols. p. 8vo. Anon. 1500 copies were sold in six weeks. 3d ed., 1825, 3 vols. p. 8vo; 4th ed., 3 vols. p. 8vo; new ed., 1835, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"No one can read 'Tremaine' without being persuaded that it affords most useful and practical lessons of conduct."—Lon. Quar. Rev.

Earl Spencer and others strove to discover the name of the author, (confidently declared to be the Rt. Hon. Richard Ryder;) but of this the publisher (Henry Colburn) was ignorant. It was reviewed in Westm. Rev., iv. 293; Blackw. Mag., xvii. 518; Lon. Mon. Rev., 1825, ii. 249, and U. S. Lit. Gaz., iii. 121. See, also, Lon. Quar. Rev., xxxvi. 269, lxxxvii. 270; No. 7, infra.

7. De Vere; or, The Man of Independence; by the Author of Tremaine, 1827, 4 vols. p. 8vo; 3d ed., 1827, 3 vols. p. 8vo; red. to 12s., 1841; N. York, 2 vols. 12mo.

"The excellence of De Vere, as of Tremaine, must be sought for in detached delineations,—in sketches that might have been presented in many other forms of composition at least as advantageously as in this. The author wants the power of moulding from discordant materials a harmonious whole. Many of his pages deserve to go down to posterity in the 'Elegant Extracts;' but his books appear to us to have no chance of ever being printed in the 'Novelist's Library.'"—Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxxvi. 270. See, also, lxxxvii. 271.

"The extravagantly overated—the heavy, imbecile, pointless, but still well-written, sensible, and, we may even add, not disagreeable—Tremaine and De Vere."—Blackw. Mag., xvi. 562. See, also, xxiii. 792.

On the other hand, the Lon. Mon. Rev. (1827, ii. 8) thinks that there is "an order of minds... who will look upon this picture, as they did upon Tremaine, in the light of a most precious legacy from an artist of the very highest order;" and the Lon. Lit. Gazette (1827, 193, 209) ventures "to pronounce Tremaine and De Vere to be two most delightful works in the class to which they belong."

"The author of De Vere has shown his unquestionable title to rank among the true historical painters of manners and human nature."—New Month, Mag.

"His admirable De Vere."—Lon. Athen., 1838, 929.

See, also, CANNING, GEORGE.

8. Illustrations of Human Life, Lon., 1837, (some 1838), 3 vols. p. 8vo; 2d ed., 1843, 3 vols. p. 8vo. Commended by Lon. Messenger and Lon. Sun. See, also, Lon. Athen., 1837, 192. A part was repub. as Fielding, or Society, Phila., 1837, 12mo. 9. An Historical Essay on the Real Character and Amount of the Precedent of the Revolution of 1688: in which the Opinions of Mackintosh, Price, Hallam, Mr. Fox, Lord John Russell, Blackstone, Burke, and Locke, the Trial of Lord Russell, and the Merits of Sidney, are Critically Considered, Lon., 1838, 2 vols. 8vo.

"This is a conservative Pamphlet in the disguise of an Historical Essay. The author is apparently one of those unhappy persons whose peace of mind has been disturbed by Reform."—Edin. Rev., lxxvii. 415.

Also commended by Lon. Athen., 1838, 161. See, also, Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxxvii. 274.

10. Pictures of the World at Home and Abroad, 1839, 3 vols. p. 8vo; 2d ed., 1843, 3 vols. p. 8vo. This work consists of three tales, viz.: Sterling, Penruddock, or The High-Minded, and Rheindorf, or The Enthusiast, each in one volume. Noticed in Lon. Athen., 1838, 929, and Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1838, 803. 11. De Clifford; or, The Constant Man, 1841, 4 vols. p. 8vo; Phila., 1841, 3 vols. 12mo.

"De Clifford is a very agreeable and clever novel, and really wonderful as the work of a man of seventy-six."—Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxxvii. 275.

See, also, PATMORE, PETER GEORGE, No. 4. A brief biographical sketch of Mr. Ward was pub. in Lon. Gent. Mag., 1846, ii. 650. See, also, Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1846, 740, (and Bost. Liv. Age, xi. 239); Burke's Gentry of England. In 1850 appeared Memoirs of the Political and Literary Life of Robert Plumer Ward, Esq., &c.; with Selections from his Correspondence, Diaries, and Unpublished Literary Remains, by the Honourable Edmund Phipps, 2 vols. 8vo.

"We congratulate Mr. Phipps on the general discretion, delicacy, and neatness of literary execution which he has brought to his dutiful labour as editor and biographer."—Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxxvii. 276.

"There are a number of particulars brought forward, which throw great light upon some of the most memorable passages of our public affairs from the beginning of the present century."—Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1850, 401. See, also, 420.

Also commended by Blackw. Mag., lxxviii. 216. The Lon. Gent. Mag. (1850, ii. 157) does not think so highly of Mr. Phipps's labours. The work was also reviewed in Lon. Athen., 1850, 653, and Lon. Examiner, 1850. Mr. Phipps remarks,

"The remaining portion of Mr. Ward's diary, though embracing many curious and interesting political details, and professedly intended for publication, appears to me to comprehend a period too recent to make its continuance expedient."—vol. ii. 101.

We trust that when the fire burns a little lower—

"incendens per ignes Suppositos cineri doloso"—

the remainder of the Diary will be given to the world, (1870.)

Ward, Samuel, a native of Haverhill, Suffolk, educated at Sidney College, where he was chosen Fellow, became Lecturer at Haverhill, 1607, and afterwards minister of one of the churches of Ipswich; prosecuted for Puritanism, 1634, and retired to Holland, where he d. about 1640. A collective edition of his Works—sermons and theological treatises—was pub. Lon., 1635, (some 1636, sm. 8vo; with a leaf with two wood-cuts and the following verses:

"Watch, Ward, and keepe thy garments tight,
For I come Thiefe-like at Midnight.
All-seeing, never-slumbering Lord,
Be thou my Watch, Ile be thy Ward."

His best-known production is Woe to Drunkards; a Sermon on Proverbs xxiii. 29, 32, 1622, sm. 8vo. (See Duyckinck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit., i. 18.) This and his Works are both rare. "The imitation of Hudibras is tolerably successful, and there is a considerable share of humour, wit, and liveliness, but not enough to atone for the many misrepresentations of fact, and the malignant tendencies of the whole."—Chalmers's Biog. Dict., xxxi. 137.

"Full of impious abuse put in a strain apt enough to take with those who are disposed to divert themselves with a shew of wit and humour dressed up to make the Reformation appear both odious and ridiculous."—BISHOP BURNET.

"Thomas Ward has heavier sins than those of coarseness and dullness to answer for, his work being written throughout with an utter disregard to truth, and falsifying or concealing facts, just as it suited the purposes of the author. . . . Those readers who can tolerate a work which burlesques martyrdom and makes merry with executions will find it not destitute of humour and ingenuity."—Retrospect, lvi. 328, 329.

Wardlaw, Henry, Bishop of St. Andrews from 1404 until his death, in 1440, and founder of the University of St. Andrews, is said by Dempster to have written a book De Reformatione Cleri et Oratio pro Reformatione Conviviorum et Luxus; but this seems to have been only a speech on the sumptuary laws, delivered by him in Parliament. See Chambers's and Thomson's Biog. Diet. of Em. Scotsmen, ed. 1855, iv. 417.

Wardlaw, Ralph, D.D., a great-grandson of Ebenezer Erskine, (p. 561, supra,) and a descendant in a direct line, on his mother's side, of James V., King of Scotland, was b. at Dalkeith, Scotland, Dec. 22, 1779; entered the University of Glasgow, 1791; attended the divinity hall of the Scotch Secession Church at Selkirk, 1795-1800; was ordained pastor of a newly-formed Congregational church in Glasgow, Feb. 16, 1803, and retained this connection until his death, and from 1811 until his death, Dec. 17, 1853, was Professor of Systematic Theology in the Independent Glasgow Theological Academy. 1. "At the sale of the library of the late Rev. Dr. Todd, the books fetched prices far higher than was ever known in Dublin. His Irish MSS. realised 780l., and his interleaved copy of Ware, richly annotated by Dr. Todd, produced no less than 450l. It was bought for the University Library. O'Connor's 'Scriptores Hiberniæ' fetched 36l.; Fleming's 'Collectanea Sacra,' 70l.; the 'Ritual of St. Patrick's Cathedral,' dated 1352, sold for 73l. 10s.; the 'Book of Lismore,' 43l. 10s.; and the 'Book of Clonmacnoise,' 31l. 10s. Many of the MSS. were copied for Dr. Todd from unique MSS. in the public libraries of England, Ireland, and Belgium."

Feb. 19, 1852. 1. Letters of Lucius M. Piso, from Palmyra, to his Friend Marcus Curtius, at Rome; now first Translated and Published, N. York, 1837, 2 vols. 12mo. This, like No. 2, also originally published without his name, is fictitious. A portion of it first appeared in The Knickerbocker Magazine. It was republished in London under its proper name, 1838, 2 vols. 12mo, and subsequently in London as Zenobia, or The Fall of Palmyra; and under this title, which was adopted by the author, there have been a number of editions in N. York, 2 vols. 12mo, and 1 vol. 12mo, and London, 2 vols. 24mo, and 1 vol. 12mo; last ed., 1868, p. 8vo.

"It is an historical romance. . . . The scene, the characters, and the historical events are finely selected; for they abound with striking images and associations. . . . It is not a work of an ordinary character. It is the production of a thoughtful, able, imaginative, and, above all, a pure and right-minded author, of clear thoughts and sound sense."—ANDREWS NORTON, N. Amer. Rev., xlv. 390, 391, 406.

It was subsequently repub. in London (also—for the author adopted the new title—in N. York, 2 vols. 12mo, and 1 vol. 12mo) as Aurelian; or, Rome in the Third Century. Rome and the Early Christians, Lon., 1868, p. 8vo. Of Nos. 1 and 2 an English critic remarks,

"There is not a trace of modern habits or modes of thinking; and if Ware had been possessed by the monomania of Macpherson or Chatterton, it would have rested with himself to produce these letters as a close and literal version of manuscripts of the third century."—MISS MITFORD: *Lit. Waring, John Scott, formerly Major Scott, E. I. Service, and M.P. Remarks on Two Sermons on Converting the Natives of the East Indies to Christianity, 1808, 8vo. See Fosteriana, 1858, 44. This gentleman is best known as the agent and subsequently the parliamentary advocate of Warren Hastings.

"He was always on his legs; he was very tedious; and he had only one topic, the merits and wrongs of Hastings. Everybody who knows the House of Commons will easily guess what followed. The Major was soon considered as the greatest bore of his time. His exertions were not confined to Parliament. There was hardly a day on which the newspapers did not contain some puff upon Hastings, signed Asiaticus or Bengalensis, but known to be written by the indefatigable Scott; and hardly a month in which some bulky pamphlet on the same subject, and from the same pen, did not pass to the trunk-makers and the pastry-cooks."

We will give a single specimen of his temper and judgment. He designated the greatest man then living as 'that reptile Mr. Burke.'—LORD MACAULAY: Edin. Rev., Oct. 1841, 229: Warren Hastings; and in Macaulay's Essays.

The Law and the Testimony, by the Author of "The Wide, Wide World," 1853, 8vo; Lon., 1853, 8vo. This is a collection of "passages in the Bible having a bearing upon particular specified subjects or points of doctrine; such as the Divine Nature, Divinity of the Saviour, God's Omniscience," &c. Upon the value of such a work it is not necessary to expatiate. 5. The Hills of the Shatemuc, by the Author of "The Wide, Wide World," N. York, 1856, 12mo, (10,000 sold on the day of publication); Lon., 1856, fp. 8vo, and 8vo; Paris, 1856. Commended by many American newspapers.

"We regret to say that all the promise contained in the earlier works of this writer appears to have evaporated."—Lon. Athen., 1856, 1163.

6. The Golden Ladder: Stories illustrative of the Eight Beatitudes, by the Author of "The Wide, Wide World," &c., Lon., Nov. 1862, fp. 8vo; 5th 1000, Dec. 1863, fp. 8vo. 7. 1. Pan his Syrinx or Pipe, compact of Seven Reedes, including in one, Seven Tragical and Comical Arguments, Lon., (1584,) 4to. Heber, Part 8, 2930, £10 5s. Again, Syrinx, &c., 1597, 4to. White Knight's, 4604, £6; Roxburghe, 6375, £16 5s. 6d.

"A novel, or rather a suite of stories, much in the style of the adventures of Heliodorus's Ethiopic romance."—WARTON: Hist. of Eng. Poet., ed. 1840, iii. 381.

2. Albion's England: a Continued History of the same Kingdom, from the Originals of the First Inhabitants thereof unto the Raigne of Queen Elizabeth, 1586, 4to: Mitford, April, 1860, £5 5s.; 2d ed., 1589, 4to; 3d ed., 1592, 4to; 4th ed., 1596, 4to: Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 841, £6 6s.; 5th ed., 1597, 4to: Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 842, £4 4s.; 6th ed., with an Epitome of the Whole Historie of England, &c., 1602, 4to: Bibl. Anglo-Poet., 843, (q. v.), £5 5s.; again, 1606, 4to; 1612, 4to: Heber, Part 4, 2865, £3 4s.; Crawford, in 1854, £1 13s. Also repub. in Chalmers's Brit. Poets, 1810, 21 vols. r. 8vo. This poem was at once interdicted, it is supposed on the ground of its indecency, by the Star Chamber.

"As Euripides was the most sententious among the Greek poets, so was this Warner among the English poets; and as Homer and Virgil among the Greek and Latins were the chief heroic poets, so Edm. Spencer and this our Warner were esteemed by scholars living in the reign of qu. Elizabeth our chief herical makers."—MERES: Athen. Oxon., Bliss's ed., i. 766.

"Spencer and Warner be our chief herical makers. I have heard Warner termed of ye best wits of both our Universities 'Our English Homer.'"—MERES: Wits Treasure, 1598, 12mo. See, also, Meres's Wits Academy, 1634, 12mo.

"There is in Warner occasionally a pathetic simplicity that never fails of engaging the heart. His tales, though often tedious, and not unfrequently indelicate, abound with all the unaffected incident and artless ease of the best old ballads, without their cant and puerility. The pastoral pieces that occur are superior to all the eclogues in our language, those of Collins only excepted."—HEADLEY: Select Beauties of Anc. Eng. Poets.

"His poem is, in fact, an enormous ballad on the history, or rather on the fables appendant to the history, of England; heterogeneous, indeed, like the Metamorphoses, [of Ovid,] but written with an almost doggerel simplicity. Headley has rashly preferred his works to our ancient ballads; but with the best of them they will bear no comparison. 'Argente and Curan has indeed some beautiful touches, yet that episode requires to be weeded of many lines to be read with unqualified pleasure; and through the rest of his stories we shall search in vain for the familiar magic of such ballads as 'Chery Chase' or 'Gill Morrice.'"—CAMPBELL: Essay on Eng. Poetry, ed. 1848, 172.

"Many parts of Warner's Albion's England are extremely worthy of preservation, but the following episode, [Argente and Curan,] although it has been reprinted, is so very beautiful that I cannot consent to omit it."—DR. BLISS: Wood's Athen. Oxon., i. 768.

"I have read Warner with great pleasure. What an elaborate piece of alliteration and antithesis! Why, it must have been a labour far above the most difficult versification. There is a fine simile or picture of Semiramis arming to repel a siege."—CHARLES LAMB.

"Albion's England, 1586, has at least the equivocal merit of great length. It is rather legendary than historical; some passages are pleasing, but it is not a work of genius, and the style, though natural, seldom rises above prose."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Eng., 4th ed., 1854, ii. 127.

The work was commended by Chancellor Kent, and by Richard Preston, (see Law Studies, 2d ed., 578,) and the introductory general chapters (vide ibid., 5, n.) were praised by Mr. Justice Allan Park.

"I must express my sincere admiration of this work. For the improvement of the education of students-at-law and the direction of their studies, it is admirably planned, and, so far as I have been able to examine it, equally well executed."—Opinion of the Late Lord Chancellor. Quoted in Advert. in Lon. Book-seller, Feb. 1, 1870, 118. See p. 119 for notices of Cases and Opinions on Constitutional Law, and Various Points of English Jurisprudence, Collected and Digested from Official Documents and other Sources, with Notes, by William Forsyth, M.A., Q.C., &c., 1869, r. 8vo.

Commendation of Warren's Law Studies, therefore, was general: it was not, however, universal: e.g. H. B. Wallace, (Literary Criticisms, 146,) who condemns the plan rather than the book, and Law Review, iii. 67, whose "objections apply to almost every part of the book, to its general style and scope." "Mr. Warren has taken a lasting place among the imaginative writers of this period of English history. He possesses in a remarkable manner the tenderness of heart and vividness of feeling, as well as powers of description, which are essential to the delineation of the pathetic, and which, when existing in the degree in which he enjoys them, fill his pages with scenes which can never be forgotten."—SIR ARCHIBALD ALISON: Hist. of Europe, 1815–1852, ch. v.

"In the work now before us we have an elegant edition and excellent translation of all Virgil's works. . . . That Mr. Warton has far surpassed all who have gone before him in the same task, in regard to rendering the author's sense with exactness and perspicuity, will, we are persuaded, be readily allowed by every candid reader that is capable of judging; nor is this his only merit: there is a classical purity and correctness in his style, and an easy, harmonious flow in his versification."—Lon. Mon. Rev., 1753, i. 161.

"To every classical reader Warton's Virgil will afford the richest fund of instruction and amusement."—REV. JOHN WOOL: Bioq. Memoirs of Warton, 28.

"Warton's translation [of the Georgics] may in many instances be found more faithful and concise than Dryden's; but it wants that elastic and idiomatic freedom by which Dryden reconciles us to his faults, and exhibits rather the diligence of a scholar than the spirit of a poet."—THOMAS CAMPBELL: Specimens, 664.

He published a collection of his father's poems. (see WARTON, THOMAS;) contributed to the Gentleman's Magazine, 1739, &c., and Dodsley's Museum, 1746, &c.; wrote twenty-four numbers of The Adventurer, 1753–56; published an Essay on the Genius and Writings of Pope, and an edition of Pope's Works, (see POPE, ALEXANDER: II. COLLECTIVE EDITIONS OF POPE'S WORKS, V.) and left unfinished an edition of Dryden's Works. After his death, some of the fruits of this task appeared, in Dryden's Poetical Works, with Notes by the Rev. Joseph Warton, D.D., the Rev. John Warton, M.A., [his eldest son,] and others, 1811, 4 vols. 8vo: see, also, DRYDEN, JOHN, (p. 525, supra.) This was published by the Rev. John Warton, (supra), who proposed to follow it by selections from the correspondence of his father and uncle, Joseph and Thomas Warton: but these never appeared. In early life he meditated a history of the revival of literature; about 1784 he issued proposals for, and announced as preparing for the press, a history of Grecian, Roman, Italian, and French Poetry, in Four Parts, 2 vols. 4to: he also desired to complete his brother's (see WARTON, THOMAS, D.D.) History of English Poetry; but these three important designs came to naught. See Biographical Memoirs of the Late Rev. Joseph Warton, D.D., Master of St. Mary Winton College; Prebendary of Winchester Cathedral; and Rector of the Parishes of Wickham and Upham, Hants; to which are added a Selection from his Works, and a Literary Correspondence between Eminent Persons, reserved by him for Publication, by the Rev. John Wool, A.M., Late Fellow of New College, Oxford; Rector of Blackford, Somerset; and Master of the Free Grammar-School of Midhurst, Sussex, 1806, 4to, pp. 426. Reviewed in Lon. Mon. Rev., 1807, i. 225.

"A second volume, which it is intended to publish with all convenient speed, will include Dr. Warton's Life of Virgil, his three Essays on Pastoral, Epic, and Dramatic Poetry, his papers in The Adventurer, a continuation of the Correspondence, and a Supplement."—Ubi supra, 226.

Warton, Thomas, father of the preceding and of the succeeding, was a Fellow of Magdalene College, Oxford, and Professor of Poetry in that university, 1718–28, and afterwards Vicar of Basingstoke, Hampshire, and Cobham, Surrey. After his death, in 1746, his son Joseph published, by subscription, Poems on Several Occasions, by the Rev. Thomas Warton, Lon., 1748, 8vo. The volume concludes with two poems on the death of the author: one by his daughter Jane, (d. 1809, aged 87,) the other by Joseph, the editor. See Nichols's Lit. Anec., ii. 373, vi. 168, 169, 171; H. F. Cary's Lives of English Poets, 1846, fp. 8vo.

"This elder Warton has certainly as just a claim to be ranked among the collected English poets, as several who seem to be permanently placed there. Mr. Cary has praised his translation from Erastostrotus; and we select the following little poem [An American Love Ode] for the clearness and sweetness of its expression, as worthy of attention."—Lon. Gent. Mag., 1846, ii. 348. See PARKER, SAMUEL.

Warton, Thomas, son of the preceding, was b. at Basingstoke, 1728; admitted a commoner of Trinity College, Oxford, 1743, and succeeded to a Fellowship, 1751; Professor of Poetry at Oxford, 1757–67; instituted to the living of Kiddingington, 1771, and presented to the donative of Hill Farrance, 1782; Camden Professor of Ancient History at Oxford, and Poet-Laureate, both in 1785, and retained these posts until his death, May 21, 1790.

abusive, ungentlemanly rhapsody was written by William Huggins, (p. 910, supra), who had engaged Warton in the translation of Ariosto, but cancelled the bargain, and thus attacked Warton, because he ranked Spenser above Ariosto.

Warton brings his History down to the early part of the 17th century. It was thought (see Nichols's Illust. of Lit., viii. 372) that Ritson's ferocity drove him from the track. In 1785, when he published Milton's Juvenile Poems, he promised the speedy publication of vol. iv.; and in 1791, in his volume of Poems, vol. iv., to be completed by his brother, Joseph Warton, was again announced for speedy publication, (see, also, in Woolf's Life of Joseph Warton, a letter of the latter, dated 1792.) Subsequently Thomas Park, an able hand, was employed upon a continuation; and as late as 1826, Robert Southey (see his Life and Correspondence, ch. xxix.: Letter to G. C. Bedford, Feb. 18, 1826) was engaged to finish the work in three or four volumes octavo, at £500 each. But this design also came to naught. For reviews and notices of the first edition, see: of vol. i., Mon. Rev., 1774, i. 289, 417; Gent. Mag., xlv. 370, 425, 466, 522; of vol. ii., Mon. Rev., 1778, ii. 132, 211, 321; *Gent. A New Edition, carefully Revised, with Numerous Additional Notes by the Late Mr. Ritson, the Late Dr. Ashby, Mr. Douce, Mr. Park, and other Eminent Antiquaries, and by the Editor, (Richard Price, q. v.) was pub. in 1824, 4 vols. 8vo. Again: From the Edition of 1824, &c., Now further improved by the Corrections and Additions of several Eminent Antiquaries, (edited by Richard Taylor, q. v.) 1840, 3 vols. 8vo, £1 16s. This should be incorporated in a new edition continuing the History to the year 1850.

"To be published early in November next, [1870,] in four volumes, 8vo, with a portrait after Reynolds, fifty copies on large paper, uniform with Brand's Popular Antiquities of Great Britain, Warton's History of English Poetry, reprinted from the edition of 1824, collated with that of 1840, with a large body of new Notes, and other Additions of importance and special value, by several eminent Antiquaries. To be edited by W. Carew Hazlitt. Among the improvements introduced may be mentioned a thorough revision of the portions relating to CHAUCER and PIERS PLOUGHMAN, a Dissertation on the Seven Sages, and a new chapter on SPENSER."—Advert. of Alfred Russell Smith, London, Cat. No. 1, February, 1870.

Pope, Gray, and Mason each meditated a History of English Poetry. To Warton's volumes should be added, Remarks upon the Eighth Section of the Second Volume of Mr. Warton's History, (by Dr. Woodward, of Bristol,) 1780, 8vo, and also the History of Scottish Poetry, by David Irving, LL.D.; Edited by John Aitkin Carlyle, M.D.; with a Memoir and Glossary, Edin., 1861, 8vo, 16s.

"A work which, though neither profound nor brilliant, will never mislead the inquiring student."—Lon. Athen., 1861, ii. 609, (g. v.)

We adduce some opinions on Warton's History:

"The progress of romance and the state of learning in the middle ages are illustrated by Mr. Thomas Warton with the taste of a poet and the minute diligence of an antiquarian."—GIBBON: Decline and Fall, ch. xxxviii., n.

See, also, ch. xlii. n., and Brydges's Phillips's Theat. Poet. Anglic., vii., lx.

"A work of great size, and, partially speaking, of great interest, from the perusal of which we rise, our fancy delighted with beautiful imagery and with the happy analysis of ancient tale and song, but certainly with very vague ideas of the history of English poetry. The error seems to lie in a total neglect of plan and system; for, delighted with every interesting topic which occurred, the historical poet pursued it to its utmost verge, without considering that these digressions, however beautiful and interesting in themselves, abstracted alike his own attention and that of the reader from the professed purpose of his book. Accordingly, Warton's History of English Poetry has remained, and will always remain, an immense commonplace-book of memoirs to serve for such an history."—SIR WALTER SCOTT: Edin. Rev., iv. (April, 1804) 153.

See, also, vii. (Jan. 1806) 389, also by Sir Walter Scott. "An immense treasury of materials."—WILLIAM GODWIN: Life of Chaucer.

"His diligence is indefatigable, and his learning stupendous; but I believe every reader, except a mere antiquary, will regret that instead of a regular progressive history, he did not adopt the form of a critical dissertation, interspersed with anecdotes. His taste, which is frequently buried under piles of cumbersome erudition, would have had a freer scope."—GREEN: Diary of a Lover of Lili: Lon. Gent. Mag., 1834, i. 10.

"The most singular combination of extraordinary talents and attainments, uniting the deep and minute researches of the antiquary with the elegance of the classical scholar and the skill of the practised writer; the style vigorous and manly, the observations acute and just, and the views of the subject extensive and accurate. . . . His consummate taste and discriminating judgment may on all occasions be implicitly trusted."—SIR S. BRYDGES.

"Well, I have read Mr. Warton's book; and shall I tell you what I think of it? I never saw so many entertaining particulars crowded together with so little entertainment and vivacity. The facts are overwhelmed by one another, as Johnson's sense is by words: they are all equally strong. Mr. Warton has amassed all the parts and learning of four centuries, and all the impudence that remains is, that those four ages had no parts or learning at all. There is not a gleam of poetry in their compositions between the Scalds and Chaucer. . . . I have dipped into Mr. Warton's second volume, which seems more unentertaining than the former. . . . I have very near finished Warton, but, antiquary as I am, it was a tough achievement. He has dipped into an incredible ocean of dry and obsolete authors of the dark ages, and has brought up more rubbish than riches; but the latter chapters, especially on the progress and revival of the theatre, are more entertaining; however, it is very fatiguing to wade through the muddy poetry of three or four centuries that had never a poet."—Horace Walpole to Rev. W. Cole, April 7, 1774, and to Rev. W. Mason, April 8, 1778, and April 18, 1788: Walpole's Letters, ed. 1861, vi. 72, vii. 50, 54.

"In this latter author's [Warton's] antiquarian mud we are already above knee-deep, and we must on as fast as we are able. . . . I trust that posterity (if posterity deserves it) will be blessed with some future anecdotalist like one I could name, . . . that will select out of those three quartos, Anecdotes of English Poetry, in two or three small octavos, about the size, for instance, of the 'Royal and Noble Authors,' and should this be the case, our Oxonian will not have written in vain."—Rev. W. Mason to Horace Walpole, March 29, 1781: Walpole's Letters, ed. 1861, viii. 18, n. See, also, 17, vi. 431, n., (Mason to Walpole.)

"He loved poetry dearly—and he wrote its history well; that book being a mine."—PROF. WILSON: Blackw. Mag., xxx. 483: An Hour's Talk about Poetry.

"We have nothing historical as to our own poetry but the prolix volumes of Warton. They have obtained, in my opinion, full as much credit as they deserve: without depreciating a book in which so much may be found, and which has been so great a favourite with the literary part of the public, it may be observed that its errors as to fact, especially in names and dates, are extraordinarily frequent, and that the criticism, in points of taste, is not of a very superior kind."—HALLAM: *Lit. 15. Poems: A New Edition, with Additions, Lon., 1777, 8vo. Although called a "new edition," yet only seven of these poems had before appeared: nearly three times that number are here first published. The volume was reviewed in Mon. Rev., 1777, i. 331. Other editions were pub. in 1778, 1779, 1789, 1791, 8vo, (reviewed in Mon. Rev., 1793, i. 271;) and these were followed by The Poetical Works of the Late Thomas Warton, B.D., &c., Fifth Edition, Corrected and Enlarged, [see No. 6.] &c.; together with Memoirs of his Life and Writings, and Notes Critical and Explanatory, by Richard Mant, 1802, 2 vols. 8vo; i. p., r. 8vo. See notices of this edition in Gent. Mag., 1803, i. 329, 396, 498, 510. It was reviewed in Edin. Rev., ii. (April, 1803) 250, (by Mr. Murray.) In both of these periodicals fault is found with Warton's biographer. See, also—I. II. The Poetical Works of Thomas Gray, Thomas Parnell, William Collins, Matthew Green, and Thomas Warton; Edited by the Rev. Robert Aris Willmott, Lon., 1854, 12mo, (Routledge & Co.) Reviewed in Athen., 1854, 1040, and Gent. Mag., 1857, i. 566. His poems are repub. in Chalmers's British Poets, 1810, 21 vols. r. 8vo. III. "He was a genuine poet, in its strictest sense. I remember, some years ago, when it was the fashion to deny him genius; but I am utterly at a loss to guess what meaning those who denied genius to T. Warton could apply to the term."—SIR S. H. BRYDGES: Phillips's Theat. Poet. Anglic., lxii., n.

"If we judge of him by the character of the majority of his pieces, I believe that fifty out of sixty are such that we should not be anxious to give them a second perusal."—THOMAS CAMPBELL: Specimens, (g. v.)

"Tom Warton was one of the finest fellows that ever breathed, and the gods had made him poetical, but not a poet."—PROFESSOR WILSON: Blackw. Mag., xxx. 483: An Hour's Talk about Poetry.

But in the same periodical, xlv. 553-572, (A Glance over the Poetry of Thomas Warton,) a more favourable verdict is recorded: The Pleasures of Melancholy, (composed in his 17th year,) The Crusade, The Grave of King Arthur, The Hamlet, the Lines Sent to a Friend on his Leaving a Favourite Cottage in Hampshire, The Progress of Discontent, (written in his 18th year,) "the best imitation of Swift," says his brother, Joseph Warton, "that has yet appeared," &c., are instanced as specimens of his poetical powers.

"A noticeable peculiarity of Warton is seen in his love of compound words and alliteration. Poetry has always been enriched by the former. A compound word sometimes encloses two pictures in one frame. Homer is an example: who does not watch the tossing of Hector's plume in the waving trees on the mountain-top? English fancy presents choice specimens in the 'silver-sanded' shore of Drayton, the 'opal-coloured' morn of Sylvester, the nightingale's 'love-laboured' note of Milton, and the 'purple-streaming' amethyst of Thomson. The treasure-houses of Spenser and Shakspeare are piled with these jewels. Warton seldom equalled his masters, and his attempts are not happy. No ear is satisfied with 'nectar-trickling' or 'woodbine-mantled.' A compound epithet should be a portrait, a landscape, or a moral."—R. A. WILLMOTT: Poetical Works of Gray, &c., ut supra.

"Mr. Warton's answer to Milles and Bryant is come out. There is good in it, but he does not unfold his arguments sufficiently, and I think, does not take off one or two of Bryant's strongest arguments. . . . It is no wonder that Mr. Warton's answer appeared flat to me: it certainly is not the best answer that has appeared."—Horace Walpole to Rev. W. Mason, March 23, 1782: Letters, ed. 1861, viii. 186.

17. Specimen of a History of Oxfordshire, (being the History and Antiquities of Kiddington,) 1782, 4to: privately printed: 25 copies; 2d ed., published, Corrected and Enlarged, 1783, 4to; 3d ed., (revised through the press by Sir Henry Ellis), 1815, 4to, 1 p., r. 4to. Rev., 1793, i. 24-34; Gent. Mag., lxiii. 746. See, also, A Letter to the Rev. Mr. T. Warton on his Late Edition of Milton's Juvenile Poems, 1785, 8vo, (see MILTON, JOHN, p. 1312, supra;) Green's Diary of a Lover of Lit., 1810, 4to, 182, 235; Dr. Symmons's Life of Milton; Hallam's Lit. Both the first and second editions of these Poems must be in the Milton library. It is to be regretted that Warton failed to carry out his design of a second volume, comprehending Paradise Regained and Samson Agonistes, on both of which he left notes.

"The Biographer [of Bishop Shirley: see HILL, THOMAS] remarks: 'Among the many books sent to him from home to assist his studies, one is mentioned which contributed in a remarkable degree to his success. It was T. Warton's edition of Milton's minor poems. The study of this volume improved his taste for modern Latin composition, and seemed to give him a new insight into its mechanism. For, on the same principle that it requires less effort to copy a piece of mimicry than to observe in the first instance and reproduce the peculiarities of the original, he found it easier to catch the classical turn of thought and expression from a modern imitation than from an ancient model.' The truth of the general theory here advanced, as well as the choice of the particular example, may be questioned. Does Archdeacon Hill know the opinions of the great scholars on the continent of that time on Milton's Latin poetry?—how it was received by Heinsius and others? If not, let him turn to Burmann's 'Sylloge Epistolarum.' To this portion of his duty T. Warton was not equal. His 'History of English Poetry' is admirable; nor could all Ritson's acuteness and knowledge injure it. His poems are worthy of high praise, particularly his academical ones, and perhaps he was the first among our poets who adorned his poetry by the imagery of the monastic ruin, the gothic shrine, and the picturesque beauties of our ancient architecture; but he should not have meddled as an editor with the ancient languages. He was but a moderate Latin scholar, and wretchedly imperfect in Greek. The scholars of Leipzig laughed at the Theocritus of Oxford, and it would too much shock the pride of our university scholarship if we were to recite the language that they used. This edition of Milton by Warton might be usefully reprinted, with corrections and very many necessary additions."—Lon. Gent. Mag., Dec. 1849, n., (Rev. John Mitford?)

"I have never thought that his Reports of his own decisions did him entire justice; while they in no adequate manner at all fully represent his judicial powers or the ready command he held of his learning in the law."—HORACE BINNEY: Bushrod Washington, Phila., 1858, 8vo, (privately printed,) 27, (q. v.) Washington, George, fourth son of Augustine Washington, was b. on Pope's Creek, county of Westmoreland, Virginia, Feb. 22, 1732, N.S.; Surveyor of Lord Fairfax's lands on the Potomac River, 1748; Military Inspector, with the rank of Major, to protect the frontiers of Virginia against the French and Indians, 1751; Adjutant-General, 1752; Commissioner to the French on the Ohio, 1753; Lieutenant-Colonel for the defence of Virginia, 1754; Aide-de-Camp to General Braddock at the battle of Monongahela, July 9, 1755; Commander-in-Chief of the Virginia Forces, Aug. 14, 1755-Dec. 1758; elected to the Virginia House of Burgesses, 1757, when absent with the army, and took his seat, 1759; married to Mrs. Martha Custis, widow of Colonel John Custis, of Virginia, Jan. 6, 1759; Member of the Virginia Conventions on the points at issue between Great Britain and the Colonies, 1774; Member of the first Continental Congress, September, 1774; member of the second Continental Congress, May 10, 1775; Commander-in-Chief, June 17, 1775; Commander of the army at Cambridge, July 3, 1775; invested by Congress with dictatorial powers, Dec. 27, 1776; bids farewell to his fellow-officers in the city of New York, Dec. 4, 1783; resigns his commission, Dec. 23, 1783; Delegate to the General Convention at Philadelphia to form a Constitution, and elected President of the Convention, May, 1787; President of the United States, March 4, 1789-March 4, 1797; publishes his Farewell Address, Sept. 19, 1796; Commander-in-Chief of the Armies of the United States, July 3, 1798; d. at Mount Vernon, after two days' illness, Dec. 14, 1799. Many notices of biographies of Washington, his writings, and histories illustrative of his career, will be found on preceding pages, (see references below:) to these, after citing some works most appropriately recorded here, we shall make additions.

1. Journal of Major George Washington, Williamsburg, 1754, 8vo; Lon., 1754, 8vo. Reprinted, N. York, 1865, 8vo, $1.50, 1 p., $3, (Sabin's Reprints.) See the translation of the Journal of Major Washington in Mémoire concernant le Précis des Faits, avec Pièces justificatives, pp. 73-100, Paris, 1756, 8vo. 2. Letters from General Washington to several of his Friends, in the Year 1776, 8vo, 1777; s. l., 1778, 8vo. Repub. in Epistles, Domestic, Confidential, and Official, from General Washington; Written from 1776 to 1783, N. York, 1796, 8vo; Lon., 1796, 8vo, pp. 303; 1797, 8vo. Of these, the following, published both in the Letters and in the Epistles, were pronounced by Washington, in a letter to the Secretary of State in 1797, to be forgeries: a letter to Lund Washington, June 12, 1776; a letter to John Parke Custis, June 18, 1776; letters to Lund Washington, July 8, July 16, July 15, and July 22, 1776; a letter to Mrs. Washington, June 24, 1776.

3. His Official Letters to the American Congress written during the War between the United Colonies and Great Britain, Boston, 1795, 2 vols. 12mo; Lon., 1795, 2 vols. 8vo; N. York, 1796, 2 vols. 8vo; Bost., 1796, 2 vols. 12mo.

"It may, perhaps, be hazarded as a general remark, that great men are commonly distinguished by a peculiar simplicity of style; . . . and this is eminently the literary character of the official letters of Washington, here presented to the public. In this view, they afford an excellent specimen of the proper style for letters or papers on public transactions."—Lon. Mon. Rev., Dec. 1795, 389.

A few words on Washington's style as a writer may appropriately be introduced here:

"In public, when called on for a sudden opinion, he was unready, short, and embarrassed. Yet he wrote readily, rather diffusely, in an easy and correct style. This he had acquired by conversation with the world, for his education was merely reading, writing, and common arithmetic, to which he added surveying at a later day. His time was employed in action chiefly, reading little, and that only in agricultural and English history."—THOMAS JEFFERSON: Letter to Dr. Walter Jones, Jan. 1814: Tucker's Life of Jefferson.

"He read little, but with close attention. Whatever he took in hand he applied himself to with ease; and his papers which have been preserved show how he almost imperceptibly gained the power of writing correctly,—always expressing himself with clearness and directness, often with felicity of language and grace."—GEORGE BANCROFT: Hist. of the United States, vol. vii., 1858.

8. His Revolutionary Orders issued during the Years 1778, 1780, 1781, and 1782; selected from the MSS. of John Whiting, and edited by his Son, Henry Whiting, Lt.-Col. U. S. Army, N. York, 1844, 8vo; 1846, 8vo.

9. Washington's Farewell Address to the People of the United States, 1850, large 4to. With preface, appendix, and two portraits of Washington. Privately printed.

"Edition de luxe, dont toutes les pages sont entourées de bordures. Elle a été faite aux frais et par les soins de M. James Lenox, de New York, d'après le manuscrit autographe de Washington, dont il a conservé les variantes. L'appendice se compose de documents qui prouvent que Washington est véritablement l'auteur de l'adresse et que le manuscrit est bien de sa main. Il n'a été tiré de ce livre que 54 exemplaires de format in-fol. et 175 en in-4, qui tous ont été distribués en présent par l'honorable éditeur."—BRUNET: Manuel, 5th ed., v. (1864) 1420.

The original MS. was purchased by Mr. Lenox at auction for $2500.

There have been many editions of the Farewell Address: among the last is an illuminated edition, printed in colours, on plate paper, with arabesque designs and views of Mount Vernon, Phila., (Devereux & Co.) 1860, 4to. All who would understand the history of this admirable valedictory must carefully peruse An Inquiry into the Formation of Washington's Farewell Address, (by Horace Binney, LL.D., of Philadelphia,) Phila., 1859, pp. 250.

"All the known facts of the case are brought together and set forth with great acuteness and precision by Honourable Horace Binney, one of the most distinguished jurists of America." &c.—EDWARD EVERETT: Life of Washington, in Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., xxi. (1860) 769.

See Washington's Words to Intending English Emigrants, Lon., 1869, 12mo. I should be glad to see (what I have no space to give) a complete WASHINGTON BIBLIOGRAPHY brought up to 1870, supplemented by opinions of eminent authorities on his character and services. For a few of such opinions I must endeavour to find a place:

"Washington, the dictator, has shown himself both a Fabius and a Camillus. His march through our lines is allowed to have been a prodigy of generalship. In one word, I look upon a great part of America as lost to this country. . . . How frantically have the French acted, and how rationally the Americans! But Franklin and Washington were great men. None have appeared yet in France. . . . How different are English and French! How temperate are the Americans! How unlike the villain Mirabeau to Washington!"—Horace Walpole to Sir H. Mann, April 3, 1777, to Hon. H. S. Conway, July 1, 1790, and to the Countess of Ossory, April 30, 1791: H. Walpole's Letters, ed. 1861, ix. 423, ix. 247, 310. See, also, 392.

"On receiving intelligence of Washington's death, on the 15th of December, 1799, Napoleon not only went into mourning himself, but caused the whole army to do the same, by issuing the following order of the day:

"Washington is dead. That great man fought against tyranny: he consolidated the liberties of his country. His memory will ever be dear to the French nation, as to all freemen in both the old and new worlds, and especially to the soldiers of France, who, like him and the American soldiers, fight for equality and liberty."—Speech of Prince Napoleon Joseph Charles Paul Bonaparte, at Ajaccio, 1855.

"He was indeed, in every sense of the words, a wise, a good, and a great man. . . . His was the singular destiny and merit of leading the armies of his country successfully through an arduous war for the establishment of a government, new in its forms and principles, until it had settled down into a quiet and orderly train; and of scrupulously obeying the laws through the whole of his career, civil and military, of which the history of the world furnishes no other example."—THOMAS JEFFERSON: Letter to Dr. Walter Jones, Monticello, Jan. 1814: Tucker's Life of Jefferson.

"Washington's fame will go on increasing until the brightest constellation in yonder heavens is called by his name."—THOMAS JEFFERSON: Randall's Life of Jefferson, ii. 375. See, also, Jefferson's Notes on Virginia.

"The character of Washington,—in war, in peace, and in private life, the most sublime on historical record."—WM. H. PACECOTT: N. Amer. Rev., Jan. 1841, 102: repub. in his Miscellanies, ed. 1855, 338.

"Glory, that blatant word which haunts some military minds like the bray of the trumpet, formed no part of his aspirations. To act justly was his instinct, to promote the public weal his constant effort, to deserve the 'affection of good men' his ambition."—WASHINGTON IRVING: Life of Washington, vol. iv.

"In the possession of that mysterious quality of character manifested in a long life of unambitious service, which, call it by whatever name, inspires the confidence, commands the respect, and wins the affection of contemporaries, and grows upon the admiration of successive generations, forming a standard to which the merit of other men is referred, and a living proof that pure patriotism is not a delusion, nor virtue an empty name, no one of the sons of men has equalled George Washington."—EDWARD EVERETT: Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., xxi. (1860) 766.

"A civil war is better than assassination and massacre; it has a system of discipline, it has laws, duties, and virtues; but it must end in military despotism. The example of Washington is solitary."—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH: Diary, July 4, 1811: Memoirs, ii. ch. ii.

"A character, of virtues so happily tempered by one another, and so wholly unalloyed by any vices, is hardly to be found in the pages of history."—CHARLES JAMES FOX: Hist. of the Early Part of the Reign of James the Second, introd. chap., 1808, 4to.

"To be the first man, (not the Dictator,) not the Sylla, but the Washington, or Aristides, the leader in talent and truth, is to be next to the Divinity."—Lord Byron's Journal: Moore's Life of Byron, after Letter DXVIII.

"I have a larger acquaintance among the most valuable and exalted classes of men; but you are the only human being for whom I ever felt an awful reverence. I sincerely pray God to grant a long and serene evening to a life so gloriously devoted to the universal happiness of the world."—THOMAS (afterwards Lord-CHANCELLOR) ERSKINE, London, 15 March, 1795: Sparks's Writings of Washington, i. 495, (q. r.)

"The news of Hampden's death produced as great a consternation in his party, according to Charonides, as if their whole army had been cut off. . . . He had, indeed, left none his like behind him. . . . England missed the sobriety, the self-command, the perfect soundness of judgment, the perfect rectitude of intention, to which the history of revolutions furnishes no parallel, or furnishes a parallel in Washington alone."—LORD MACAULEY: Lord Nugent's Memorials of Hampden: Edin. Rev., Dec. 1831, 549, 550: repub. in his Essays.

"In modern times, Washington, I believe, was the greatest man, next to him, William the Third."—HENRY GRATTAN: Recollec. by Samuel Rogers, 1859, 102.

"Washington, the Chief of a nation in arms, doing battle with distracted parties; calm in the midst of conspiracy; serene against the open foe before him, and the darker enemies at his back; Washington, inspiring order and spirit into troops hungry and in rags, stung by ingratitude, but betraying no anger, and ever ready to forgive; in defeat invincible, magnanimous in conquest, and never so sublime as on that day when he laid down his victorious sword and sought his noble retirement,—here, indeed, is a character to admire and revere: a life without a stain, a fame without a flaw. Quando invenies parvum?—Thackeray's Virginians, (Sir George Warrington,) ch. lxxvii.

"Which was the most splendid spectacle ever witnessed,—the opening feast of Prince George in London, or the resignation of Washington? Which is the noble character for after-ages to admire,—yon fribble dancing in lace and spangles, or yonder hero who sheathes his sword after a life of spotless honour, a purity unapproached, a courage indomitable, and a consummate victory? Which of those is the true gentleman?"—THACKERAY: George the Third.

"The disinterested virtue, prophetic wisdom, and imperturbable fortitude of Washington."—SIR ARCHIBALD ALISON: Hist. of Europe, 1789-1815, ch. lix.

"To George Washington nearly alone in modern times has it been given to accomplish a wonderful revolution, and yet to remain to all future times the theme of a people's gratitude, and an example of virtuous and beneficent power."—LORD JOHN (afterwards EARL) RUSSELL: Life and Times of Charles James Fox, vol. i., 1859.

"He did the two greatest things which in politics man can have the privilege of attempting. He maintained by peace that independence of his country which he had acquired by war. He founded a free government in the name of the principles of order, and by reestablishing their sway. . . . He deserved and enjoyed both success and repose. Of all great men, he was the most virtuous and the most fortunate. In this world God has no higher favours to bestow."—M. GUIZOT: Essay on Washington, Hillard's translation.

See, also, Guizot's work On the Causes of the Success of the English and American Revolutions.

"Washington, after having raised a nation to independence, slept peacefully, as a retired magistrate, under his paternal roof, amid the regrets of his countrymen and the veneration of all people. . . . His glory is the common patrimony of increasing civilization. His renown rises like one of those sanctuaries whence a stream pure and inexhaustible flows forth forever for the solace of the people."—VISCOUNT DE CHATEAUBRIAND: Parallel between Washington and Napoleon, in his Travels in America and Italy, vol. i., and in his Memoirs, in Blackw. Mag., Dec. 1834, 809, 810.

"How grateful the relief which the friend of mankind, the lover of virtue, experiences, when, turning from the contemplation of such a character, [Napoleon,] his eye rests upon the greatest man of our own or of any age; the only one upon whom an epithet so thoughtlessly lavished by men to foster the crimes of their worst enemies, may be innocently and justly bestowed! . . . This is the consummate glory of the great American:—a triumphant warrior where the most sanguine had a right to despair; a successful ruler in all the difficulties of a course wholly untried; but a warrior whose sword only left its sheath when the first law of our nature commanded it to be drawn, and a ruler who, having tasted of supreme power, gently and unostentatiously desired that the cup might pass from him, nor would suffer more to wet his lips than the most solemn and sacred duty to his country and his God required. . . . It will be the duty of the Historian and the Sage, in all ages, to omit no occasion of commemorating this illustrious man; and until time shall be no more will a test of the progress which our race has made in wisdom and in virtue be derived from the veneration paid to the immortal name of Washington."—LORD BROTHAM: Edin. Rev., Oct. 1838, 261, 262, (Reigns of George the Third and Fourth: Political Characters); repub. in his Hist. Sketches of Statesmen, who flourished in the Time of George III., ed. 1856, iii. 271, 274, and in his Contrib. to the Edinburgh Review, 1856, i. 344, 345.

Wasse rendered important assistance to Kuster in his Suidas, Cantab., 1705, 3 vols. fol., some l. p., (the best edition before that of Gaisford,) and was a large contributor (too large for the success of the work) to the Bibliotheca Literaria: a Collection of Inscriptions, Medals, Dissertations, &c., Lon., 1722-24, 4to, 10 Nos. in 1 vol., which the classical scholar should secure. Drs. Jebb, Wotton, Pearce, and others contributed to it: see Boswell's Johnson's Diary, Aug. 10, 1774, ch. xlvii. He also published three papers in Phil. Trans., 1724, '25, '35, '36. Whiston calls him "more learned than any bishop in England since Bishop Lloyd," and tells us that Bentley said of him, "When I am dead, Wasse will be the most learned man in England." J. C. Brooke, Somerset Herald, assisted in the Genealogical part. The chief object of the work (printed at the expense of the Warren family) was to support the claim of Sir George Warren, K.B., of Poynton, Cheshire, to the barony of Warren, vested in the ancient Earls of Warren, in Normandy, created by William the Conqueror Earls of Surrey. The evidence has been pronounced insufficient. See Censura Literaria, vol. iv. 389; Moule's Bibl. Herald., 427, 441; Retrospec. Rev., 2d Ser., ii. (1828) 527. Sir George Warren d. York, 1846, 8vo. 2. Thermal Ventilation and other Sanitary Improvements applicable to Public Buildings, and recently adopted at the N. York Hospital; a Discourse, 1851, 8vo. 3. The Medical Profession in Ancient Times; an Anniversary Discourse, 1856, 8vo, pp. 226. Favourably reviewed in Amer. Jour. of Med. Sci., Oct. 1856, 416, (by Alfred Stillé, M.D.) and commended by Dr. J. W. Francis in his Old New York, ed. 1858, 324, and in a letter, May 24, 1860, to the author of this Dictionary. See, also, Life of Washington, by E. Everett, N. York, 1860, 280. Dr. J. Warburton Begbie, of Edinburgh, characterizes it as "very far from accurate, though by no means uninteresting." "Uninteresting" (we read every word of it) it certainly is not. The author has, or had, in preparation, a second volume, carrying the subject through the Middle Ages. We trust yet to see this in print. See, also, The History of Medicine, by Edward Meryon, Lon., 8vo, vol. i., 1861, and his Researches in Paralysis, 1864, 8vo. 4. The Parish Will Case Critically Examined in Reference to the Mental Competency of Mr. Henry Parish to execute the Codicils appended to his Will; and Notes in Reply to an Article entitled "The Parish Will." These constitute pp. 1-350 and 575-600 of The Parish Will Case before the Surrogate of the City of New York, Medical Opinions, &c., 1857, 8vo, pp. 600. To this vol. should be added, The Parish Will Case in the Court of Appeals: The Statement of Facts, and the Opinion of the Court, Aug. 1862, 8vo. The Court of Appeals, April, 1862, sustained the will, and disallowed the codicils made after the attack of paralysis. Watson, Joshua, D.C.L., b. in London, 1776, d. at Clapton, Hackney, Jan. 30, 1855, was the author of many "good works," though no one of these was a book. He, however, caused to be republished several volumes: e.g., Jeremy Taylor's Letters on Popery, his Introduction to his Holy Living, and a Selection from his Prayers, William Law's Letters to Hoadly, Bishop Patrick's Consolatory Discourses, Dean Stanhope's Holy Week, and Hele's Select Offices of Private Devotion. To some or all of these he devoted more or less of editorial care. See Lon. Gent. Mag., 1861, i. 648-652, (Obituary.) Memoir of Joshua Watson, Edited by Edward Churton, Oxf. and Lon., 1861, 2 vols. p. 8vo; 2d ed., 1863, p. 8vo. "A good man's life, well told."—Lon. Gent. Mag., 1861, i. 690.

"Dr. Watson, the most candid of my adversaries. . . . The keen and well-tempered weapon of Dr. Watson. . . . Dr. Watson's mode of thinking bears a liberal and a philosophic cast; his thoughts are expressed with spirit; and that spirit is always tempered by politeness and moderation. Such is the man whom I should be happy to call my friend, and whom I should not blush to call my antagonist."—GIBBON: Miscell. Works, ed. 1837, 100, 751, 755, (q. v.)

7th ed., 1800, 5 vols. 12mo. After the completion of volume fifth, he burnt his chemical manuscripts, from fear of being again tempted to resume the study:—"with the holy zeal of the idolaters of old, who had been addicted to curious arts, I have burned my books." (Preface to vol. v.)

"A collection of the most pleasing and informing treatises in natural philosophy which I ever read, or, I believe, ever were written."—MATHIAS's Pursuits of Literature, Pref. to Dial. I.

"The first and second volumes of Dr. Watson's Chemical Essays contain two valuable discourses on the discovery and composition of gunpowder. . . . On the different sorts of oils and bitumens, see Dr. Watson's (the present Bishop of Llandaff's) Chemical Essays, vol. iii. Essay I., a classic book, the best adapted to infuse the taste and knowledge of chemistry."—GIBBON: Decline and Fall, ch. liii., lxx., notes.

"During his [Dr. Johnson's] illness [in 1783] Mr. Murphy visited him, and found him reading Dr. Watson's Chemistry: articulating with difficulty, he said, 'From this book he who knows nothing may learn a great deal, and he who knows will be pleased to find his knowledge recalled to his mind in a manner highly pleasing.' Life, p. 121."—CROKER: Boswell's Johnson, ed. 1848, r. 8vo, 736, n. 6. Collection of Theological Tracts, selected from Various Authors; for the Use of Young Gentlemen in the University, Camb., 1785, 6 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., Lon., 1791, 6 vols. 8vo, £3; 1 p., r. 8vo, £3 13s. 6d.

"These Tracts, with a few exceptions, are of a very liberal character as theological productions. . . . Bishop Watson would not allow that he was a Socinian himself; but neither would he admit that a Socinian was not a Christian. So, though he did not write Socinian books, he republished those of others, and recommended in his list the most celebrated of the Fraternes Poloni. It is necessary to put the inquirer on his guard in reference to the bishop's reprints and recommendations."—Orme's Bibl. Bib., 460.

"It was an indication of the low state to which divinity had sunk that a Bishop of our Church, useful by his replies to Paine and Gibbon, should publish such a collection. . . . There is valuable learning enough, indeed, but little of that evangelical, experimental, and spiritual class of books which faithful ministers find so eminently useful, and much of that which is merely critical."—*Bickersteth's C. "An able and judicious answer to the contemptible work of a mischievous incendiary: it seems to have been singularly successful in producing clear and rapid conviction."—DR. THOMAS YOUNG: ubi infra.

"This is certainly a very able defence of Revelation against many old and obvious objections very forcibly urged. . . . The inspiration of the Evangelists, the divinity of Christ, &c., are here kept back; and the case is argued as if the writers of the Gospels were ordinary biographers, Christ a mere mortal inspired, &c."—Green's Diary of a Lover of Lit., 1810, 4to, 15.

"Dr. Parr considers this book as a valuable record of sound, just, and reasonable opinions on all the greatest questions of the times, most intimately connected with the stability and prosperity of the church, with the honour and welfare of the nation, and with the improvement, the order, and happiness of the world."

"His autobiography affords a singular display of great talents, high independence, and disappointed pride."—Orme's Bibl. Bib., 460.

"It is our office to pronounce, upon the evidence now before us, on his own intrepid and faithful exhibition of himself; and sorry we are to say that, in point of self-ignorance, vanity, rancour, and disappointed ambition, united with great original abilities, our country, more various in its combinations of intellect and temper than any other, has produced nothing similar or second to it since the example of Swift; and for the quiet of this church and state, or rather for the sake of human nature, we sincerely and devoutly wish that it may never be our lot to animadvert upon a third."—Rev. T. D. WHITAKER: Lon. Quar. Rev., Oct. 1817, 253.

This has been called (see Lon. Gent. Mag., 1822, i. 312, or Nichols's Illust. of Lit., viii. 631) a severe though just critique.

Other opinions have been expressed:

"Treated with great ability, but with too much severity. His chief mistake, indeed, seems to have been that he expected his literary merits alone to secure his political advancement; further than this, there is nothing disgusting, to a candid reader, in the sincerity with which he displays the consciousness of his own merits."—Dr. YOUNG: ubi infra.

"He possessed deep piety, a fine taste, great power of imagination, comprehensive theological knowledge, with a sound and discriminating judgment. His principal work, 'Theological Institutes,' deserves to be carefully studied. His Sermons are rich in evangelical sentiment, and beautifully varied in their subjects; and his Exposition of St. Matthew's Gospel is an admirable specimen of sacred interpretation. It is replete with sound divinity, and well adapted to promote the piety of the reader. The early death of such a man was a loss to the church at large; but he has left durable monuments of his sanctified intellect and pious zeal."—Dr. E. WILLIAMS: Christian Preacher, 5th ed., 367.

"Mr. Watson's book seems to be much esteemed."—Dr. Johnson to Boswell, Feb. 18, 1777.

"I am reading the Life of Philip II. by a Professor of St. Andrews. . . . To my utter astonishment, the man does not, as most biographers do when they write the life of a Charles I. or a Richard III., fall in love with his hero. On the contrary, he is so just and explicit, that I believe even Dr. Franklin would admit him to kiss his hand. But I have read only the first volume; the author may come about the second tome of many a man is a contradiction to his first."—Horace Walpole to the Countess of Ossory, Dec. 23, 1776: Letters, ed. 1861, v. 399. See, also, ROBERTSON, WILLIAM, D.D., p. 1828, supra, (quotation from Walpole.)

It was highly commended by Lon. Mon. Rev., 1777, i. 241, 345, and The Bee, vols. vii. and viii. Later critics have not endorsed these eulogies:

"Dr. Robertson was followed by Dr. Watson, his ape. The dull Aberdeen professor just re-echoed the elegant Principal's blunders in his Philip II.—a production at once clumsy and flimsy, that will shortly receive a due quietus in the great work on which Mr. Prescott has long been occupied."—Lon. Quar. Rev., Jan. 1853, art. v.: Cloister-Life of Charles V.

"The reign of Philip the Second . . . has become familiar to the English reader through the pages of Watson, who has deservedly found favour with the public for the perspicuity of his style,—a virtue, however, not uncommon in his day,—for the sobriety of his judgments, and for the skill he has shown in arranging his complicated story so as to maintain the reader's interest unbroken to the end. But the public, in Watson's day, were very fastidious in regard to the sources of information on which a narrative was founded. Nor was it easy to obtain access to those unpublished documents which constitute the best sources of information. Neither can it be denied that Watson himself was not so solicitous as he should have been to profit by opportunities which a little pains might have put within his reach,—presenting in this respect a contrast to his more celebrated predecessor, Robertson: that he contented himself too easily with such cheap and commonplace materials as lay directly in his path; and that, consequently, the foundations of his history are much too slight for the superstructure.

For these reasons, the reign of Philip the Second must still be regarded as open ground for English and American writers."—WILLIAM H. PRESCOTT: Pref. to Hist. of the Reign of Philip the Second, iii., iv., 1855.

"Watson's 'Reign of Philip the Second' might with equal propriety be styled 'The War of the Netherlands,' which is its principal burden."—WILLIAM H. PRESCOTT: N. Amer. Rev., July, 1837, 3. See, also, his Miscell., ed. 1855, 125, 642.

"The same diligent and faithful attention to facts, the same perspicuity of method, and the same simplicity of language, which characterized the History of Philip (see our Review for April, 1777), appear in an equal degree in Dr. Watson's part of the present work."—Lon. Mon. Rev., 1783, ii. 59.

"These works [Nos. 1 and 2] are of very little value. Heavy and inelegant in style, and showing no evidence of a comprehensive or philosophic mind, they are worthless even as a collection of materials; Watson having seldom gone to the original sources of information. The works of Prescott and others have in fact entirely superseded them, even for the general reader."—Knight's Eng. Cyc., Biog., vi. (1858) 554.

4to. 6. Compendium Memoriarum Localis, s. a., 8vo. Heber, Part 6, 3800, (q. v. for "Libellus rarissimus," &c.), £1 6s. 7. The first set of Italian Madrigalls Englished, 1590, 4to. 8. Amintæ Gavia, 1592, 4to. In Latin hexameters. Heber, Part 6, 3880, £1 15s. 9. The Tears of Fancie; or, Loue disdained, in LX. Sonnets, by T. W., 1593, 12mo. Heber, Part 4, 2869, wanting four leaves, but with an imperfect copy of S. Daniel's Complaint of Rosamond, £8 12s.

He was also the author of a number of fugitive verses; see The Phoenix Nest, 1593; England's Helicon, 1600; Davison's Poetical Rhapsodies, 1611; Collier's Bibl. Acct. of Early Eng. Poet., 1865.

George Steevens (Reed's Shaksp., i. 31) pronounces Watson "an elder and more elegant sonneteer than Shakspere;" Meres (Wits Treasurie, 1598) remarks that, "as Italy had Petrarch, so England had Thomas Watson;" and Nash (Have with you to Saffron Walden, 1596) says that "for all things he has left few his equals in England;" but later critics have assigned a much lower rank—few, indeed, have troubled themselves to assign any rank at all—to this so greatly-lauded poet.

"Has he painted the natural emotions of the mind or the heart? Has he given to those airy nothings which more or less haunt every fancy? Or has he not sat down rather to exercise the subtlety of his wit than to discharge the fulness of his bosom?"—SIR S. E. BRYDGES: Brit. Bibliog., No. xii., p. 4.

'a local habitation and a name'

"Of the sonnets of Watson, which were published about 1581, we . . . shall merely add here, that neither in their structure, nor in their diction or imagery, could they be, or were they, models for our author; and are indeed greatly inferior, not only to the sonnets of Shakspere, but to those of almost every other poet of his day."—DR. "Those who consider James Watt only as a great practical mechanic, form a very erroneous idea of his character. He was equally distinguished as a natural philosopher and a chemist, and his inventions demonstrate his profound knowledge of these sciences, and that peculiar characteristic of genius, the union of them for practical application."—SIR HUMPHRY DAVY.

"Dr. Priestley drew no conclusion of the least value from his experiments. But Mr. Watt, after thoroughly weighing them, by careful comparison with other facts, arrived at the opinion that they proved the composition of water. This may justly be said to have been the discovery of that great truth in chemical science. I have examined the evidence, and am convinced that he was the first discoverer, in point of time; although it is very possible that Mr. Cavendish may have arrived at the same truth from his own experiments, without any knowledge of Mr. Watt's earlier process of reasoning."—LORD BROUGHAM: Discourse of Nat. Theology, ed. 1856, 108, n.

"No man ever had a more eminent claim to be honoured by his country and revered by all generations."—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH: Speech, 1824.

"Perhaps no individual of his age possessed so much and such varied and exact information, had read so much, or remembered what he had read so accurately and so well."—LORD JEFFREY: ubi supra.

"He it was who, by his brilliant inventions, supplied England with the means of maintaining a deadly struggle, on which her very existence as a nation depended. And what was done to honour, during his lifetime, this new Archimedes, this benefactor of the whole human race, whose memory generations yet unborn will forever bless? A peerage is in England the highest of dignities, the greatest of rewards: you naturally conclude that Watt was made a peer. It was never even proposed."—ARAGO: Eloge historique de James Watt.

But there are other marks of public appreciation besides peerages: when, in 1841, the University of Edinburgh ordered from Sir Francis Chantrey a statue of Watt,—making the sixth in Great Britain,—the Gentleman's Magazine (1841, i. 74) remarked, "Even the statues to the Duke of Wellington are fewer in number than those to plain James Watt." But the Duke of Wellington had more substantial honours and rewards than statues. In 1863 a statue of James Watt, eight feet three inches in height, of Sicilian marble, was erected in Birmingham. See YOUNG, THOMAS, M.D., at end.

Present value, (1870,) about £6 to £8, according to binding and condition.

"Although he had long laboured under that painful disease which we have spoken of, and of which he eventually died, it was not until the year 1817 that he totally discontinued his professional pursuits. . . . He had by this time brought his great work, the 'Bibliotheca Britannica,' to a very considerable state of forwardness, and become interested in it and anxious for its completion. . . . He retired, therefore, with his family, to a small country-house about two miles from Glasgow, engaged several young men as amanuenses, (William Motherwell, the poet, Alexander, editor of The Casquet, &c.) and devoted himself exclusively to the compilation."—Chambers's and Thomson's Biog. Dict. of Em. Scots., ed. 1855, iv. 437: Robert Watt, M.D., (q. v.).

"Dr. Watt, the Author of the BIBLIOTHECA BRITANNICA, died when only a few of its sheets were printed off. He left the work, however, in such a state of forwardness as not to affect its completion. . . . In an undertaking of such magnitude, and so extensive in its scope,—having all the disadvantages of a first attempt, and the blunders and contradictions of numberless authorities to combat with,—many inaccuracies, doubtless, must have passed, and much must have been omitted. These every candid mind will make allowances for. If unwearied care and indefatigable labour for nearly twenty years—if the sacrifice of a useful life in the cause—was all that was necessary to render the BIBLIOTHECA BRITANNICA accurate and complete, there would now be little solicitude about its success."—Preface, vol. i.

"At his death, the publication of the 'Bibliotheca' devolved upon his two eldest sons, who devoted themselves to its completion with filial enthusiasm. They were both young men of the most promising abilities; and it is to be feared that their lives were shortened by the assiduity with which they applied themselves to the important charge that was so prematurely laid upon them. John, the elder of the two, [who had been engaged on the work for the four years preceding his father's decease,] died in 1821, at the early age of twenty; James, his brother, lived to see the work completed, but died in 1829, leaving behind him the deep regrets of all who knew and could appreciate his high character and brilliant talents. The printing of the 'Bibliotheca' [which was delayed for nearly a year by the destruction of a portion of the MS. by robbers, who threw it into the fire for the purpose of lighting an apartment] was completed in 1824, in four large quarto volumes. The first division or portion of it was printed in Glasgow, and the second in Edinburgh. Messrs. Archibald, Constable and Company, of Edinburgh, purchased the whole for about £2000, giving bills to that amount; but before any of the bills were honoured the house failed, and thus the family of Dr. Watt was prevented from receiving any benefit from a work to which so many sacrifices had been made, and upon which all their hopes depended."—Chambers's and Thomson's Dict., (ut supra), 439.

A melancholy sequel to this sad story has been recorded within the last few months:

"Miss Watt, the only surviving child of the greatest British bibliographer, Dr. Watt, has lately died at Glasgow, in a work-house. Hardly a fit place, this, for the country to let the daughter of such a man die in," &c.—Lon. Reader, May 28, 1864, 682, (q. v.).

"But in Bibliography let me not forget the notice and commendation of that wonderful work of the late Dr. WATT, called Bibliotheca Britannica. . . . Such a concentration of labour was hardly ever beheld; but the authors, Father and Son, both FELT Victims to their zeal. . . . To say that such a work, on so stupendous a scale, should be faultless, would be equally rash and ridiculous. On the contrary, it contains numerous errors, and must not be unlimitedly confided in. But its uses and advantages are manifest and indispensable. The history of the completion of this great labour is among the most curious on record."—DR. DIBDIN: Lib. Man., ed. 1825, Pref., xviii.

"After these imperfect observations on the utility and difficulties of Bibliography, the Editor will proceed to allude, in as few words as possible, to the plan and contents of Watt's 'Bibliotheca Britannica,' to show in what points these volumes supply information which is not contained in that valuable compilation. In speaking of the Bibliotheca Britannica, no praise can be too high; for, notwithstanding its imperfections, it contains a mass of most valuable matter, disposed in such form as to be of great assistance to persons desirous of ascertaining what works have been written on a particular subject or by a particular author. It is obvious, however, that, from the very extensive plan adopted by Watt, his work must necessarily be incomplete in various points, which, though of minor detail, are of great importance. Thus, for instance, he gives neither the collation nor prices of books; nor does he afford a guide to the best authors on any particular subject, or to the best editions,—information of the highest value to foreigners and students. . . . A work of considerable labour, but which, like all bibliographical labours in this country, was of no pecuniary advantage to the compiler or his heirs: is principally taken from Ames' Typogr. Antiq., by Herbert and Dibdin, the Monthly, Edinburgh, and Quarterly Reviews, the catalogues of the British Museum, Bodleian and Advocates' Libraries, Clarke's Bibliographical Dictionary and Supplement, &c. &c."—W. I continue notices of the Bibliotheca Britannica: "No doubt chargeable with many positive errors, as well as with important deficiencies; but it is, notwithstanding both, a remarkable performance for an individual, and an aid of very considerable utility in many literary investigations. It cannot be relied upon as an authority, but it is serviceable as a guide or indicator."—Knight's Eng. Cyc. Biog., vi. (1858) 569.

"There is no living author to whom British Art is so much indebted as to Mr. Alaric Watts. . . . The engravings which embellish 'The Literary Souvenir' of which he was for so long a time the Editor, have never been equalled in England since the abandonment of that ally-conducted publication. . . . This book of 'Lyrics of the Heart' was commenced twenty years ago, and many of the engravings were executed about that period. . . . As a series of fine engravings of admirable pictures, it has certainly not been equalled since the Annuals died. . . . The volume is a collection of Poems from the pen of Mr. Watts, with a few graceful and touching compositions by his lady. Many of them have long established in public favour."—*Lon. "In his 'Poetical Sketches,' an early work, as well as in his more recent 'Lyrics of the Heart,' Alaric Watts has given abundant proofs, if not of high creative strength, of gentle pathos, of cultivated intellect, and an eye and ear sensitively alive to all the genial impulses of nature, of 'home-bred delights and heart-felt happiness.'"—D. Mr. Watts was editor of The Leeds Intelligencer, 1822-24; of The Manchester Courier, 1824-25; assisted in The London Standard, 1827, and 1841-47; started the United Service Gazette, 1833, and was its sole editor and manager until 1843; from 1842 to 1847, inclusive, established, or assisted in establishing, upwards of twenty conservative journals in town and country, several of which became very profitable to their proprietors; after 1847 had no connection with the newspaper press. Watts, Isaac, D.D., b. at Southampton, July 17, 1674, studied from his 16th to his 19th year at an academy in London, kept by the Rev. Thomas Rowe, minister of the Independent Meeting-House in Haberdashers' Hall, and subsequently, at home, devoted two more years to his books; lived from 1696 to 1702 in the family of Sir John Hartopp, Stoke Newington, as tutor to his son; preached his first sermon July 17, 1698; in the same year was chosen assistant to Dr. Isaac Chauncy, pastor of the Independent congregation then meeting in Mark Lane, and on March 8, 1702, succeeded Dr. Chauncy in the pastoral office; was soon seized with a severe illness, which induced the congregation, June, 1703, to elect Samuel Price assistant minister, and this copartnership lasted for the rest of Watts's life; was attacked by a violent fever in 1712, and, on his partial recovery, (he never entirely recovered,) accepted an invitation to spend a week at the seat of his friend Sir Thomas Abney, (Lord Mayor of London in 1700,) at Theobalds, and remained at this delightful residence—preaching to and overlooking his congregation, or using his pen, as his health permitted—until his decease, Nov. 25, 1748. Sir Thomas died when the visit had extended over only about ten years; but the Doctor, who remained (not always willingly) a bachelor, spent twenty-six years more with the widow (who survived him a year) and her daughters.

"Here he enjoyed the uninterrupted demonstrations of the truest friendship. Here, without any care of his own, he had every thing which could contribute to the enjoyment of life and favour the unwearied pursuits of his studies. Here he dwelt in a family which, for piety, order, harmony, and every virtue, was a house of God. Here he had the privilege of a country recess, the fragrant bower, the spreading lawn, the flowery garden, and other advantages, to soothe his mind and aid his restoration to health; to yield him, whenever he chose them, most grateful intervals from his laborious studies, and enable him to return to them with redoubled vigour and delight."—Dr. GIBBONS, (see his Memoirs of Watts, 1780, 8vo;) quoted by Dr. Johnson in his Lives of the Poets, Cunningham's ed., 1854, iii. 250.

"Every Sabbath, in every region of the earth where his native tongue is spoken, thousands and tens of thousands of voices are sending the sacrifices of prayer and praise to God in the strains which he prepared for them a century ago; yea, every day 'he, being dead, yet speaketh,' by the lips of posterity in these sacred lays," &c.—JAMES MONTGOMERY: Introduct. Essay prefixed to his Christian Psalmist, 1825, 8vo. See, also, Blackw. Mag., xiv. 932, (by Prof. Wilson.)

"For Dr. Watts Mr. Montgomery has claimed the honour of being 'almost the inventor of hymns in our language,' and the claim is not extravagant."—N. Brit. Rev., Aug. 1857: Dr. Watts, (same in Liv. Age, liv. 641.)

"His ear was well tuned, and his diction was elegant and copious. But his devotional poetry is, like that of others, unsatisfactory. The paucity of its topics enforces perpetual repetition, and the sanctity of the matter rejects the ornaments of figurative diction. It is sufficient for Watts to have done better than others what no man has done well."—Dr. JOHNSON: ubi supra, 255, q. v. for comments on this much-criticised dictum. "Your works have long been my delight and study, the favourite pattern by which I would form my conduct and model my style."—Rev. James Hervey to Dr. Watts.

"Few men have left behind such purity of character or such monuments of laborious piety. He has provided instruction for all ages, from those who are lisping their first lessons, to the enlightened readers of Malebranche and Locke; he has left neither corporal nor spiritual nature unexamined; he has taught the Art of Reasoning and the Science of the Stars. . . . As a poet, had he been only a poet, he would probably have stood high among the authors with whom he is now [in Johnson's English Poets, 1779-81] associated. . . . He is at least one of the few poets with whom youth and ignorance may be safely pleased; and happy will be that reader whose mind is disposed by his verse, or his prose, to imitate him in all but his nonconformity, to copy his benevolence to man, and his reverence to God."—DR. JOHNSON: ubi supra, 254, 255.

"He was not only a devout and zealous Christian, but a profound scholar, a natural philosopher, a logician, and a mathematician. His life and conversation exhibited a pattern of every Christian virtue. For my own part, I cannot but think this good man approached as nearly to Christian perfection as any mortal ever did in this sublunary state."—DR. KNOX.

"Wit fell from him like occasional fire from heaven, and, like the ethereal flame, was ever vivid and penetrating."—DR. GRIBBONS.

"The Independents, as represented by Dr. Watts, have a just claim to be considered the real founders of modern English hymnody. No doubt Watts's taste was often faulty, and his style unequal; but more hymns which approached to a very high standard of excellence might be found in his works than in those of any other single writer in the English language."—SIR ROUNDELL PALMER, Q.C., M.P.: Lecture on English Church Hymnody, 1866.

"If Mrs. Barbauld is to be called the Watts of female hymn-writers, Mrs. Steele's poems present many characteristics which remind one of Wesley and Cowper."—Church Mon., (Boston,) July, 1865, 47: Female Hymn-Writers.

Twenty-two of Watts's hymns will be found in Rogers's Lyra Brit., 2d ed., 1868, 577-93.

"Dr. Watts's style is harmonious, florid, poetical, and pathetic; yet too diffuse, too many words, especially in his latter works; and his former are too much loaded with epithets; yet, on the whole, excellent. . . . All that he has written is well worth reading."—DR. DODDRIDGE.

"The style of all his works is perspicuous, correct, and frequently elegant; and, happily for mankind, his labours have been translated and dispersed with a zeal which does honour to human nature; for there are probably few persons who have studied the writings of Dr. Watts without a wish for improvement, without an effort to become wiser or a better member of society."—DR. Watts, Thomas, Senior Assistant Keeper in the Department of Printed Books, and also Chief Superintendent of the New Reading-Room in the British Museum, has, during nearly thirty years' connection with that institution, (he was appointed an officer in 1838,) rendered to the literary public services of the most valuable character.

"Mr. Watts, (who is master of fourteen or fifteen different languages), by his able arrangements, has made easily accessible to the public the whole of the old library, and also the very important additions to it purchased under Mr. Panizzi's direction: from less than two hundred and fifty thousand volumes it has increased to upwards of half a million of books, in all branches of literature and science. The department of Hungarian, Polish, and Russian Literature claims distinct mention: in collecting this, Mr. Watts's knowledge of those languages has been of singular advantage; and the British Museum now possesses the finest collection of Hungarian, Polish, and Russian books out of the several countries where those languages are spoken. . . . Under Mr. Watts's very efficient administration, the New Reading-Room has become a centre of attraction to hundreds of readers, who daily prosecute their researches there."—Thomas Hartwell Horne, D.D., Senior Assistant Librarian in the British Museum, to S. Austin Allibone, Oct. 19, 1858.

In this Letter Mr. Watts proved that "The English Mercurie" was a forgery: in a further letter on the subject (Authorship of the Fabricated "Earliest English Newspaper") in The Gentleman's Magazine for May, 1850, 485-491, he tells us that the manuscript (executed about 1740) of the "English Mercurie" is in the handwriting of Philip Yorke, afterwards second Earl of Hardwicke, (infra), and bears two or three verbal corrections in the handwriting of Dr. Thomas Birch. To this excellent Cyclopædia (to which I frequently have occasion to refer my readers) Mr. Watts contributed many articles, (Libraries, &c.) Of his sketches, (chiefly of Spaniards, Hungarians, Danes, Poles, Swedes, and Russians,) about one hundred and fifty in number, in the Biographical Division, I am able to name only the following: Clavigo, Cosma de Kőrös, Jorgen Jorgensen, Mickiewicz, Oehlenschläger, Tegner, and Thukouky. The critical reader of these articles will agree with me that, in an enumeration of the many languages of which Mr. Watts is master, the English tongue (it is not always the case with the vernacular of a linguist) should occupy a conspicuous place. It is greatly to be desired that the whole of Mr. Watts's biographical articles just referred to, (as well as any not republished from the original Penny Cyclopædia,) and those contributed by him to the Biographical Dictionary of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, &c., should be offered to the public in a collective shape, to rank with—3. Essays on Language and Literature; Reprinted, with Alterations and Additions, from the Transactions of the Philological Society and elsewhere, in prep., 1868, 8vo. See, also, Edin. Rev., Jan. 1855, art. ii.: Cardinal Mezzofanti, and Note at end of the number; RUSSELL, CHARLES WILLIAM, D.D., No. 2.

I must now add the name of Thomas Watts to the long list of those friends who have cordially encouraged me in those arduous literary labours the completion of which they were never to behold. He died, of disease in the heart, (induced by inflammation of the femoral artery, caused by an accident whilst descending from his carriage at Bridgenorth, Shropshire,) at his residence in the British Museum, Sept. 9, 1869. From 1837 to 1857 he was an Assistant Librarian, from 1857 to 1866 Assistant Keeper of the Printed Books, and Superintendent of the Reading-Room, and from August, 1866, until his death, Keeper of the Printed Books, in the British Museum. Among his literary services should be enumerated papers in The Spirit of Literature, in 1830, entitled Notes of a Reader; articles in The Mechanics' Magazine, 1836-37, signed P. P. C. R., on the British Museum Library; contributions to The Quarterly Review, The Athenæum, Proceedings of the Philological Society, &c.; bibliographical notes in F. Lawrence's Life of Fielding, 1855, p. 8vo, and the suggestion (see London Literary Gazette, 1828, 334) which resulted in the formation of The Royal Geographical Society of England. The following statements of the invaluable results of his assiduous labours deserve a permanent record:

"In the course of the ten years from 1851 to 1860, inclusive, the number of separate books ordered at my suggestion cannot have been less than 80,000; and to select those orders required the examination of at least 600,000 titles of books, in Greek and Latin, in French, Italian, Spanish, and Portuguese, in German, Swedish, Danish, and Dutch, in Russian, Polish, Bohemian, and Hungarian. I have also had occasion to prepare lists of desiderata in Welsh, Icelandic, and Chinese, and I had the pleasure of drawing up, under your inspection, the first large list of American orders which was ever sent across the Atlantic from the Museum. . . . The object which has been kept in view during the last three-and-twenty years has been to bring together, from all quarters, the useful, the elegant, and the curious literature of every language; to unite with the best English library in the world the best Russian library out of Russia, the best German out of Germany, the best Spanish out of Spain, and so for every language, from Italian to Icelandic, from Polish to Portuguese. In five of the languages in which it now claims this species of supremacy—in Russian, Polish, Hungarian, Danish, and Swedish—I believe I may safely say that, with the exception of perhaps fifty volumes, every book that has been purchased by the Museum within the last three-and-twenty years has been purchased at my suggestion. I have the pleasure of reflecting that every future student of the less-known literatures of Europe will find riches where I found poverty,—though, of course, the collection in all these languages together forms but a small proportion of the vast accumulations that have been added during your administration and that of your successor." See Amer. Lit. Gaz., Nov. 1, 1869, 3.

"Mr. Watts was not solely a bibliographer and librarian: he was also a ripe scholar, a philologist, and a linguist. His knowledge extended over the whole range of the Indo-European languages. His essays on Cardinal Mezzofanti, on the Welsh and Hungarian languages, on Encyclopedias, &c. &c., are spoken of with great approval. He had yielded several years ago to the urgent requests of friends to prepare a volume of his collected writings; but his accession to the responsible and laborious post of Keeper, coupled with his great conscientiousness, prevented his getting it ready for the press before his death. There is a prospect, however, that it will be published by-and-by. The country has lost in Mr. Watts a faithful servant, the circle in which he moved a kind friend, and the public an adviser ever ready to oblige and help."—Trübner's Amer. and Orient. Lit. Record, Sept. 16, 1869, 538.

"Mr. Watts possessed a most remarkable memory. He could instantly point out the press and shelf of probably more than 100,000 works. He liked to meet Americans, and always prided himself upon knowing something of the personal history of every prominent one who came to see him. The writer well remembers two attempts to test this faculty. One day, without any notice, he took a friend into Mr. Watts's recess, and said, abruptly, 'Mr. Watts, let me introduce to you Professor Silliman, of Yale College.' 'Oh,' said he, rising and cordially extending his hand, 'how very fortunate, Dr. Benjamin Silliman, that you should appear here, of all places in the world, just fifty years since your first visit, when in your Travels you wrote a most interesting account of our library. Come, let us go and see your rare little book, and at the same time I will show you the library, and afford you the opportunity of writing another account, showing our half-century's progress.' And he walked off the professor to a remote part of the library and laid his hand on the volume, as if it had been one for his daily reading. A similar readiness delighted and astonished the Hon. George P. Marsh, with respect to his privately-printed Icelandic grammar."—HENRY STEVENS: Boston Daily Advertiser, Sept. 28, 1869, (an excellent sketch.)

What a blessing to letters would it have been if Mr. Watts had retained his position, energy, and faculties until he had attained the ripe age of Sir Henry Ellis, (Principal Librarian of the British Museum, 1827–56, who died Jan. 15, 1869, in his 91st year.) The Principal Librarian at present (1870) is Mr. John Winter Jones, (see PANIZZI, ANTONIO.) Mr. Watts was succeeded as Keeper of the Printed Books by William Brenchley Rye, (q. v.) Mr. Edward Edwards is now engaged upon the Lives of the Founders, Augmentors, and other Benefactors of the British Museum, 1570–1870; Based on New Researches of the Rolls House, &c., Trübner & Co., 2 vols. 8vo. He will do less than justice if among the "benefactors" the name of Planta, Ellis, Panizzi, Jones, Watts, Rye, Horne, Bullen, Madden, Holmes, or Sims, be looked for in vain.

Wayland, Francis, D.D., LL.D., one of the most eminent of American divines and philosophers, was b. of English parentage, in the city of New York, March 11, 1796; graduated at Union College, Schenectady, 1813; a student of medicine, 1813-16; student in the Theological Seminary at Andover, 1816-17; Tutor in Union College, 1817-21; pastor of the First Baptist Church, Boston, 1821-26; Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in Union College, 1826; President of Brown University, in which office he manifested the most distinguished ability, 1827-55, and subsequently occupied the pulpit of the First Baptist Church, Providence; d. Sept. 30, 1865. The halls and mansions added to the buildings, many of the most valuable books in the library, and well-appointed philosophical apparatus, a library fund of $25,000, and the sum of $131,000 subscribed for the benefit of the institution, are among the durable monuments—we do not esteem them as the most valuable fruits—of the late administration of Brown University.

15. Notes on the Principles and Practices of Baptist Churches, 1857, 12mo. Originally pub. in The New York Examiner.

"We do not remember to have met anywhere in the same space with so much practical wisdom on sermon-making, on the delivery of sermons, and on the manners of the pulpit, as is condensed into the last fifty pages of this book."—N. Amer. Rev., lxxxiv. 270.

16. Sermons [8] to the Churches, 1858, 12mo. Commended by N. Amer. Rev., lxxxviii. 273, (by A. P. Peabody, D.D.), Amer. Presbyterian, &c. 17. Salvation by Christ; a Series of [25] Discourses on some of the Most Important Doctrines of the Bible, Bost., 1859, 12mo. See No. 10.

"Regarded as a most valuable permanent contribution to the special theological department it represents."—HENRY T. TUCKERMAN.

18. Letters [10] on the Ministry of the Gospel, 1863, 16mo. Addressed to Deacon Heman Lincoln. Commended by N. Amer. Rev., July, 1863, 283, (by A. P. Peabody), and Evangel. Quar. Rev., July, 1863, 601. See, also, Amer. Presby. and Theolog. Rev., July, 1863. 19. Memoir of the Christian Labors, Pastoral and Philanthropic, of Thomas Chalmers, D.D., LL.D., 1864, 12mo. Based on Memoirs of the Life and Writings of Dr. Chalmers, Edited by Rev. W. Hanna, D.D., Edin., 1851, 4 vols. 8vo.

Dr. Wayland also published many occasional sermons, discourses, addresses, &c., (see a list of some of these in J. R. Bartlett's Bibliography of Rhode Island, Providence, 1864, l. p., r. 8vo, p. 268), and contributed to N. Amer. Rev., Chris. Rev., Amer. Presby. and Theolog. Rev., &c. See, also, PHELPS, AUSTIN, D.D., No. 2; WAYLAND, REV. H. LINCOLN; WAYLAND, MRS. JANE; WILLIAMS, ROGER, No. 6.

"As a thinker and expounder, Dr. Wayland is justly regarded as the head of his denomination. In many essential particulars he is to the American what John Foster was to the English Baptists."—HENRY T. TUCKERMAN.

"Les ouvrages économiques du docteur Wayland sont d'excellents manuels, clairs, exacts, judicieux, et qui ont de l'autorité en l'Angleterre comme en Amérique. Il joint, comme philosophe et comme orateur, d'une grande réputation, et l'on vante la dignité de son caractère."—G. VAPERRAU: Dict. univ. des Contemp., Paris, 1858, 1762.

"Few works which have so little ornament as are attractive and agreeable as this able thinker. They have the natural charm which belongs to the display of active, various, and ready strength. Every thing that proceeds from his pen has a character of originality."—R. W. GRISWOLD, D.D.: Prose Writers of America, 4th ed., 1862, 365.

"He has a vigorous and logical mind, and writes with clearness and energy. He has a wide range and strong grasp of thought, and a power both of intellectual construction and analysis. His deep religious convictions, and his sensibility to moral beauty, save his writings from the dryness which is apt to characterize the productions of minds of so much logical acuteness."—GEORGE S. HILLARD: First-Class Reader, ed. 1856, 397.

Mungo Park's pathetic account of the hospitality and kindness of women will ever be famous. Mr. Webbe's experience of the sex was less fortunate. He was taken prisoner by the Turks in a sea-fight during a voyage from Alexandria to Leghorn in 1572. Being a gunner by profession, he was, in 1583, made master-gunner of the Admiral's galley in an expedition to the "Land of Prester John [Turkestan (?)], within 18 degrees (1080 miles) of the sun." In describing a battle that took place there, he says,

"But it is worthy of memorie to see how the women of ye towne did pille themselves with their weapons, making a great massacre upon our men, and murdered 500 of them in such speedie and furious sort as is wonderfull: we needed not to have feared their men at all, had not their women bin our great overthrow, at which time I my self was maister Gunner of the Admiral's Gally, yet chaine greuously, and beaten naked with a Turkish sword flailing, for not shooting where they would have me, and where I could not shoot."

Webster, Charles R., d. 1834, aged 71, for many years a bookseller of Albany, New York, established May 28, 1784, and for forty years conducted, The Albany Gazette; and published, 1784 et seq., Webster's Calendar, or The Albany Almanac, still (1870) continued.

Webster, Daniel, a son of Ebenezer Webster, a soldier of the Old French War and of the Revolution, was b. in Salisbury, New Hampshire, Jan. 18, 1782; graduated at Dartmouth College, 1801; studied law first with Thomas W. Thompson, of Salisbury, and subsequently with Christopher Gore, of Boston, and was admitted to the Suffolk Bar, 1805; practised law at Boscawen, 1805–7, and at Portsmouth, 1807–16; removed to Boston, August, 1816; M.C., 1813-17 and 1823-27, and U. S. Senator, 1828-41 and 1845-50; visited England, Scotland, and France, 1839; Secretary of State under Harrison, 1841, under Tyler, 1841-43, and under Fillmore, July 20, 1850, until his death, at his seat at Marshfield, Mass., October 24, 1852.

His Speeches and Forensic Arguments were published in Boston, 3 vols. 8vo: vol. i., 1830, &c.; ii., 1835, &c.; iii., 1843, &c.; vols. i., ii., iii., 8th ed., 1841. See reviews in N. Amer. Rev., xli. 231, (by E. Everett,) lix. 44, (by E. P. Whipple: repub. in his Essays and Reviews, 1852, i. 172.) His Diplomatic and Official Papers whilst Secretary of State were issued in New York, 1848, 8vo. Lists of his single speeches, &c., and publications concerning him, will be found in Cat. Lib. Mass. Hist. Soc., 1860, ii. 578-581, and Cat. Pub. Lib. of the City of Boston, 1861, 875-877. The former collections of his writings were superseded by the following: The Speeches, Forensic Arguments, and Diplomatic Papers of Daniel Webster; with a Notice of his Life and Writings by Hon. Edward Everett, Boston, (Little, Brown & Co.) 1851, 6 vols. 8vo; i. p., r. 8vo; 11th ed., 1858, (Fowle, Dec. 1864, 769, $120;) new ed., 1864. Sale to Jan. 1, 1865, about 30,000 copies, and on i. p., 300 copies. Reviewed in N. Amer. Rev., lxxv. 84, (by Francis Bowen.) These volumes should be accompanied by The Private Correspondence [1798-1852] of Daniel Webster; Edited by [his son] Fletcher Webster, (Dec. 1856,) 1857, 2 vols. 8vo; i. p., r. 8vo, (Fowle, at sup., 770, $40;) 4th ed., 1857; last ed., 1864. Sale to Jan. 1, 1865, nearly 5000 copies, and of i. p. nearly 300 copies. These volumes contain nearly 1000 letters from, and several hundred letters to, Daniel Webster.

"Simple and straightforward, these letters [of Mr. Webster] are models of a homely business style: they teem with illustrations of early struggles, of party tactics, of domestic cares, and public responsibilities; with graphic touches of character, and with side-long glimpses into American manners and institutions."—Lon. Critic, 1858. See, also, Chris. Exam., 1857.

He contributed four papers to the North American Review: vols. iv. 107, vii. 225, viii. 63, xi. 197. For Hayne's opinion of Webster's speech against his views, see Webster's Works, ed. 1852, ii. 387.

We are not left in doubt as to Mr. Webster's own estimate respecting the relative importance of his public addresses:

"My speech [January 26, 1830] in reply to Mr. Hayne . . . must be regarded as No. 1 among my political efforts. . . . My speech of the 7th of March, 1850, [for the Union and the Constitution, in the Senate of the United States,] is probably the most important effort of my life, and as likely as any other to be often referred to."—Letters to Edward Everett, Feb. 3, 1851, and Sept. 1851: Private Correspondence of Daniel Webster, 1857, ii. 415, 473.

I have quoted Mr. Webster's opinion of one of the most formidable of his opponents,—John C. Calhoun: it is proper to cite Mr. Calhoun's estimate of Mr. Webster: "When your name was mentioned, he remarked that 'Mr. Webster has as high a standard of truth as any statesman whom I have met in debate. Convince him, and he cannot reply; he is silenced; he cannot look truth in the face and oppose it by argument. I think that it can be readily perceived by his manner when he feels the unanswerable force of a reply.' He often spoke of you in my presence, and always kindly and most respectfully."—Mr. A. W. Venable to Daniel Webster, Washington, June 1, 1850: Private Correspondence of D. Webster, i. 351.

My readers will thank me for the following estimates, by eminent authorities, of Webster's merits as an orator:

"I admire your style of address. It is stringent and terse, simple and strong. It is the severe simplicity and strength of Demosthenes, and not the art and elegance and Copia verborum of Cicero. The latter was the characteristic of the speeches and writings of our friend Story. But yours is the better model for a great political speaker."—Chancellor Kent to Daniel Webster, Nov. 11, 1845: Private Correspondence of Daniel Webster, ii. 202.

"The best speeches of Webster are among the very best that I am acquainted with in the whole range of oratory, ancient or modern. They have always appeared to me to belong to that simple and manly class which may be properly headed by the name of Demosthenes. Webster's speeches sometimes bring before my mind the image of the Cyclopean walls,—stone upon stone, compact, firm, and grand. After I had perused, and aloud, too, the last speech which you sent me, I was desirous of testing my own appreciation, and took down Demosthenes, reading him aloud too. It did not lessen my appreciation of Webster's speech. You know that I insist upon the necessity of entire countries for high, modern citizenship; and all my intercourse with Webster made me feel that the same idea or feeling lived in him, although he never expressed it. Webster had a big heart,—and for that very reason was a poor party-leader in our modern sense. Every thing in Webster was capacious, large;—he was a statesman of Chatham's type, I think. I believe he thought he was strong in political economy, but I think this was his weak point. I do not recollect that he was ever profound in that branch of statesmanship; and he may have become occasionally in this branch a special pleader, which he never was on other questions, and which many others have almost always been in their public career."—FRANCIS LIEBER: Letter to S. Austin Allibone, Jan. 16, 1860.

"To test Webster's oratory, which has ever been very attractive to me, I read a portion of my favourite speeches of Demosthenes, and then read—always aloud—parts of Webster; then returned to the Athenian; and Webster stood the test. I have done it several times."—Ibid., Feb. 27, 1870.

Many other opinions before me want of space forbids me to quote: of some the eulogy is so indiscriminate and extravagant—placing Mr. Webster on a par, at least, with the greatest names of all times and countries—that I feel no temptation to quote. What, for instance, can be more inconsiderate than to rank the eight volumes of the Works and Correspondence of Daniel Webster with the eight volumes—replete with eloquence, philosophy, history, poetry, and wit—of the Works and Correspondence of Edmund Burke? I have perused the whole of these with much satisfaction,—it would be hypocrisy to add, with equal profit. Such injudicious comparisons as those which I have rebuked provoke a ridicule which nothing but Mr. Webster's substantial merits—and this is not the least proof of his real greatness—are able to repress.

To the above I am now (May, 1870) able to add a supplementary note. By Mr. Webster's will, Edward Everett, George Ticknor, C. C. Felton, and George Ticknor Curtis were appointed his literary executors, and Fletcher Webster was requested to transfer to them such papers relating to his father's personal and public history as in his judgment should be placed at their disposal.

"This direction," Mr. Curtis writes to Messrs. D. Appleton & Co., Oct. 1869, "was fully carried out by Mr. Fletcher Webster, and by him, assisted by Mr. Abbott, a great mass of papers was transferred to the literary executors, by whom they were carefully arranged and preserved. Very important materials were also obtained by them from other sources, and placed with the general collection of papers relating to Mr. Webster. When finally completed, this collection was found to be exceedingly rich, and to cover the whole of Mr. Webster's life, from his boyhood. The deaths of Mr. Everett, President Felton of Harvard, and Col. Fletcher Webster, who was killed in battle at the head of his regiment in 1862, occurred before any steps had been taken for writing and publishing a Life of the great statesman. This duty, and the determination of the proper period for publication, thus devolved solely on Mr. Ticknor and myself. Unwilling, at his advanced age, to undertake any new literary labour of magnitude, my kinsman, while ready to give me his advice, requested me to write the Life, and placed in my hands the whole of the materials belonging to the literary executors, together with his own correspondence with Mr. Webster, extending over a period of nearly forty years. This occurred in the winter of 1866. We were both then of opinion that the time had arrived for the final fulfilment of the purpose implied in the creation of the literary executorship. I therefore immediately began the writing of the work which I now place in your hands for publication."

Accordingly, Mr. Curtis's Life of Daniel Webster was published, N. York, 2 vols. 8vo: i., Dec. 1869: ii., April, 1870.—two recently for criticism to have discharged its judicial office.

Webster, James Wedderburn. Genealogical Account of the Wedderburn Family: Printed at the Author's Private Press at Nantes, 1819, 8vo.

Webster, John, one of the greatest of English dramatists, a member of the Merchant Taylors' Company, is thus introduced to us by Gerard Langbaine:

"An Author that liv'd in the Reign of King James the First; and was in those Days accounted an Excellent Poet. He joynd with Decker, Marston, and Rowley, in several Plays; and was likewise author of others, which have even in our Age gain'd Applause: As for Instance, Appius and Virginia, Dutchess of Malfy, and Vittoria Corrombana; but I shall speak of these in their Order."—Account of the English Dramatick Poets, Oxf., 1691, 8vo, 508.

In Henslowe's Diary he is noticed as writing plays in conjunction with Decker, Drayton, Middleton, Munday, Chettle, Heywood, and Wentworth Smith. To these meagre accounts few particulars can be added: see Dyce's and Hazlitt's Prefaces, ut infra.

1. With DECKER, THOMAS, The Famous History of Sir Thomas Wyatt, Lon., 1607; 1612, 4to. 2. With DECKER, THOMAS, Northward Hoe, sundry Times acted by the Children of Pauls, 1607, 4to. Inglis's Old Plays, 33, £2 1s. See No. 3. 3. With DECKER, THOMAS, Westward Hoe, divers Times acted by the Children of Pauls, 1607, 4to. Rhodes, 921. £1 14s.

"Westward Hoe" and "Northward Hoe" are full of life and bustle, and exhibit as curious a picture of the manners and customs of the times as we shall anywhere find. Though by no means pure, they are comparatively little stained by that grossness from which none of our old comedies are entirely free."—DYCE: ubi infra.

4. The White Devil; or, The Tragedy of Paulo Giordano Vrsini, Duke of Brachiano, with the Life and Death of Vittoria Colombaro, the famous Venetian Curtizan, 1612, 4to: Fowle, Dec. 1864, 771, $11.25; 2d ed., 1631, 4to; 1634, 4to; 1665, 4to; 1672, 4to: Fowle, 773, $11.25; 1685, 4to. Repub. in Dodsley's Collec. of Old Plays. See No. 9.

"His 'White Devil' and 'Dutchess of Malfy,' upon the whole, perhaps, come the nearest to Shakespeare of any thing we have upon record: the only drawback to them, the only shade of imputation that can be thrown upon them, 'by which they lose some colour,' is, that they are too like Shakespeare, and often direct imitations of him, both in general conception and individual expression."—HAZLITT: Lects. on the Dram. Lit. of the Age of Elizabeth, Lect. III.

"The White Devil, or Vittoria Corombaro, is not much inferior in language and spirit to the Duchess of Malfy; but the plot is more confused, less interesting, and worse conducted. Mr. Dyce, the late editor of Webster, praises the dramatic vigour of the part of Vittoria, but justly differs from Lamb, who speaks of 'the innocence-resembling boldness she displays in the trial scene.' It is rather a delineation of desperate guilt losing in a counterfeited audacity all that could seduce or conciliate the tribunal. Webster's other plays are less striking."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, 4th ed., 1854, iii, 123.

The Devils Law Case; or, When Women goe to Law the Devill is full of Business; a new Tragedy, 1623, 4to. Inglish's Old Plays, 116, £1 5s. 7. The Tragedy of the Dutchesse of Malfy: The perfect and exact Copy, with diuerse things printed that the length of the Play would not beare in the Presentment, 1623, 4to: Fowle, 772, $11.25; 1640, 4to; 1678, 4to; with Alterations, 1708, 4to; Reconstructed for Stage Representation by R. H. Horne, 1850. Mr. Horne's labours are reviewed in Lon. Athen., 1850, 1272, and the representation of the piece, as altered, at Sadler's Wells Theatre, Nov. 1850, is noticed on page 1225; see, also, 1857, 1511. Mr. Phelps sustained the part of Duke Ferdinand; young Mr. Waller, an American, played Antonio; the Duchess was represented by Miss Glyn. Some years later the play was acted in Philadelphia, and elsewhere, with Emma Waller as the Duchess; and in Jan. 1864, Miss Marriott played the same part at Sadler's Wells: see Lon. Reader, 1864, i, 146.

"The Dutchess of Malfy is not, in my judgment, quite so spirited or effectual a performance as The White Devil. But it is distinguished by the same kind of beauties, clad in the same terrors. I do not know but the occasional strokes of passion are even profounder and more Shakspearian; but the story is more laboured, and the horror is accumulated to an overpowering and insupportable height."—HAZLITT: ubi supra.

"In his pictures of wretchedness and despair he has introduced touches of expression which curdle the very blood with terror and make the hair stand erect. Of this, the death of the Dutchess of Malfy, with all its preparatory horrors, is a most distinguishing proof. The fifth act of his Vittoria Corombaro shows, also, with what occasional skill he could imitate the imagination of Shakespeare, particularly where its features seem to breathe a more than earthly wildness."—DR. DRAKE: Shaksp. and his Times, ii, 555. See, also, i, 350.

"This is the most celebrated of Webster's dramas. . . . The scenes are wrought up with skill, and produce a strong impression. . . . In the character of the Duchess of Malfy herself there wants neither originality nor skill of management, and I do not know that any dramatist after Shakespeare would have succeeded better in the difficult scene where she discloses her love to an inferior. There is perhaps a little failure in dignity and delicacy, especially towards the close; but the Duchess of Malfy is not drawn as an Isabella or a Portia; she is a love-sick widow, virtuous and true-hearted, but more intended for our sympathy than our reverence."—HALLAM: ubi supra.

8. The Monument of Honour, at the Confirmation of the right worthy Brother John Gore, &c., 1624, 4to. Heber, Part 4, £6 2s. 6d. Not repub. by Dyce. 9. Appius and Virginia; a Tragedy, 1634, 4to. Heber, Part 2, 6426, £2 2s. Under the title of The Roman Virgin, by Betterton, 1679, 4to. The original was repub. in vol. v. of Old Plays, [24.] being a Continuation of Dodsley's Collection, Edited by C. W. Dilke, 1814–16, 6 vols. 8vo; i, p., r. 8vo.

"In Appius and Virginia he has done perhaps better than any one who has attempted a subject not, on the whole, very promising for tragedy: several of the scenes are dramatic and effective; the language, as is usually the case with Webster, is written so as to display an actor's talents; and he has followed the received history sufficiently to abstain from any excess of slaughter at the close."—HALLAM: ubi supra.

"Webster, I think, is one of the best of our ancient dramatists."—SIR WALTER SCOTT: Letter to Rev. A. Dyce, March 31, 1831: Lockhart's Scott, ch. lxxix.

"His imagination possessed very considerable powers, and ought to be ranked, I think, the next below Ford. With less of poetic grace than Shirley, he had incomparably more vigour; with less of nature and simplicity than Heywood, he had a more elevated genius and a bolder pencil. But the deep sorrows and terrors of tragedy were peculiarly his provinces. . . . Webster is not without comic wit, as well as power of imagination; his plays have lately met with an editor [Mr. Dyce] of taste enough to admire his beauties, and not very over-partial in estimating them."—HALLAM: ubi supra, 122, 123.

"His imagination had a fond familiarity with objects of awe and fear. The silence of the sepulchre, the sculptures of marble monuments, the knolling of church-bells, the ceremonies of the corpse, the yew that roots itself in dead men's graves, are the illustrations that most readily present themselves to his imagination."—REV. A. DYCE: ubi infra.

"This compact and careful edition of Webster's dramatic works."—Lon. Athen., 1857, ii, 1512.

"Webster was formed upon Shakspeare. He had no pretensions to the inexhaustible wit, the all-penetrating humour, of his master; but he had the power of approaching the terrible energy of his passion, and the profoundness of his pathos, in characters which he took out of the great muster-roll of humanity and placed in fearful situations and sometimes with revolting imaginings almost beyond humanity. . . . It is clear what dramatic writers were the objects of Webster's love. He did not aspire to the 'full and heightened style of Master Chapman,' nor would his genius be shackled by the examples of 'the laboured and understanding works of Master Jonson.' He belonged to the school of the romantic dramatists."—CHARLES KNIGHT: Act. Shakspeare, 2d ed., 1867, viii, 516. (William Shakspeare: a Biography.)

Mr. W. F. Fowle and Mr. F. F. Webster, Noah, LL.D., a descendant, by his father, of John Webster, Governor of Connecticut in 1656, and by his mother, of William Bradford, Governor of Plymouth in 1621, was b. in Hartford, Connecticut, Oct. 16, 1758; entered Yale College in 1774, and, after serving in the militia raised to oppose General Burgoyne, graduated there in 1778; subsequently pursued the study of the law in the intervals of school-teaching, and in 1781 was admitted to the bar; in 1783 published in The Connecticut Courant a series of papers, signed Honorius, in vindication of the Congressional soldiers' pay-bill; and in the same year issued his First Part of a Grammatical Institute of the English Language, (Webster's Spelling-Book,) of which the sale was so large that, "during the twenty years in which he was employed in compiling his American Dictionary, the entire support of his family was derived from the profits at a premium for copyright of less than a cent a copy;" in 1785 travelled in the Southern States, and in May of that year visited Mount Vernon, and presented General Washington with his Sketches of American Policy, "the first distinct proposal made through the medium of the press," Dr. Goodrich thinks, (Memoir of Noah Webster), "for a new Constitution of the United States;" in 1787 resided in Philadelphia as superintendent of an Episcopal Academy; Dec. 1787, to Nov. 1788, published in the city of New York the American Magazine, (8vo, pp. 882,) which failed of success, as did also another projected enterprise of his of the same kind; practised law at Hartford (where, in 1789, he married a daughter of William Greenleaf) from 1789 to 1793; incited by zeal for the principles of Washington's administration, in Nov. 1793, removed to the city of New York, and established a daily paper, entitled The Minerva, and afterwards a semi-weekly paper, (made up from the standing matter of The Minerva), entitled The Herald,—names subsequently changed to those of The Commercial Advertiser and The New York Spectator; in 1795 published ten papers signed Curtius, (subsequently, with two essays by Chancellor Kent on the same subject, collected in a pamphlet by a bookseller of Philadelphia,) in explanation and defence of Jay's Treaty with Great Britain; from 1798 to 1812 lived at New Haven, chiefly occupied with philological pursuits, and from 1807 diligently employed in the preparation of his American Dictionary of the English Language, (first edition, 1828, 2 vols. 4to,) the improvement of which was for the rest of his days—a period of thirty-six years—the great business of his life; from 1812 to 1822 resided at Amherst, where he took an active part in the establishment of the new college, which has made the name of that town so deservedly dear in many parts of the land; in 1822 removed to New Haven, and, with the exception of a visit to Europe, June, 1824, to June, 1825, there remained until his death, in the fear of God and faith of Christ, May 28, 1843, in his 85th year.

Our list of his publications may very appropriately be introduced by some observations from the pen of his son-in-law and biographer, Dr. Chauncey A. Goodrich:

"There was hardly any department of literature which he had not explored with lively interest at some period of his life. He wrote on a greater variety of topics than perhaps any other author of the United States;—on the foundations of government, the laws of nations, the rights of neutrals, the science of banking, the history of his country, the progress of diseases, and the variations of climate; on agriculture, commerce, education, morals, religion, and the great means of national advancement, in addition to the principal theme of his life, philology and grammar. . . . In conclusion, it may be said that the name of Noah Webster, from the wide circulation of some of his works, is known familiarly to a greater number of the inhabitants of the United States than the name, probably, of any other individual except the FATHER of his COUNTRY. Whatever influence he thus acquired was used at all times to promote the best interests of his fellow-men. His books, though read by millions, have made no man worse. To multitudes they have been of lasting benefit, not only by the course of early training they have furnished, but by those precepts of wisdom and virtue with which almost every page is stored."—Memoir of Noah Webster: Prefixed to C. G. Goodrich's and Noah Porter's Quarto Editions of Webster's Dictionary.

York, 1843, 8vo, pp. 373. Composed chiefly of some of his earlier pamphlets, (as Nos. 8 and 15;) the papers signed Curtius; papers read before literary and philosophical societies (he contributed to Mem. Amer. Acad. Sci., Connee. Acad. of Arts and Sci., Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., &c.) and printed in their Transactions. See Gen. Rep., iv. 313, (Webster on Temperature of Winter.)

We have reserved for separate consideration—37. WEBSTER'S AMERICAN DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, N. York, S. Converse, 1828, 2 vols. 4to, pp. 1936, words, 70,000 to 80,000, $20, 2500 copies. Edited by E. H. Barker, Lon., Black & Co., 1830-32, 4to, in 12 Parts, forming 2 vols., £5 10s.; reduced in 1835, H. G. Bohn, £2 12s. 6d., 3000 copies. (The New York ed. was also abridged by J. E. Worcester, D.D., 1829, r. 8vo, and by the author, 1830, &c., sm. 4to: see, also, GOODRICH, CHAUNCEY, D.D.) Second edition, N. Haven, 1840, 2 vols. r. 8vo, pp. 2024, 3000 copies. Third edition, Revised and Enlarged by C. A. Goodrich, D.D., LL.D., Springfield, Mass., G. & C. Merriam, (Oct. 1847,) 1848, r. 4to, pp. 1492: subsequently pp. 1592. This and the Second edition contain several thousands of new words. Fourth edition, (Pictorial,) by C. A. Goodrich, D.D., LL.D., Springfield, Mass., 1859, 4to, pp. 1758; words, 99,798. Fifth edition, (Illustrated,) thoroughly Revised, and greatly Enlarged and Improved, by C. A. Goodrich, D.D., LL.D., and Noah Porter, D.D., Riverside Press, Cambridge, Printed by H. O. Houghton and Company; Electrotyped at the Boston Stereotype Foundry; Springfield, Mass., G. & C. Merriam, London, Bell & Daldy, 1864, &c., r. 4to, pp. 1840; words, upwards of 114,000, pictorial illustrations, over 2000. One of the most beautiful books of which modern typography can boast, and one of the most useful works which the language has produced. This is called Webster's Dictionary,—and properly enough, as it is built upon his foundation; but it is really the embodiment of the labours of many philologists:

"More than thirty different scholars have been employed upon this revision at compensated labor, and most of them for very considerable periods of time, in addition to numerous voluntary contributions and valuable suggestions. Full thirty years of earnest literary toil, we estimate, have been expended upon this work since the revision of 1847, and the results are presented in this edition."—Publishers' Advert., Sept. 1864.

Of these assistants we find the names (arranged by us in alphabetical order) which follow in Dr. Noah Porter's very satisfactory Preface, (July, 1864: Rev. Fisk P. Brewer, Captain William P. Craighill, James D. Dana, John S. Dwight, Daniel C. Gilman, Rev. Chauncey Goodrich, James Hadley, Alexander L. Holley, Thomas Holt, Chester S. Lyman, Dr. C. A. F. Mahn, of Berlin, Prussia, (etymologies,) Lowell Mason, William C. Minor, M.D., Rev. John M. Morris, E. B. O'Callaghan, J. C. Perkins, Samuel Porter, Eugene Schuyler, R. Cresson Stiles, M.D., Thomas A. Thacher, Joseph Thomas, M.D., J. Hammond Trumbull, William G. Webster, William A. Wheeler, William D. Whitney, and Arthur W. Wright. Among the contributors of materials are Charles J. Lukens and U. S. Dana; among the suggesters of proper lexicographical principles, special obligations are acknowledged to George P. Marsh. The Prefaces and Appendix contain a vast amount of valuable matter: e.g., see WHEELER, WILLIAM A.

To Webster's Dictionary we have referred on a preceding page, (3. Dr. JOHNSON AS A LEXICOGRAPHER:) and we shall, before concluding this article, refer the student to authorities where he will find the alleged merits and demerits of the author's philological system and suggestions amply discussed. As regards the practice of authors and publishers, we estimate from data before us that in about 10,000,000 of volumes of school-books—a very large majority of the whole number—published annually in the United States, Webster is recognized as the general standard of orthography. Charles James Fox remarked of Gibbon's great work, "If any man were to say, 'I don't like his history: I will acquire the information another way,' he would find it a very hard task," (Recollec. by S. Rogers, Lon., 1859, 39.) We—not an orthographical Websterian—apply this observation to the contemner of The American Dictionary. The Dictionaries of Webster, Worcester, Johnson of 1773, (reprinted by H. G. Bohn,) Johnson by Todd, Johnson by Latham, Richardson, Hyde Clarke, Crabbe, Craig, Ogilvie, the Dictionary of the Philological Society of London, (see Proposals for its Publication, 1859, 8vo, pp. 32.) Crabb's Synonyms, and Taylor's Tooke's Diversions of Purley, should stand on the same shelf.

No. III. was abridged from the Quarto Dictionary by Joseph E. Worcester, D.D., (1829,) and by Chauncey A. Goodrich, D.D., (1847, 1856;) No. IV., by W. A. Wheeler, with the assistance, in some portions, of William G. Webster, 1867; No. V., by William G. Webster, (1845,) and by Chauncey A. Goodrich, D.D., (1856;) No. VI., by W. G. Webster, C. A. Goodrich, and Noah Porter, D.D., (1856;) Nos. VII. to XII., inclusive, by William G. Webster, (q. v.)

The annual aggregate sale of these Dictionaries (exclusive of No. IV.) reached 200,000 copies, and the total sale about 2,000,000 in 1853: what it is at present we know not. Of Webster's Spellers, Dictionaries, and other educational works, the aggregate sale to Jan. 1, 1865, was over 50,000,000. For the Quarto Dictionary there is a continuous demand from India, China, Turkey, Africa, and "every quarter of the globe."

H. G. Bohn, 4to and r. 8vo; Bogue, 4to, r. 8vo, or. 8vo, and 18mo; Ingram, r. 8vo; Cooke, 8vo; Ward & Lock, 8vo, 18mo, and imp. 16mo; Routledge, r. 8vo, 12mo, and 18mo; Scott, p. 8vo and square; Kent, 4to; Tegg, square; Cassell, 8vo.

Bell & Daldy published, in Parts, the New Illustrated Royal Quarto Unabridged, Springfield, Mass., 1864, pp. 1840. This noble volume contains of printer's ems 18,492,562, (the unabridged crown quarto of 1848 contains 14,070,880,) or about eight times as many as the common English Bible, which contains, with the Apocrypha, 2,369,960 ems: and is probably the largest volume in typographical bulk ever published. Its manufacture in 1865 consumed paper at the rate of 100 tons per annum, paying a tax to the Government of $600 per month, and giving constant employment to about 100 persons.

Bell & Daldy also publish The People's Dictionary of the English Language, by Noah Webster and W. A. Wheeler, 26 monthly Parts, r. 8vo, 6d. ea., 1868-70. To which add Webster's Complete English Dictionary, by Goodrich, new ed., Routledge, 1869, r. 8vo, 12s.; and Webster's Etymological Dictionary, by A. Macpherson, Cassell, 1869, or. 8vo, 3s. 6d.

"I think it [Webster's 4to, 1864] superior, in most respects, to any other English Dictionary known to me. Undoubtedly the best etymologicon we yet possess of the language; its vocabulary is as ample as could well be given in the compass of a single volume; its definitions are, in general, exact and discriminating, and its pronunciation is apparently conformable to the best usage."—GEORGE P. MARSH, Florence, Italy, March 7, 1866.

Dr. Goodrich tells us that while Dr. Webster was preparing the quarto edition of 1828

"The results of his inquiries into the origin and filiation of languages were embodied in a work, about half the size of the American Dictionary, entitled 'A Synopsis of Words in Twenty Languages.' This, owing to the expense of the undertaking, has not yet been published; though its principal results, so far as our language is concerned, are briefly given in tracing the etymology of our leading terms."—Memoir of Noah Webster, August, 1847, ut supra.

We hope that so valuable a contribution to philology will not always slumber in manuscript.

Webster, Pelatiah, b. at Lebanon, Conn., 1725; graduated at Yale College, 1746; preached at Greenwich, Mass., in the winter of 1748-9; about 1755 became a merchant in Philadelphia, and acquired a large estate; being an active Whig, he was, in Feb. 1778, thrown into prison by the British and was confined in the city jail for 132 days; d. 1795. He published an essay urging the redemption of Continental money in 1776, and subsequently issued: 1. An Essay on Free Trade and Finance, Phila., 8vo, Nos. I.-VII., 1779 et seq. 2. Patris Augustini in Sacre Scripture Locos Annotationes, ex omnibus ipsis Operibus collectæ et iusta SS. Librorum, Capitum et Versuum ordinem Digestæ,—Sylvæ Duois, 1652, 12mo. Liber rarissimus. See Orme's Bibl. Bib., 461; WEDDERBURN, DAVID, No. 8.

Wedderburn, Alexander, b. at Chesterhall, East Lothian, Scotland, 1733, was made Solicitor-General, 1771, Attorney-General, 1778, and Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and Lord Loughborough, 1780; was Lord High Chancellor, Jan. 27, 1793-April, 1801; created Earl of Rosslyn, 1801; d. Jan. 3, 1805. Observations on the State of the English Prisons, 1793. He subsequently published a Treatise on English Poor-Laws; and he contributed critiques on Barclay's Greek Grammar, the Decisions of the Supreme Court, and the Abridgment of the Public Statutes, to the (old) Edinburgh Review of 1755, repub. Lon., 1818, 8vo; see Preface, by Sir J. Macintosh. He also criticised, (in 1774, before the Committee of the Privy Council), not in the most gentle manner, Dr. Benjamin Franklin.

"One of the few great advocates who have also been great in the House of Commons."—LORD MACAULAY: Edin. Rev., Oct. 1841, 223; Warren Hastings.

"His decisions evince little of the learning of his profession, and do not even show a very legal structure of the understanding."—LORD BROUGHAM: States. of Time of Geo. III., ed. 1855, i. 170.

Wedderburn, David, one of the most eminent of Scottish Latin Poets, is supposed to have been b. about 1570; was appointed conjunct master (with Thomas Reid) of Aberdeen Grammar-School, 1602; teacher of "the high class" of the University, 1614; teacher in humanity in Marischal College, 1619; retired from his Grammar-School, 1640; d. between 1651 and 1664.

Wedderburn, James, b. in Dundee, about 1500, d., as is supposed, in England, 1564-5. Ane Compendious Buik of Godly and Spiritual Sangs, collectit out of sundrie Partes of the Scripture, wyth sundrie of uther Ballates changed out of Prophane Sanges, for avoyding of Sinne and Harlotrie, Edin., 1597, 12mo. This is the earliest known edition; but the book is thought to have been in use before 1549. Among the contributors to the volume are reckoned John and Robert Wedderburn, ("supposed to have been the principal translators of the psalms that were used before the Reformation,") brothers of James.

Lord Hailes published a specimen of the Buik in 1765, and Sir J. G. Dalyell republished the whole of it in his Scottish Poems of the Sixteenth Century, Edin., 1801, 2 vols. 12mo, also in 1 vol. large 8vo. Mr. Weems was certainly the most popular biographer of his day; he has never been esteemed the most veracious.

"Some of Mr. Weems's pamphlets on drunkenness would be most admirable in their effects, but for the fact that you know not what to believe of the narrative. There are passages of deep pathos and great eloquence in them. His histories of Washington and Marion are very popular, but the same must be said of them. You know not how much of fiction there is in them. That of Washington has probably gone through more editions than all others, and has been read by more persons than that of Marshall, Ramsay, Bancroft, and Irving put together."—BISHOP MEADE: Old Churches, Ministers, and Families of Virginia, 1887, ii. 235.

"DEAR SIR:

"I find the following minute in a Diary kept by my father, who was for a time in Europe in the year 1808. While in Dublin, he was almost daily in social intercourse with the family of Mr. Weld, the author of Travels in the United States.—I do not remember the title of the book. At breakfast, Mr. Weld said, 'You may say to the people in America that I am sorry I ever wrote the book. I was out of humour when I wrote and sent it to the press, and would afterwards, on reflection, have recalled it, but it was too late. At different periods of life we see things in different points of view. Were I now to visit America, I would no doubt form very different opinions of things; and were it not for my engagements I would certainly do it.'"

"If this is of any interest to you, it is at your service. I have frequently heard the same thing from my father, when Mr. Weld's book was more read than it ever will be again, and was regarded with great indignation. The Diary came into my hands only a short time since."

"Yours, very respectfully,

JOSEPH H. DULLES,

March 16, 1868."

Wellington, Arthur Wellesley, Duke of, third son of the first Earl of Mornington, and brother to the Marquess Wellesley, was b. in Ireland,—either at Dangan Castle, Meath, or at Mornington House, Dublin,—probably in April, 1769, (his mother says May 1, but according to the registry of St. Peter's Church, Dublin, he was baptized there on the 30th of April;) educated at Eton College, and at the military academy at Angers, France; commissioned as an ensign in the 73d regiment of foot, Mar. 7, 1787; major of the 33d Foot, April 30, 1793, and lieutenant-colonel of the same, Sept. 30 ensuing; Member Irish Parliament for Trim, 1790; served in India, Feb. 1797–March, 1805; married Lady Catherine Pakenham, third daughter of Edward, second Earl of Longford, April 10, 1806; Earl of Wellington and Marquess of Wellington, 1812, and Duke of Wellington, 1814; gained the battle of Waterloo, June 18, 1815; d. at Walmer Castle, Sept. 14, and buried in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, under the dome and beside the remains of Lord Nelson, Nov. 18, 1852. A detailed account of the military and civil life of the great soldier and statesman will not be expected in a work of this character; yet, as the Duke certainly was (as he styled himself, when referring to his many published Despatches) "one of the most voluminous of authors," he is not to be excluded from a Dictionary of English Literature.

"The Duke of Wellington is about to print the mass of documents from which the 'despatches' of his illustrious father, the Field-Marshal, were compiled. The whole material is to be put in type, and then such passages as would injure the reputations of living persons are to be stricken out. Whether the expurgated work is then to be published is not stated. Two copies of the original, however, are to be printed and deposited at Apsley House and Strathfieldsaye, the Duke's town and country residences, and the third with Wellington's bankers. The claims of the British Museum and the public offices for copies are rejected. As these are the only places where the future historian of England during the Duke's life could advantageously consult the work, the original sources of information might as well have remained in manuscript, or, better, might have been destroyed. The deposits at the places mentioned can hereafter only be looked at with mingled wonder and awe, as a magazine from which might be drawn documents condemning to eternal infamy the ancestors of coming generations; whereas, if open to the inspection of the public, the contents, in most instances, would probably be harmless. There seems to be a sort of magic charm attached, in every Englishman's mind, to the phrase 'my banker,' and papers, no matter how trifling in value, receive an immense accession of importance by being deposited with the man of money. The present Duke of Wellington appears to be afflicted with the same delusion, and letters in reality of no more interest than those of Captain Pomponius Nix will be carefully concealed in the treasure-vaults of London, and the passer-by will shudder when he thinks what dreadful documents lie buried within sound of his footsteps."—August, 1867.

"The peculiar characteristic of this great man, and which, though far less dazzling than his exalted genius and his marvellous fortune, is incomparably more useful for the contemplation of the statesman, as well as the moralist, is that constant abnegation of all selfish feelings, that habitual sacrifice of every personal, every party consideration to the single object of strict duty,—duty rigorously performed in what station soever he might be called on to act. This was ever perceived to be his distinguishing quality; and it was displayed at every period of his public life, and in all matters, from the most trifling to the most important."—LORD BROUGHAM: *States. of the Time of Geo. One of our own countrymen, (whose sudden demise we have within the last few years been called upon to mourn,) who was so kind as to furnish us with reminiscences of several of his English acquaintances, (see BYRON, GEORGE GORDON, LORD; MACKINTOSH, RT. HON. SIR JAMES; SCOTT, SIR WALTER,) communicated the following for insertion in this article:

"BOSTON, 25th Aug., 1863.

"MY DEAR SIR:

"The Duke of Wellington was 73 years old when my personal acquaintance with him commenced. He had a slight stoop at that time, and was a little hard of hearing; but his mental faculties were unimpaired; he was punctual and laborious in the discharge of his official duties as Commander-in-Chief of the Army; was never absent from his seat in the House of Lords; and most assiduous in his attendance on the Queen on state occasions. You will find on page 88 of the 'Mount Vernon Papers' a letter addressed to me, in which he gives an interesting, almost pathetic, account of the number and urgency of his engagements. No one in England at that time—not even the prime minister—possessed equal personal influence. Although ten or twelve years only had elapsed since he was hissed by the mob, and obliged to protect the windows of Apsley House with iron shutters, (which still retained their place,) all recollections of his party associations had passed away. Every loyal Englishman thought of him only as the man who had saved England and Europe at Waterloo. The Queen never failed to treat him with a most pleasing mixture of deference and tenderness, shown to no other subject. At a concert at Windsor Castle, the Duke, on one occasion, overcome with weariness, dropped asleep. As he was seated by her side, this in any other person would have been the height of indecorum. The Queen, instead of taking offence, tapped him gently on the shoulder with her bouquet, to wake him up, as she rose to depart, saying, 'Come, Duke!' She treated him as Frederick the Great did Zieten.

"The Duke, as all know, was born in the same year as Napoleon. It is not so generally known that, while the latter was a pupil of the military school at Brienne, young Wellesley was at the military school at Angers, in France; there not being at that time any military schools in England. He told me, however, that he never was nearer to Napoleon than at Waterloo, and consequently never saw him, except indistinctly through a telescope. I have, in a little speech at a dinner in honor of Mr. Thomas Baring, [see Everett's Orations and Speeches, iii. 1859, 138,] related the circumstances, as told me by the Duke, of the transmission of the news of the battle of Waterloo to London by a clerk of the elder Rothschild, in anticipation of the Duke's official despatch. Mr. Cornmen states, as a sufficient indication of the Duke of Wellington's matter-of-fact character, that in all his official despatches the word 'glory' does not occur. I have not taken the trouble to verify that remark: the word 'glory' certainly does not occur in the report of the battle of Waterloo, in which, if anywhere, it might be expected. It is somewhat noticeable, however, that in a short letter of condolence on the death of his brother, written to the Earl of Aberdeen the same day, the word 'glory' occurs twice and 'glorious' once.

"The Duke habitually practised a dignified reserve with reference to the important events of his career, and especially the most important of them all. He was rather impatient of unseasonable allusions to them. Mr. Rogers used to tell an amusing anecdote of his answer to a person who, at the Duke's official dinner to the Judges of Strathfieldsay, indulged in a somewhat prolix and florid allusion to the battle of Waterloo: 'Yes,' said the Duke, 'it was a ——— smash.' On proper occasions, however, he was willing to converse on the subject. At a ball at Devonshire House, I was standing by him, and he spoke of a request for information which had been made to him by a person who wished to write an account of the great battle. He said that he had answered his correspondent that more might be learned by a careful study of the accounts already published than he could state from personal knowledge; adding, 'How impossible it would be to-morrow morning to give a particular account of the movements going on before our eyes in this ball-room!'

"The following is a copy of a note addressed to me by the Duke, acknowledging the receipt of a copy which I had sent him of the fac-simile of Washington's account of his expenses during the Revolutionary war:

"WALMER CASTLE, September 16, 1842.

"DEAR SIR:

"I have been very much flattered by your obliging note, and gratified by your present, both of which I received this morning.

"I have always felt the highest respect for the character of General Washington, and I will peruse these memorials of him with the utmost interest.

"I am very grateful to you, and I thank you for having thought of me, and that I was worthy of possessing these documents.

"Believe me, dear sir, ever your most faithful and obedient humble servant,
"WELINGTON.

"I sincerely congratulate you upon the termination of Lord Ashburton's mission, of which I heard this morning."

"The last time but one that I saw the Duke of Wellington was on the day of my audience of leave (Aug. 8, 1845) at Buckingham Palace. It so happened that a cabinet council was held the same morning, and several of the members of the government were already in attendance, the duke among them. Encouraged by the kindness of his parting words, I expressed a wish to carry home with me his likeness, as a present from himself. At the House of Lords the next day, he told me he had taken down from the wall in his private room, and sent to me, a framed engraving from a portrait by Sir Thomas Lawrence. It was accompanied with a note, of which the following is a copy:

"LONDON, Aug. 9, 1845.

"MY DEAR SIR:

"I have the pleasure of sending you an excellent impression of the drawing made of myself by the late Sir Thomas Lawrence. This is supposed to be the best of all that have been published. I have signed my name under it.

"Ever, dear sir,

"Yours most faithfully,

"WELINGTON."

"As you requested of me some of my personal recollections of the Duke, you will pardon the egotism unavoidably connected with them.

"I remain, dear sir, with great regard,

"Very truly yours,

"EDWARD EVERETT.

"S. AUSTIN ALLIBONE, Esq."

In a letter dated a few days later, (Aug. 31, 1863,) Mr. Everett remarks,

"I might have added the following to the anecdotes of the Duke of Wellington. The saying which it ascribes to him seems to me a remarkably happy one, and in a different tone from any thing else on record of him.

"On a visit to Mr. Sydney Smith, at Coombe Florey, where I met his elder brother Robert, (commonly called Bobus, and thought to be quite equal in natural capacity to Sydney, though in a wholly different line,) he told me that he was the fellow-student of the Duke at Eton, and in the class before him. They fell into a dispute about their clothes, left on the bank of the river while bathing, and the older boys insisted that they should fight. Bobus, though the elder, came off second best. They did not see each other after parting at Eton till they met in India. Wellesley as an officer in high command, Smith as Attorney-General (I think) for the Presidency of Bombay. 'Do you remember,' says Smith, 'that the last time we met we fought, and that I got the worst of it?' 'Yes,' said Wellesley, 'I believe you did; but I hope the next time we fight we shall be on the same side.'

"Nothing, it seems to me, could have been more neatly or handsomely said."

When Sydney Smith heard his brother tell of this early triumph of Wellington, he responded, "So he began with you, and finished with Bonaparte."

Wells's Greek Testament has been warmly commended.

"I have been careful to collate more than once this very edition, word for word, with Griesbach's second edition; and I must protest that the variations of the latter are, in general, so frivolous that if a correct text were all I wanted, I could very freely commit to the flames nearly the whole that I have acquired from Griesbach."—ARCHDEACON ROBERT NARES.

"PRACTICAL ANÆSTHESIA.—The American Medical Association, at its recent meeting in Washington, D.C., in pursuance of the recommendation of the section of Practical Medicine, adopted by unanimous vote a resolution giving the credit of the discovery of Anæsthesia to the late Dr. Horace Wells, of Hartford, Ct. This decision, it is reported, is due chiefly to a recent letter on the subject from Sir James Young Simpson, just deceased. The gas which Dr. Wells discovered would annihilate pain during surgical operations, it will be remembered, was nitrous oxide."—Public Ledger, Phila., May 23, 1870.

Welsted. See, also, WELSTED.

Welsted, Leonard, b. at Abington, Northamptonshire, 1689, and educated at Westminster School, in early life, by the influence of the Earl of Clare, (afterwards Duke of Newcastle,) obtained a situation in the Office of Ordnance, which he held until his death, in 1747. 1. Epistle to Mr. Steele on the King's Accession, Lon., 1714. 2. The Genius: on Occasion of the Duke of Marlborough's Apoplexy, 1717. This was commended by Steele and attributed to Addison. 3. Epistle to Dr. Garth on the Duke's Death. 4. The Triumvirate; or, A Letter in Verse from Palemon to Celia from Bath, 1718. This is a satire on Gay, Arbuthnot, and Pope's unsuccessful dramatic attempt, Three Hours after Marriage; and he directed several occasional pieces against Pope: for these offences he was impaled in The Dunciad:

"Flow, Welsted, flow! like thine inspirer, beer:

Though stale, not ripe; though thin, yet never clear;

So sweetly mawkish, and so smoothly dull;

Meady, not strong; o'erflowing, though not full."

"His pieces, though they bear evident marks of negligence, at the same time discover a sufficient portion of genius to deserve the pains which his editor has taken to rescue him from oblivion. . . . Wood (see Athen. Oxon., Bliss's ed., ii. 414) asserts that he was the author of the following: The Office and Duty of Executors, &c., 8vo, 1612. Legal bibliographers (Bridgman, Worrall, Clarke) assert that the first ed. was pub. 1641, 4to. It is certain that three editions were pub. in 1641: 1st in two Parts, 4to; 2d, 12mo; 3d, with the name of Thomas Wentworth for the first time, 12mo. Later editions: 1656;

1663; 1672; with Appendix by T.M., (Thomas Manley,) 1676; again, 1689, (the ed. referred to by Comyns;) with a Supplement by H. Curzon, 8vo, 1703, 1720, 1728; with additions, 8vo, 1762; Dublin, 2 vols. 8vo, 1763; with additions by Serjeant George Wilson, Lon., 8vo, 1774; with additions by Henry Jeremy, 8vo, 1819; again, by H. Jeremy, called 14th ed., 8vo, 1829; repub., 1st Amer. ed., by E. D. Ingraham, Phila., 8vo, 1832. This is supposed to be the book quoted in the margin of The Touchstone (first pub. in 1641) as Judge Dodderidge's Treatise and Additions to Judge Dodderidge's Treatise, (referring, it is presumed, to the edit. of 1641, 2 Parts, 4to;) and it is by several authors ascribed to Sir John, and is sometimes cited as Dodderidge's Executors.

Wesley, Highway Account-Book, Lon., 1838.

Wesley, Charles, younger brother of John Wesley, was b. at Epworth, Lincolnshire, 1708, and educated at Westminster School and at Christ Church, Oxford, to which he was elected, 1726; ordained deacon and priest, and accompanied General Oglethorpe as his Secretary to Georgia, all in 1735; travelled in America, preaching to the Indians, and visiting Boston, and returned to England early in 1737; laboured as a preacher among the Methodists (he was one of the founders of the society) until his death in London, March 29, 1788. His sons Charles and Samuel were eminent musicians. 1. Hymns for the Public Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 9, 1746, Lon., 1746, 8vo. 2. Hymns and Sacred Poems, Bristol, 1749, 2 vols. 12mo; 2d ed., 1755–56, 2 vols. 12mo. 3. Hymns for the Nativity, 4th ed., 1750, 12mo. 4. Hymns for the Ascension Day, Lon., 1753, 12mo. 5. Gloria Patri, &c., or Hymns to the Trinity, 3d ed., 1753, 12mo. 6. Funeral Hymns, 3d ed., 1753, 12mo; 1759, 12mo. 7. Hymns for our Lord's Resurrection, 1754, 12mo. 8. Hymns for the New Year's Day, 1755, 12mo. 9. Hymns for those that seek and those that have found Redemption, 1755, 12mo. 10. Hymns for the Year 1756, Bristol, 1756, 12mo. 11. Hymns on God's Everlasting Love, 2d ed., 1756, 12mo. 12. Hymns of Intercession for all Mankind, 1758, 12mo. 13. Hymns on the Expected Invasion, 1759, 12mo. 14. Hymns for the Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 29, 1759, 12mo. 15. Short Hymns on Select Passages of the Scriptures, 1762, 2 vols. 12mo; 1768, 2 vols. 12mo. 16. Hymns for the Use of Families, and on Various Occasions, 1767, 12mo. 17. Hymns for the Fast Day, 4th ed., Lon., 1780, 12mo. 18. Hymns for the Watch Night, s. a., 12mo. In John Wesley's Hymn-Book for the use of his Connection, compiled in 1779, 513 of the 560 Hymns are Charles Wesley's; and of the 208 Hymns added in 1830, 112 are Charles Wesley's: so that of the 768 Hymns in the collection now in use by English Wesleyans 625 are by our author. Dr. Rogers (see his Lyra Brit., 2d ed., 1868, 594, 675) says that "he published 4100 hymns and left upwards of 2000 in manuscript;" and a later authority (Amer. Lit. Gaz., April 1, 1869, 269) asserts that he "wrote seven thousand hymns." His published hymns would occupy about 3000 closely-printed pages. Mr. David Creamer, of Baltimore, owns a large collection of Wesleyan poetry. John Wesley had a good opinion of his brother's sacred poetry:

"In these Hymns," he remarks in the preface to one of his collections, "there is no doggerel, no botches, nothing put in to patch up the rhyme, no feeble expletives. Here is nothing turgid or bombast on the one hand, or low and creeping on the other. Here are no cunct expressions, no words without meaning. Here are (allow me to say) both the purity, the strength, and the elegance of the English language, and at the same time the utmost simplicity and plainness, suited to every capacity."

"This," observes a late critic, (in Knight's Eng. Cyc., Biog., vi., 1858, 644), "is a just character of Charles Wesley's poetry, both in his hymns and other compositions."

"Next to Dr. Watts, as a hymn-writer, undoubtedly stands the Rev. Charles Wesley. He was probably the author of a greater number of compositions of this kind, with less variety of matter or manner, than any other man of genius that can be named."—JAMES MONTGOMERY: Christian Psalmist, 1825, 8vo: Introd. Essay.

Wesley, John, one of the greatest generals and governors of modern times, the son of the Rev. Samuel Wesley, was b. at Epworth, Lincolnshire, June 17, O.S., 1703; educated at the Charter-House, where he was admitted in 1714, and at Christ Church, Oxford, to which he was elected in his seventeenth year; ordained deacon by Bishop Potter, Sept. 19, 1725; elected Fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, March, 1726, and on Nov. 7 of the same year appointed Greek Lecturer and Moderator of the Classes; officiated as curate to his father at Wroote, Aug. 1727–June, 1729; ordained priest at Oxford by Bishop Potter, Sept. 22, 1728; in June, 1729, returned to Oxford to discharge his duties as Moderator, and joined the association, composed of his brother Charles and about fourteen other students, already distinguished by the contemptuous appellations of The Holy Club, The Godly Club, The Bible Moths, The Bible Bigots, The Sacramentarians, and—a title destined to long continuance—The Methodists; resided at Oxford, where he obtained some pupils, and was a Tutor in Lincoln College, Nov. 1729–Oct. 1735; accompanied General Oglethorpe and Charles Wesley to Georgia, sailing Oct. 14, 1735, and, after preaching with much success, and taking some religious lessons from the Moravians, returned to England, Feb. 1, 1738; renewed his connection with the Moravians, (from whom he finally separated himself in July, 1740), and, according to his own account, became converted at a religious meeting at a quarter before nine o'clock on the evening of May 24, 1738; set out for Germany, to visit the Moravians at Herrnhut, June 15, 1738; met Count Zinzendorf at Marienborn, and was brought before the prince-royal (afterwards Frederick the Great) at Weimar; returned to England about the middle of September, 1738, and early in the next year commenced that course of zealous ministerial labour which was terminated only by his death, March 2, 1791, in his 88th year. During these fifty-three years, it was computed that he travelled about 225,000 miles and preached more than 40,500 sermons,—not including addresses, exhortations, and speeches. For a long time he travelled usually on horseback; in his later excursions he used a chaise; "nor do we believe," remark his biographers Coke and Moore, "there could be an instance found during the space of fifty years wherein the severest weather hindered him even for one day."

Referring to his good health, when upwards of seventy, he writes,

"The chief reasons are, my constant rising at four for about fifty years; my generally preaching at five in the morning,—one of the most healthy exercises in the world; my never travelling less, by sea or land, than four thousand five hundred miles in a year."

In his eighty-fourth year he writes,

"About five in the evening I preached at Kilsail. No house would contain the congregation; so I preached in the open air. The wind was piercingly cold, but the people regarded it not. Afterwards I administered the Lord's Supper to about a hundred of them, and then slept in peace."

When about eighty-seven, he thus rejoices:

"Blessed be God, I do not slack my labours: I can preach and write still."

In February of the next year (1791) he caught cold, and from this illness he never recovered.

"His body lay in a kind of state in his chapel at London the day previous to his interment, dressed in his clerical habit, with gown, cassock, and band, the old clerical cap on his head, a Bible in one hand, and a white handkerchief in the other. The funeral service was read by one of his old preachers. When he came to that part of the service, Forasmuch as it hath pleased God to take unto himself the soul of our dear brother, his voice changed, and he substituted the word father; and the feeling with which he did this was such, that the congregation, who were shedding silent tears, burst at once into loud weeping." See Southey's Life of Wesley.

"The Life of Wesley [by Southey] will probably live. Defective as it is, it contains the only popular account of a most remarkable moral revolution, and of a man whose eloquence and logical acuteness might have made him eminent in literature, whose genius for government was not inferior to that of Richelieu, and who, whatever his errors may have been, devoted all his powers, in defiance of obloquy and derision, to what he sincerely considered as the highest good of his species."—Lord MACAULAY: Edin. Rev., Jan. 1830: Southey's Colloquies on Society; and in Macaulay's Essays.

At the time of his death, the number of Methodists in connection with him in European America and the West India Islands was 80,000. It is to be regretted that so good a man was not happy in his domestic relations. About 1750 he married Mrs. Vizelle, a widow with four children. She gave him a great deal of trouble, and even ran away from him several times: she tried the experiment once too often. "Non eam reliqui," Wesley writes in his Journal, "non dimisi, non revocabo: I did not forsake her, I did not dismiss her, I will not recall her." This was in 1771: she survived the separation ten years; they had no children. Wesley was a good scholar: he compiled short Hebrew, Greek, Latin, French, and English Grammars, and wrote and spoke Latin, French, and Italian.

"His face," remarks Mr. Hampson, "was one of the finest we have seen. A clear, smooth forehead, an aquiline nose, an eye the brightest and the most piercing that can be conceived, and a freshness of complexion scarcely ever to be found at his years, and impressive of the most perfect health, conspired to render him a venerable and most interesting figure." In his demeanour "there was a cheerfulness mingled with gravity,—a sprightliness which was the natural result of an unusual flow of spirits and was accompanied by every mark of the most serene tranquillity."

It will be naturally inferred that a man who had seen so much of human nature, read so much, (he had perused many books during his solitary journeys,) talked, preached, and thought so much, was a most interesting companion. On this point we have the highest, not the most tolerant, authority to adduce:

"He [Dr. Johnson] said, 'John Wesley's conversation is good, but he is never at leisure. He is always obliged to go at a certain hour. This is very disagreeable to a man who loves to fold his legs and have out his talk, as I do.'"—Boswell's Johnson, year 1778.

"Of John Wesley he said, 'He can talk well on any subject.'"—Ibid., year 1778.

"To have gained such a youth may justly confirm me in my own opinion."—Dr. Johnson to John Wesley, Feb. 6, 1776: Ibid.

Johnson was complaining to Mrs. Hall, Wesley's sister, that the former had paid him too short a visit. "Why, Doctor," exclaimed the lady, "my brother has been with you two hours." "Two hours, madam!" rejoined the Doctor: "I could talk all day, and all night too, with your brother!"

JOHN WESLEY AS AN AUTHOR.

"To Mr. Wesley's other labours we may add his many controversial tracts against the Bishops Lavington and Warburton, Drs. Middleton, Free, and Taylor, Hall, Toplady, &c., and his other works, on various subjects of divinity, ecclesiastical history, sermons, biography, &c., which were printed together in 1774, in 32 vols. 8vo. These and his other labours he continued to almost the last of a very long life."—Chalmers's Biog. Dict., xxxi. 308.

"There are at least two collected editions of his works: one in 52 vols. 8vo, printed immediately after his death; another in 16 vols. 8vo, printed in 1809. The 'Arminian Magazine,' now called the 'Methodist Magazine,' was established by Wesley in 1780, and was conducted under his superintendence as long as he lived."—*Knight's Eng. Notes on the Old and New Testaments, Bristol, 1764, (some 1765,) 4 vols. 4to; New Testament, with Explanatory Notes, Lon., 1869, cr. 8vo.

"Many parts of the translation of the New Testament are altered and considerably improved."—Orme's Bibl. Bib., 464.

"The Notes on the Old Testament [necessarily restricted by the prescribed limits of the work] are allowed on all hands to be meagre and unsatisfactory. Those on the New, which have gone through several editions, are of a widely different description; though short, they are always judicious, accurate, spiritual, terse, and impressive, and possess the happy and rare property of leading the reader to God and his own heart."—DR. ADAM CLARKE.

The Rev. Dr. Hales (Analysis of Chronol., ii. 1287, 1288) pronounces the Notes on the New Testament to be "commendable for their conciseness, and acutely pointed to the hearts and consciences of his readers."

Both he and Granville Sharp frequently cite Wesley's

"happy corrections" (Horne's Bibl. Bib., 257) of the received version of the New Testament.

The Rev. E. Bickersteth styles the Commentary on the New Testament "a brief and sensible Arminian comment;" and another critic observes respecting the same,

"Wesley's Notes proceed on the same principles as Whitby, but with a reference throughout to personal religion."—Dr. E. WILLIAMS: C. P., 5th ed., 286.

Stevens's History of Methodism, vol. ii., London, 1864, Appendix, pp. 15–37, he presents us with an extract, viz.: Chronological List of the Writings of John and Charles Wesley. This reached us after articles on the Wesleys had been prepared, ut supra.

A medallion portrait of John Wesley, by Mr. Orion Frazee, of the city of New York, was executed in that city in 1867. I have now (1870) some new books to refer to, viz.: I. John Wesley's Place in Church History Determined, with the Aid of Facts or Documents Unknown to, or Unnoticed by, his Biographers, by R. Denny Urlin, M.R.I.A., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, Lon., 1870, 12mo. II. John Wesley in Company with High Churchmen, by an Old Methodist, 1870, 12mo. III. Life of John Wesley, by Miss Julia Wedgwood, in preparation, 1870.

"No wonder that the clergy were corrupt and indifferent amid this indifference and corruption. No wonder that skeptics multiplied and morals degenerated, so far as they depended on the influence of such a king. No wonder that Whitfield cried out in the wilderness,—that Wesley quitted the insulted temple to pray on the hill-side. I look with reverence on those men at that time. Which is the sublimer spectacle,—the good John Wesley surrounded by his congregation of miners at the pit's mouth, or the queen's chaplains mumbling through their morning office in their ante-room, under the picture of the great Venus, with the door opening into the adjoining chamber, where the queen is dressing, talking scandal to Lord Hervey, or uttering sneers at Lady Suffolk, who is kneeling with the basin at her mistress's side!"—TRACERAT: George the Second.

Wesley, or Westley, Samuel, father of the preceding, and the son of the Rev. John Wesley, of Preston, (who was ejected for Nonconformity in 1662,) was b.

between 1660 and 1668, and educated at Exeter College, Oxford; officiated for a time as a curate in London; became Rector of Epworth, Lincolnshire, about 1693; Rector of Wroote, 1723; d. 1735.

Wesley, Samuel, the second son of the preceding, and elder brother of John and Charles Wesley, was b. about 1690 to 1692; elected to Christ Church, Oxford, 1711; took holy orders soon after leaving college, and was for nearly twenty years an usher in Westminster School; Head-Master of Tiverton School, Devonshire, 1732 until his death, Nov. 6, 1739. 1. The Song of the Three Children, paraphrased by M. de la Pla and published by S. Some of these poems are thought to possess merit. See the accounts of the Wesley Family cited under WESLEY, JOHN; and see Nichols's Lit. Anec., v. Wesley, Samuel, the third son of Rev. Charles Wesley the Methodist, and brother of Charles Wesley the composer of music, and as a musical genius still more famous than the latter, was b. Feb. 24, 1766, and d. Oct. 11, 1837. His oratorio of Ruth, composed and written with his own hand before he was eight years of age, elicited from Dr. Boyle the declaration, "These airs are some of the prettiest I have seen. This boy writes by nature as true a bass as I can by rule and study." In his later years he was considered "the most astonishing extemporaneous player in Europe." Among his compositions were a grand mass for the chapel of Pope Pius VI., a complete Service for the Cathedrals of the Church of England, anthems, sonatas, and duets for the piano-forte, and voluntaries for the organ.

"The remarkable talents with which the Wesley family were endowed manifested themselves in the third generation as strikingly as in the second. The two sons of Charles were among the most distinguished musicians of their age."—ROBERT SOUTH-
THEY: Life of [John] Wesley, 3d ed., ii. 387.

He left a large family, nearly all of whom were distinguished for their talents and acquirements. See Lon. Gent. Mag., 1837, ii. 544, (Obituary); Daines Barrington's Miscellanies; Knight's Eng. Cyc., Biog., vi., 1858, 645.

"He was a man overflowing with the milk of human kindness. If he had enemies, I doubt if he owed them to any other cause than this rare virtue."—WASHINGTON ALESTON.

"In the '—' of the 12th December, 1860, I have read an article on the character of the late Benjamin West. It is there stated that the late Col. Trumbull—one of West's pupils—was at one time in enmity with West. This is new to me. I have often heard Trumbull allude to West with affection and admiration.

"I remember little of West but his saint-like goodness. Perhaps he was vain of his powers as an artist. And though it may be said that he seldom carefully finished his pictures, yet his great power of composition and judicious selection of time in the execution of a subject were admirable.

"His character as a moral man was so pure that no one could fasten a reproach on him.

"The late Gilbert Stuart—one of his pupils—had the highest estimation of his character. West was never betrayed into anger, though he might show indignation.

"When the Camera Lucida was invented, the specimen was brought to West; he showed it to his pupil, Stuart; Stuart had a nervous tremor, and suffered the prism to fall on the marble hearth, where it was shattered to pieces. He paused, with head bent over the ruined machine, in expectation of a sound scolding for his carelessness. But when the gentle West broke silence, he said, 'Well, Stuart, had you not better pick up the pieces?'

"West had several painting-rooms in his establishment, in one of which he painted his small pictures. One morning Stuart entered one of these rooms, where West had begun the head of a child. West was in the room, but Stuart did not know it. He proceeded to criticise the work in presence of some of West's pupils: 'Here,' said Stuart, 'is a curl like a figure of 3, and here is another, and that will make 6, and another, makes 9.' West came forward. Stuart stood aghast, and attempted an apology. But West said he thanked him for the just remark.

"Every morning, immediately after breakfast, West received the visits of many young students in the art, whose progress he directed, giving valuable instruction in the kindest manner.

"Since writing the foregoing scraps, an incident has come to my recollection that may serve to show the gentle and amiable temper of West.

"Lely, an American engraver, visited London with the intention of establishing himself there in his profession. He desired to engrave a picture from West's composition of a girl with a litter of puppies in her apron attended by the anxious mother of the whelps. Col. Trumbull introduced Lely to West, and the picture was lent. A few days afterwards Lely called upon Trumbull in the greatest distress, having ruined the picture by giving it a coat of egg-varnish, in order by means of refreshing it to see it more exactly. (Egg-varnish will answer a temporary purpose for a freshly-painted picture; but for an old painting it is destructive.) His anguish at the event was inexpressible. They called on West, and Trumbull announced the accident. West, perceiving the great distress of Lely, said, 'Never mind it, my dear sir; I can paint another.'

The above anecdotes of Benjamin West were written, at my request, for this article, by one of his former pupils, Thomas Sully, and by him given to me this afternoon, after which he spent some time with me in my Library. (S. Austin Allibone, Dec. 21, 1860.) Mr. Sully, born in 1783, still survives, (July 1, 1870.)

"Lord George Cavendish, for my solace in my retirement, has given me a book, the 'History of (his own) Furness-abbey,' written by a Scotch ex-Jesuit. I cannot say that this unnatural conjunction of a Cavendish and a Jesuit has produced a lively colt; but I found one passage worth any money. It is an extract of a constable's journal kept during the civil war, and ends thus: 'And there was never heard of such troublesome and distracted times as these five years have been, but especially for constables.'"—Horace Walpole to Hon. H. S. Conway, Dec. 31, 1774; Letters, ed. 1861, vi. 163.

Weston, Elizabeth Jane, one of the most learned females of ancient or modern times, supposed to have been a native of Surrey and a member of the noble family of Westons of that county, b. probably about 1556, was obliged at an early age, by the misfortunes of her father, to take refuge in Prague, Bohemia, where she married John Leon, who is said to have resided there in the service of the emperor. She was living in 1605. She translated several of the fables of Æsop into Latin verse, and wrote a poem in praise of typography, and many poems and epistles, in the same language.

Parthenicon Elizabethæ Joannæ Westoniæ Virginis Nobilissimæ Poetriæ florentissimæ Linguarum plurimarum peritissimæ, Libri tres, Opera ac Studio G. Mart. & Baldhoren, Sil collectus, et nunc denuo amicis desiderantibus communicatus, Præge, typis Pauli. Sissii, 3 part. in 1 vol. 12mo, eius anno, sed circiter 1606. Liber rarissimus. Priced by H. Editio altera, Opuscula cum Vita Auctoris a J. Chr. Kaickoff, Francf., 1723, 8vo. See Ballard's Memoirs of Several Ladies of Great Britain.

"Hear what Janus Doua saith of her:

"Angla vel Angelica es, vel prorsus es Angelus; immo Si sexus votat hoc, Angelus est animus."

"Joseph Scaliger praiseth her in no less prose: 'Parthenicon Elizabethæ Westoniæ, virginis nobilissimæ, poetriæ florentissimæ, linguarum plurimarum peritissimæ.' And again, speaking to her, 'Pond prædis mihi contigit, admirari ingenium tuum quam nosse.' It seems her fame was more known in foreign parts than at home."—FULLER: Worthies of Surrey.

Heinsius also praises her learning, and Nicholas May compliments her in a Latin epigram; she is placed by Evelyn, in his Numismata, among learned women, and by Phillips among female poets; she is ranked by Farnabe with Sir Thomas More and the best Latin poets of the sixteenth century.

"Elle parlait avec une égale facilité le Français, l'Allemand, l'Italien, le Slave-Czèque et sa langue maternelle. Le Latin lui était familier; et elle écrivait dans cette langue avec une élégance et une pureté irréprochables."—Biographie Universelle, (q. v.)

Rev., April, 1860, (same in Boston Living Age, June 2, 1860, 539-553,) by Sir John T. Coleridge. Sir John remarks,

"At any time he would have been considered a most fit person to be placed on the bench. We regret that he never was: his mind is eminently judicial, and his general learning and accomplishments would have adorned the professional research which he would have brought to the decision of all questions, while his high personal character would have added authority to his judgments."

It was Mr. Binney's disinclination alone which prevented his taking his seat in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania or the Supreme Court of the United States. This I know. The following is not without interest:

"I sincerely wish Mr. Binney would comply with your request, and collect his speeches, and such arguments as are adapted for the general reader, in a volume. It would be as valuable a one of the kind as was ever published. I have often said that I had never listened to a speaker who treated a politico-legal question so exhaustively as Mr. Binney. Of all the men I have known, I would have preferred him as the successor of Ch-J. Marshall."—Edward Everett to S. Austin Allibone, Boston, 1 Feb. 1864.

Mr. Wharton contributed an article on Literary Property to N. Amer. Review, April, 1841, 385-404, and a paper of his on Oratory will be found in The Philadelphia Book, 1836, 258. See, also, EAST, SIR EDWARD HYDE.

Whately, Richard, D.D., fourth son of the Rev. Joseph Whately, D.D., of Nonsuch Park, Surrey, (Prebendary of Bristol, 1793, d. 1797,) and nephew of Thomas Whately, (infra), was b. in Cavendish Square, London, Feb. 1, 1787, and educated at Oriel College, Oxford, where he graduated B.A., and took a second class in classics and mathematics, 1808; gained the University prize for an English Essay, 1810; became a Fellow of Oriel, 1811; took his M.A. degree, 1812; married the daughter of William Pope, Esq., of Hillingdon, Middlesex, 1821; Bampton Lecturer, 1822; Rector of Halesworth, Suffolk, worth £450 per annum, 1822; Principal of St. Alban Hall, Oxford, and B.D. and D.D., 1825; Professor of Political Economy, Oxford, 1830; Archbishop of Dublin and Bishop of Glendalagh, 1831; Bishop of Kildare, 1846; d. in Dublin, Oct. 8, 1863.

He was for more than twenty years (resigned, 1853) one of the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland; and was also Visitor of Trinity College, Dublin, Prebendary ex-officio of Cullen in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Vice-President of the Royal Irish Academy, and Chancellor of the Order of St. Patrick. Both in politics and religion his views were what is styled "liberal;" but he acknowledged no party trammels, and no leadership save that of conscience.

"Amongst the English prelates with whom I became acquainted, the Archbishop of Dublin, Dr. Whately, a correspondent of our Institute, both interested and surprised me. His mind appeared to me original and well cultivated; startling and ingenious, rather than profound, in philosophic and social science; a most excellent man; thoroughly disinterested, tolerant, and liberal; and, in the midst of his unwearying activity and exhaustless flow of conversation, strangely absent, familiar, confused, eccentric, amiable, and engaging, no matter what impoliteness he might commit or what propriety he might forget."—F. Gutzow: Embassy to the Court of St. James in 1840, Lon., 1840, 8vo.

"So far the case is made out; and Archbishop Whately (who, endowed with a penetrating and active rather than a patient and persevering intellect, seldom fails to cast his sounding-line to a greater depth than his predecessors, and, when he has done this, scarcely seems to care whether he reaches the bottom or not) omitted to ask himself the further question," &c.—J. S. MILL: System of Logic, ch. iii.

"We venture to express our conviction . . . that, though this lucid and eloquent writer may, for obvious reasons, be most widely known by his 'Logic' and 'Rhetoric,' the time will come when his theological works will be, if not more widely read, still more highly prized. To great powers of argument and illustration, and delightful transparency of diction and style, he adds a higher quality still, and a very rare quality it is,—an evident and intense honesty of purpose, an absorbing desire to arrive at the exact truth and to state it with perfect fairness and with the just limitations."—HENRY ROGERS: Edin. Rev., xc. (Oct. 1849) 301, n.

"The earliest writer, [see Watt's Bibl. Brit., art. Gardening,] I believe, on the subject, [Landscape Gardening,] was my uncle, Thomas Whately. From his work (which went through several editions) subsequent writers have borrowed largely, and generally with little or no acknowledgment. The French poet De Lille, however, in his poem of Les Jardins, does acknowledge him as his master. Mr. W. was distinguished as a man of taste in more than one department. Being by many looked up to with deference in such matters, it was he that first brought into notice Thomson's Seasons and thus laid the foundation of its great popularity. And the portion that was completed of his work on the Characters of Shakespeare (left unfinished at his death, but edited first by my father, and afterwards by myself) is considered by competent judges to be one of the ablest critical works that ever appeared. His Treatise on Modern Gardening (as it was then called) would form the most suitable annotation on this Essay [Of Gardens] of Bacon's. But it is far too long to be inserted entire, and any extracts or abridgment would be far from doing justice either to the Author or to the subject."—ARCHBISHOP WHATELY: Bacon's Essays, with Annotations.

Wheaton, Henry, LL.D., son of Seth Wheaton, b. in Providence, Rhode Island, Nov. 27, 1785; graduated at Brown University, 1802; after being admitted to the Bar, 1805, spent about two years (1805-7) in Europe, where he attended a law-school at Poitiers, in France; on his return to America, practised law, first at Providence, and subsequently in the city of New York, where, from December, 1812, to May, 1815, he edited The National Advocate, the organ of the Administration party in that city; Division Judge-Advocate of the Army, Oct. 26, 1814; Justice of the Marine Court in the city of New York, May, 1815-July, 1819; Reporter of the Supreme Court of the United States, 1816-1827; delegate to the Convention for forming a new Constitution for New York, 1821; member of the New York State Assembly, Nov. 1823; associated with B. F. Butler and John Duer in a commission for revising the Statute Law of New York, 1825; Chargé-d'Affaires to Denmark, 1827 to the spring of 1833, when he was commissioned by President Jackson as Chargé-d'Affaires to Prussia, and early in 1837 was promoted by President Van Buren to the rank of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of Berlin; discharged his duties with great reputation, exercising at the same time a general superintendence over American relations with European governments, until 1846, when he was—not transferred to Paris or London, the proper reward of his long services, but, to the astonishment and indignation of both parties at home and all parties abroad—recalled, or rather requested to resign, by President Polk. Of European statesmen the most eminent, Baron Alexander von Humboldt, writes, June 18, 1846,

"The king often laments your departure. He knows how useful you were to us; and he does not comprehend how a government can make so great a mistake as to deprive itself of such support. I cannot yet persuade myself that you are not intended for some great place in Europe."

In May, 1847, Mr. Wheaton returned to the city of New York, where, on the 10th of June, he was entertained by some eminent citizens at a public dinner. A similar invitation from his admirers in Philadelphia was declined. In the winter ensuing he was to have read a course of Lectures on International Law before the Law-School of Harvard University, in pursuance of his election as Lecturer of that department; but whilst at Washington he was attacked by a disease which terminated his useful life at Roxbury, Mass., March 11, 1848.

A few others may have done as much—no one, save Washington, has done more—to make the name of America respected by scholars and honoured by statesmen.

"We cannot mention the name of Henry Wheaton," remarks the London Times "without a passing tribute to the character, the learning, and the virtues of a man who, as a great international lawyer, leaves not his like behind."

"It cannot be doubted that Wheaton was a remarkable man. No American had ever about him less of the peculiar stamp which marks the citizen of a new state. He was a man of refinement and of great cultivation."—Lon. Saturday Review, (same in Bost. Liv. Age, iv. 616.)

"A somewhat noticeable publication has recently been issued at Peking, in the shape of a translation into Chinese of Wheaton's International Law, which, at the instance of the U. S. Minister, [Hon. Anson Burlingame, d. at St. Petersburg, 1870.] has been brought out at the expense of the Imperial Government. The translation is the work of an American missionary, the Rev. A. P. Martin, whose rough version has been recast into classical Chinese by a commission of four native officials of high literary rank under the auspices of the Foreign Board. A copy of the work, which is beautifully printed in four thin volumes, has but just reached me, so I am unable to pronounce upon the nature of the translation by a comparison of the original; and, indeed, the translator in his Preface declares that his work is rather a paraphrase than an actual rendering of Wheaton's celebrated treatise."—W. "Mr. Harris, late minister of the United States in Japan, says that 'the only foreign author whom the Japanese honor is Henry Wheaton; and the only book which they have translated is Wheaton on International Law.' The most able representative," said the venerable Albert Gallatin to the Hon. John Russell Bartlett, 'of the American Government abroad during the last forty years.'—Dr. Francis Vinton's Oration on the Annals of Rhode Island, &c., N. York, 1863, 8vo, 37, 39, n.

A Commentary on Wheaton's works on International Law is now (1870) in course of publication, viz.:

Commentaire sur les Eléments du Droit international et sur l'Histoire du Progrès du Droit des Gens de Henri Wheaton, précédé d'une notice sur la Carrière diplomatique de M. Wheaton, par Wm. Beach Lawrence, ancien Ministre des Etats-Unis d'Amérique à Londres, Auteur du "Droit de Visite en Temps de Paix," &c., Leipzig, F. A. Brockhaus, Tome premier, 1868, Tome second, 1869. (Will extend to 6 vols.) To Wheaton's Elements add: I. International Law; or, Rules regulating the Intercourse of States in Peace and War, by Major-General H. W. Halleck, General-in-Chief U. S. "BOSTON, 22d Nov. 1865.

"I had always intended to write you of the origin of Mr. Wheaton's History of the Progress of the Law of Nations since the Peace of Westphalia; but this slipped aside until I was reminded by your letter. Some time in the spring of 1838 the French Academy of Moral and Political Science proposed the History of the Law of Nations since the Peace of Westphalia as a subject for a prize. I was in Paris at the time, and, observing the notice, formed the idea of writing on this subject and competing for the prize. Meanwhile Mr. Wheaton arrived, and I consulted him. He encouraged me, and gave me some practical hints. But soon afterwards I determined to visit England, where I had not been. This was inconsistent, of course, with the study and application necessary in treating that important subject. At a later day Mr. Wheaton came to see me in my room, and asked me directly if I persevered in my idea of writing for the prize. I told him that I could not, as I was going to England. 'Then I shall,' he said. And he added that he had not wished to interfere with me. The History was originally written in French and offered for the prize. It did not receive the prize, but only a commendation, I think. It was first published in French as a small 8vo. I have a copy of this which was sent to me afterwards with the Hommage de l'auteur.

"I mention these things in reply to your inquiry, and not to bring forward my incidental connection with the origin of an important work. I remember well my own aspiration and the encouragement which I received from the learned diplomatist, and am happy in the thought of this association.

"Believe me, my dear sir,

"Very faithfully yours,

"CHARLES SUMNER.

"To S. A. ALLIBONE, Esq., Philadelphia."

It was noticed in France by M. Pinheiro-Ferreira, the editor of Vattel and Martens. Mr. N. W. Senior, in his review of the French original in the Edinburgh Review, April, 1843, 303-373, thus concludes:

"We cannot part with Mr. Wheaton without expressing a hope that he will translate his essay into English. It would form an excellent supplement to his great work on International Law. There are many persons in his own country and in ours to whom it is inaccessible in its present form; and he must be anxious that his field of utility and of fame should be coextensive with the English language."

Accordingly, an English translation, (with valuable additions,) published under the superintendence of Mr. W. B. Lawrence, under the title of History of the Law of Nations in Europe and America, from the Earliest Times to the Treaty of Washington, 1842, v. 8vo, pp. 797, was issued at New York in 1845.

"All students of jurisprudence, all students of history who, not content with descriptions of wars and battles, rise to the grand principles which are the sources of events, will regard this book as not less important than the 'Elements.'"—W. B. LAWRENCE: Notice of Wheaton, in Elem. Int. Law, ed. 1863, lxiii.

"His work will be read not only by every lawyer, but by every person who aims to take any part in public affairs."—Law Rep., viii. (May, 1846) 38.

We fear not: the reading of too many American politicians is confined to the newspapers—which represent their own party. For other reviews of this invaluable work, see *N. Amer. For the sake of American letters, let this good office be no longer deferred. He was a member of the Institute of France, and attached to the section of Jurisprudence, though considered equally eligible to the department of History. Mr. Lawrence, whose Account of Wheaton we have above referred to, also contributed a brief biography of his distinguished friend to Griswold's Prose Writers of America, (see 4th ed., 1852, 169;) nor must we fail to notice a sketch in the Christian Examiner, xlv. 478; another in Charles Sumner's Speeches, (1850,) 469-482; and The Value of a Man: a Discourse occasioned by the Death of the Hon. Henry Wheaton, by the Rev. Edward B. Hall, Providence, 1848, 8vo, pp. 23.

Wheatstone, Sir Charles, honourably known in connection with the stereoscope, the electric telegraph, the electro-magnetic clock, &c., was b. at Gloucester, 1802, appointed Professor of Experimental Philosophy in King's College, London, 1834, and elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, Jan. 21, 1836. At the Paris Universal Exhibition of 1855 he was one of the jurors in the class for "Heat, Light, and Electricity," and was created a Knight of the Legion of Honour for his "application of the Electric Telegraph." He is the author of scientific papers in Annals of Philos., New Series, Phil. Mag., Phil. Trans., Proceed. Roy. Soc., &c.

"Mr. Charles Wheatstone, Professor of Experimental Philosophy in King's College, London, has recently been knighted by Queen Victoria as the inventor of the Electric Telegraph. The Rev. T. F. Cooke, also an Englishman, has simultaneously published [Bath, 1868, 8vo] 'Authorship of the Practical Electric Telegraph, in Seven Letters, Edited in assertion of his Brother's Rights.' Wheatstone and Cooke took out a joint patent in England for a magnetic telegraph in 1837; but in 1832 S. F. B. Morse invented the system which bears his name; exhibited his invention in practical operation in 1835; filed his caveat at the Patent Office, Washington, in 1837; perfected his invention, and obtained his patent, in 1840; and in 1844 established, between Washington and Baltimore, the first electric telegraph that ever communicated intelligence from place to place. England, it seems, has wholly ignored the prior claim, as practical inventor, of the American man of science."—Amer. Lit. Gaz., (Phila.) Mar. 2, 1868, 244.

"PIRATED AMERICAN INVENTIONS.—An Albert medal has recently been assigned to Messrs. Cooke and Wheatstone, the well-known English electricians, 'for having invented and furnished the electric telegraph to England and the world.' On this side of the Atlantic the impressions of the public differ widely from the views so long and so obstinately entertained in England. In fact, in every civilized nation the claims of Professor Morse to the invention of the electric telegraph are cheerfully admitted; but England, with her usual indifference to foreign merit on every occasion, persists in honoring her own sons, even to the point of injustice as to the labors of others. Although a convention of the foreign Ministers of the nations of Europe, held at Paris in 1858, awarded to Professor Morse the sum of four hundred thousand francs in recognition of his services, yet England, in pure obstinacy, refuses to mention even the name of that patient investigator of electro-magnetic phenomena as that of one deserving praise for his self-denying exertions in the cause of science. But this is no new occurrence. American inventions have, over and over again, been introduced into England, and there they are either claimed by some rival as original with himself, or else they are re-christened, and presented under the protection of an English name, with only a faint acknowledgment of the real author. For instance, Hare's oxyhydrogen blow-pipe is claimed by Lieutenant Drummond, who, by placing a lime wick in the flame of an apparatus devised to burn, with intense light, any intractable metal or mineral, brings out the Drummond light. So, too, when Colt took over, in 1851, his wonderful revolving pistol, it was asserted that precisely the same weapon had been made in England three hundred years before; though no one was aware of the fact that a repeating musket was to be found in the Tower armory until Colt himself made the discovery. Scientific men in France are much more generous in giving credit to their brethren of other countries,—though even there mistakes have occurred. The recent case of the premium of 100,000 francs to the inventor of what is called the "Ruhmkorff coil" is still fresh in the recollection of our readers, who are, perhaps, not so well aware that this famous electro-galvanic apparatus was constructed years ago by Prof. Charles G. Page, just deceased."—Public Ledger, (Phila.), May, 1868.

Supp. volume to 2d ed., containing the New Matter of the 3d ed., Lon., 1857, 8vo. Commended, with very slight qualifications, in Lon. Quar. Rev., lxviii. (June, 1841) 177-202, by Sir J. F. W. Herschel, (repub. in his Essays, 1857, 8vo; also in Amer. Eccl., ii. 303, 409;) censured, with very slight qualifications, in Edin. Rev., lxvi. (Oct. 1837) 110-151. This critic remarks,

"He has trodden with a heavy step on the tender and undurated soil of recent discovery; he has laid open wounds that have long been closed; in the exercise of his judicial functions he has pronounced decisions on subjects which he would not take the trouble to understand, and, in the face of facts and evidence, has deprived guiltless parties of their admitted rights."—P. 139.

The specifications of "errors, ignorances, and negligences" are certainly very formidable: how far deserved, let the student decide for himself. "The ablest historian of Natural Science."—RICHARD OWEN, of Brit. Museum: Address before the Brit. Assoc. for the Adv. of Sci., 1859, 8vo, p. 7.

"In Mr. Whewell's learned work on the History of the Inductive Sciences there are some acute and important remarks on the two theories, that of Uniform Action and that of Catastrophes."—LORD BROUGHAM: Natural Theol., ed. Glasg., 1856, 445, n.

"Let any man read a book so common as Whewell's 'History of the Inductive Sciences,' and, instead of rising from the perusal with the idea that Science is 'exact,' 'certain,' and 'stable,' he will be much more likely to institute a comparison between it and the ever-changing sands on the shores of the ocean than with the fixed and everlasting hills."—REV. ALBERT BARNES: Lect. on the Evid. of Chris., N. York, 1868, 12mo, Lect. III.

Next to the History of the Inductive Sciences must stand its sequel, or rather the commentary on its text, entitled—18. The Philosophy of the Inductive Sciences; founded on their History, 1840, 2 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1847, 2 vols. 8vo. Warmly praised in Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxviii. (June, 1841) 202–238, by Sir J. F. W. Herschel, (repub. in his Essays, 1857, 8vo): warmly censured in Edin. Rev., lxxiv. (Jan. 1842) 265–306, by Sir David Brewster.

"Our disappointment has been great," remarks the latter; "and so great has been the disappointment of others, that competent judges regard the present work as the Philosophy of scholastic Metaphysics rather than of physical Science, and question the ability of any natural philosopher to analyze its materials and pronounce upon its merits."—p. 266.

A late and very eminent authority records a more favourable verdict:

"One attempt—a bold and successful one—has been made in our own day to unite two of the three departments,—I mean the History and the Philosophy of the Inductive Sciences. An English philosopher, of wonderful versatility, industry, and power, has erected a permanent monument to his reputation in a voluminous work bearing the preceding title."—PROP. J. D. "A timely contribution to the Platonic literature of our country. . . . It must be admitted that they may afford very pleasant reading. They have no lack of perspicuity nor of freshness and vigour of expression. If their translator in preserving some nicety of meaning has occasionally suffered some of the pith and force of the original to escape him, Dr. Whewell, by keeping a tough hold of his author's drift and of the Saxon idiom, moves with a firm step even where he may have too hastily let go the finer literal interpretation."—*Lon. "There is hardly a writer in the country so capable of such a treatment of such a series of subjects as the author of 'Character and Characteristic Men'; and it may safely be said that through this book more real insight may be had into the spirit of that time than can be obtained by means of the works of any one other critical author."—RICHARD GRANT WHITE: The Galaxy, Oct. 1869.

Mr. Whipple is also author of a Biographical Sketch of Macaulay prefixed to vol. i. (pp. vii.—xxxv.) of Sheldon & Co.'s edition of Macaulay's Essays, N. York, 1860, 6 vols. cr. 8vo., already described in our Sketch of the Life and Writings of Macaulay prefixed to vol. v. (pp. 1—104) of the Boston (now Phila.) edition of Macaulay's History of England, 1861, 5 vols. cr. 8vo. We may add that in our sketches of MACAULAY, RT. HON. THOMAS BABINGTON, (p. 1158, supra), and TALFOURD, SIR THOMAS NOON, (No. 12, supra), we have recorded our estimate of Mr. Whipple's critical abilities. Whiston remarks,

"I have, I think, certainly found, that those Apostolical Constitutions . . . are no other than the original laws and doctrines of the gospel," &c.

The above formed part of the offence alleged against him in the sentence for heresy in the convocation of 1711. Among the Trinitarian writers who opposed his Arianism were Dr. Waterland, Bishop Gastrell, the Earl of Nottingham, and Mr. Nelson. Whitaker, John, b. in Manchester, 1735, became Fellow of Corpus Christi College, 1753; afterwards served for many years as Curate of Bray, and subsequently as Curate of Newton; was for about two months from Nov. 1773, Morning Preacher of Berkeley Chapel, London; became Rector of Ruan Lanyhorne, Cornwall, 1778; d. Oct. 30, 1808.

1. History of Manchester, Lon., vol. i. book i., 1771, 4to; 2d ed., 1773, 2 vols. 8vo. Supp. to vol. i., 4to, entitled The Principal Corrections made in the History of Manchester, Book I., on Republishing it in Octavo, 1773, 4to. This supp. is printed as the first portion of vol. ii. book ii., 1775, 4to. It is well, for bibliographical completeness, to have the 3 vols. 4to, of which a few copies were on large paper.

"I bought the first volume of [Whitaker's] Manchester, but could not read it; it was much too learned for me, and seemed rather an account of Babel than Manchester: I mean in point of antiquity. To be sure, it is very kind in an author to promise one the history of a country town and give one a circumstantial account of the antediluvian world into the bargain. But I am simple and ignorant, and desire no more than I pay for. And then for my progenitors, Noah and the Saxons, I have no curiosity about them."—Horace Walpole to Rev. Wm. Cole, April 25, 1775: Letters, ed. 1861, vi. 207.

"A book valuable for deep learning, original thought, and uncommon ingenuity."—Stuart's View of Society.

"The laborious Mr. Carte and the ingenious Mr. Whitaker are the two modern writers to whom I am principally indebted. The particular historian of Manchester embraces, under that obscure title, a subject almost as extensive as the general history of England."—Gibbon: Decline and Fall, ch. xxxviii, n.

We continue the enumeration of Whitaker's works: 2. State of the Case between Mr. Whitaker and Mr. Hughes relative to the Morning Lectureship of Berkeley Chapel, 1774, 4to. 3. Course of XI. Sermons upon Death, Judgment, Heaven, and Hell, 1783, sm. 8vo; new ed., 1820, 12mo. Condemned by Lon. Mon. Rev., 1783, i. 336. 4. Mary Queen of Scots Vindicated, 1787, (some 1788,) 3 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., enlarged, 1790, 2 vols. 8vo. Additions and Corrections made in the Second Edition, also pub. separately, 1790, 8vo. Reviewed in Lon. Mon. Rev., 1787, ii. 472-481, and 1788, i. 15.

"In respect to acuteness, ingenuity, and candour we scarcely think it can be equalled by any disquisition that has fallen under our cognizance for a long time past. . . . The style appears to us prolix, rambling, and declamatory. The language is highly figurative, sometimes coarse and indelicate, often quaint and affected, and frequently verging towards the incomprehensible or swelling into bombast."—Ubi supra, 1788, i. 8.

Referring to the publications elicited by Dr. Robertson's comments in his History of Scotland on Mary Queen of Scots, a biographer of that great historian remarks,

"The most learned, but the most repulsive from its dogmatism and its overbearing tone, was the 'Vindication' of Mr. Whitaker."—Lord Brougham: Life of Robertson, in Men of Letters Time of Geo. III., ed. 1855, 274.

5. Origin of Arrianism Disclosed, 1791, r. 8vo, pp. 505.

"A work replete with erudition and deep research, and establishing upon much solid foundation the antiquity of the faith in our Lord."—Dr. RANDOLPH.

"I confess this book has satisfied me how little erudition will gain a man now-a-days the reputation of vast learning, if it be only accompanied by dash and insolence. It seems to me impossible that Whitaker could have written well on the subject of Mary Queen of Scots, his powers of judgment being apparently so abject."—Coteridge's Lit. Remains, iv. 306.

6. Gibbon's History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, in vols. iv., v., vi., 4to. Reviewed 1791, 8vo, pp. 258. Repub. from the English Review. Whatever marks of judgment this Review may display, the comment on Gibbon's admirable chapter (xlv.) on Roman Jurisprudence—"nothing can subdue the native barrenness of such a field as this"—is not one of them. See Millman's ed. of Gibbon's Life, 1839, 8vo, 248; Lon. Gent. Mag., 1839, ii. 339.

Whitaker, John, Vicar of Pembury, Kent. Six Discourses on 2 Thess. ii. 11, (Divine Conduct,) Lon., 1803, 8vo.

Whitaker, Jonathan, minister at Sharon, Mass., 1799 to 1816, and from 1816 at New Bedford; d. 1835, aged 64. Sermon before Bible Society, 1816.

Whitaker, Joseph, one of the estimable fraternity of literary publishers and booksellers who have so greatly aided the advancement of scholarship and general information in Great Britain and America, was b. in London, May 4, 1820, and educated to the business in which he has proved so zealous a proficient. In 1843 he edited for J. W. Parker The "Morning" and The "Evening Church Services," 2 vols. fp. 8vo, and 2 vols. r. 32mo; in 1848 projected and, in conjunction with Bishop Armstrong, edited The Tracts for the Christian Seasons, two series, each 1849-51, 4 vols. 12mo; also Tracts for Parochial Use, 209, in 7 vols. 8vo, 1849-51; in 1849 projected and superintended The Penny Post, a Church magazine, still (1870) continued,—published by Messrs. James Parker & Co.; in 1850 projected and published for four years The Educational Register; also published for three years Whitaker's Clergyman's Diary, still continued by The Stationers' Company; edited the New Series of The Gentleman's Magazine, vols. i.-vii., July, 1856, to Dec. 1859, both inclusive; in Jan. 1858 projected and commenced The Bookseller, and in 1860 purchased and merged in it Bent's Literary Advertiser; in December, 1868, brought out the first volume of Whitaker's Almanac for 1869, (sale, 35,000 copies,) and followed it by vol. ii. for 1870. Of this "Cyclopedia of information" we have before us testimonials of the highest character. The Bookseller "has had a host of rivals and competitors, but still retains its position as the first of its kind in the world;" and "The Christmas Bookseller for the past twelve years [1858-70] will serve as a study of the progress and decadence of the English school of wood engraving." Without any reference to its literary information, which is exceedingly valuable, each monthly number of The Bookseller is worthy of preservation for the multifarious specimens of beautiful typography which it exhibits. On the same shelf should repose The American Publishers' Circular and Literary Gazette, May 1, 1863, to October 15, 1863, and American Literary Gazette and Publishers' Circular, November 2, 1863, to July 1, 1870, et seq., both published by that enterprising philanthropist, George William Childs, of Philadelphia, and of the last of which Mr. J. Vernon Whitaker, a son of Joseph Whitaker, became editor, July 1, 1869.

"Preparing for Publication, in a thick, handsomely-printed Quarto Volume, with Illustrations, price £2 13s. 6d., large paper, £5 5s., a New Edition of Dr. Whitaker's admirable Work, The History of Whalley. In aid of this important undertaking, the Publishers have obtained for a large sum Dr. Whitaker's own large paper copies of the 'Whalley' and 'Craven,' which are enriched with Notes in manuscript left by the accomplished Author; besides Muniments, Charters, and other Documents which will for the first time be incorporated in the Edition of 'Whalley' now in the press, thereby rendering it vastly superior to any previous edition; and, in addition to the Original Illustrations, a considerable number of Drawings inserted by Dr. Whitaker in his own copy will be engraved for the work. A new and more comprehensive Index will be given, and the book has been placed under the Editorial superintendence of John Gough Nichols, Esq., F.S.A."—Advert.: London: G. The 32 plates by Turner were repub. and sold separately: see TURNER, JOSEPH MALLORD WILLIAM, No. 19. These portions of a projected History of Yorkshire, to be comprised in about 7 vols. folio, of 500 pp. each, (see Lon. Gent. Mag., 1816, i. 298,) were pub. after the author's death.

"No work of County History has hitherto issued from the press (not excepting even Sir Richard Hoare's magnificent Wiltshire) so splendid, in respect both of typography and graphic illustration, as Dr. Whitaker's Richmond; and yet, with all the author's high reputation and acknowledged talent, few (we believe) have fallen so far short of the expectations formed by readers of real science and desirous of substantial information, principally in those very points in which we have represented Mr. Baker [see BAKER, GEORGE] as far excelling."—*Retrospec. "We regard Dr. Whitaker's publications as having had a great influence in raising the tone and character of topographical writing in England. But as Dr. Whitaker grew older he grew more indifferent to the details. There is very little in the 'Loidis and Elmete' to satisfy the curiosity of persons desirous of knowing what books of topography profess to teach; and the 'Richmondshire' is not better."—*Lon. Gent. Whitby, Daniel, D.D., b. in Rushden, Northamptonshire, 1638, was admitted of Trinity College, Oxford, 1653, elected a scholar, 1655, and Fellow, 1664; Preb. of Salisbury, 1668; Precentor of Salisbury, 1672, and about the same time became Rector of St. Edmund's Church, Salisbury; d. March 21, 1725-26. He was bred a Calvinist, but distinguished himself as a zealous Arminian. Dr. Clarke's Scripture Doctrine of the Trinity, published in 1712, when Whitby was 64, converted him to Arianism, of which he became a warm advocate, (see CLARKE, SAMUEL, D.D.)

The Examen Millii and the Additional Annotations (incorporated in their proper places) were repub. in the 4th (1718, 2 vols. fol.) and later editions of the Paraphrase and Commentary. The Examen Millii was also repub. cum Prefatione Havercampi, Lugd. Bat., 1733, 8vo. It has already claimed our notice, (MILL, JOHN, D.D., p. 279, supra.)

"In this Examen the author argues as if every printed word were precisely the same as it was originally written; he asserts that in all places the reading of the common text may be defended—in vis omnibus lectionem textus defendi posse; and this palpably false position, set forth in the title-page itself, he made the basis of a severe and bitter criticism on a work which he was unable to appreciate."—BISHOP MARSH: Divinity Lects., Lect. VII., 2d ed., 1811, 12.

"Whitby is preferable to any other, on account of his learning and judicious notes."—DR. DODDRIDGE.

"The most popular of English exegetical works."—TERROT: Ernest's Institution.

"The best commentary we have in our language."—BISHOP WATSON.

"Divines of every denomination concur in pronouncing Dr. Whitby's commentary to be, upon the whole, the best upon the New Testament that is extant in the English language. It is inserted in almost every list of books that we have seen recommended to students."—DR. T. H. HORNE: Bibl. Bib., 301.

"Whitby's Paraphrase and Commentary on the New Testament, . . . besides some elaborate and valuable criticisms, may serve to show what a systematic and bigoted professed Arminian can say on that side of the controverted questions."—DR. E. WILLIAMS: Christian Preacher, 5th ed., 286.

"On a difficult text or expression the reader will seldom consult him in vain; and, if proper allowance is made for his theological prepossessions, few commentators will be found more useful. Three things Whitby never lost sight of,—Popery, Calvinism, and Socinianism. Of all these he is in this work the most determined opponent. To the two former he continued opposed during life; but to Socinianism, as appears from his Last Thoughts, he became reconciled before he died. The chief objection to the commentary is the quantity of controversy which it contains."—ORME: Bibl. Bib., 467.

In this work he retracts all that he had written in support of the doctrine of the Trinity, of which during the fifteen years on which he was employed on his Paraphrase and Commentary, and always before, and long after, he was a zealous advocate. 15. Discourse of the Necessity and Usefulness of the Christian Revelation, Lon., 1705, 8vo. White, Gilbert, one of the comparatively few authors for whom literary immortality may be safely predicted, was b. in the lovely village (county of Hants, four miles S.E. of Alton) which he has made forever famous, July 18, 1720; admitted of Oriel College, Oxford, Dec. 1739; took his degree of B.A., 1743; elected a Fellow of Oriel, (which he remained all his life,) March, 1744; became M.A., Oct. 1746; one of the Senior Proctors of Oxford, April, 1752; d. at Selborne, where he had chiefly resided since his youth, June 26, 1793. He declined all Church preferment, but in his latter years served as curate at Selborne, and had previously acted in the same capacity in the adjoining parish of Faringdon.

Buckland's Curi- osities of Natural History, 1858-60, 2 vols. fp. 8vo,— and might add many more, did space permit.

White contributed to Phil. Trans., 1774, an Account of a House-Martin or Martlet, and to Phil. Trans., 1775, a notice Of the House-Swallow, Swift, and Sand-Martin. A brief notice of his family will be found in Nichols's Illust. of Lit., viii., 1858, 466. The only sermon he left behind him, written in 1748 and preached seemingly for the last time in 1792, (the text is 1 John iv. 20,) was published for the first time in the Journal of Sacred Literature in 1863. It was communicated by the author's grand-nephew, the Rev. F. Gilbert White, of Barnhill-House, Whitehaven, "who, if we may judge from his photograph, as glass in hand, he examines a flower, is a worthy descendant, in temper and pursuits, of his ancestor of Selborne."

White, Henry Kirke, the son of a butcher of Nottingham, and b. in that town, March 21, 1789, after some experience as a butcher's boy, stocking-loom labourer, and attorney's apprentice, became, late in 1804, a sizar of St. John's College, Cambridge, where he studied (chiefly with a view to the ministry) with such injudicious zeal that he paid the forfeit with his life, October 19, 1806, in his 22d year. He was so enfeebled as to be unable to stand an examination in 1805 for a University scholarship, for which he had been striving; but at the general college examinations in 1805 and 1806 he was pronounced the first man in each year, and was one of the three best theme-writers of 1806. He contributed to The Monthly Preceptor, or Juvenile Library, The Monthly Visitor, The Monthly Mirror, and The Globe, and published the following volume:

1. Clifton Grove; a Sketch in Verse, with other Poems, Lon., 1803, cr. 8vo. A very mild and courteously-worded critique on this volume in Lon. Mon. Rev., Feb. 1804, 218, was censured by Southey as "most cruel and insulting," (see Southey's Life and Corresp., chaps. xiii., xiv., his Memoir of White prefixed to his Remains, and his article in Lon. Quar. Rev., vi. 413, and Lon. Mon. Rev., 1810, i. 74;) and this libel was repeated by Talfourd (see his paper on Modern Periodical Literature, in New Month. Mag., repub. in his Miscell. Writings) and others, who it is hard to believe could have ever read the lines so berated. White himself was so injudicious as to send a written complaint to the reviewers; and this they answered, in the same tone of gentlemanly consideration which characterized the critique which elicited it, in the number for March, 1804, 335.

After White's death his papers were placed in the hands of Robert Southey, who had encouraged his youthful muse, and the latter gave to the world: 2. The Remains of Henry Kirke White, &c., with an Account of his Life, Lon., 1807, 2 vols. 8vo, (750 copies were sold in less than three months; 3d ed., 1808, 2 vols. 8vo; 4th ed., 1808, 2 vols. 8vo, (reviewed in *Lon. We quote some opinions on White's poetry:

"These poems abound in such beauties as must impress the reader with the liveliest regret that so short a period was allotted to talents which would have dignified even the sacred functions the author was destined to assume."—LORD BYRON.

These lines naturally remind us of the poetical tribute of the same pen, the more significant and emphatic from the company in which it is found,—in one of the most pungent of satires:

"Unhappy White! when life was in its spring,
And thy young Muse just waved her joyous wing,
The spoiler swept that soaring lyre away
Which else had sounded an immortal lay!
Oh! what a noble heart was here undone,
When Science! self destroy'd her favourite son!" &c.

English Bards and Scotch Reviewers.

But, contrasting the two men,—their principles, their aims, and their ends,—"Unhappy Byron," rather than "Unhappy White," seems to be the appropriate lament.

"It is not possible to conceive a human being more amiable in all the relations of life. . . . He possessed as pure a heart as ever it pleased the Almighty to warm with life. . . . Chatterton is the only youthful poet whom he does not leave far behind him. . . . I have inspected all the existing manuscripts of Chatterton, and they excited less wonder than these."—ROBERT SOUTHEY: Account of White.

"What an amazing reach of genius appears in the 'Remains of Kirke White!' How unfortunate that he should have been lost to the world almost as soon as known! I greatly lament the circumstances that forced him to studies so contrary to his natural talent."—SIR S. E. BRYDGES: Cens. Lit., ix. 393.

"There are, I think, among these 'Remains' a few of the most exquisite pieces in the whole body of English poetry. Conjoined with an easy and flowing fancy, they possess the charm of a peculiar moral delicacy, often conveyed in a happy and inimitable simplicity of language."—SIR S. E. BRYDGES.

"His poetry is pleasing and his subjects are moral: he is tender and touching, and seldom wants thoughts, and never lacks language; but there is an absence of energy and originality: he is truly sincere, yet seldom fervent. His life has its lesson, and his early death its moral:—let all young poets read and tremble."—ALLAN CUNNINGHAM: Biog. and Crit. Hist. of the Lit. of the Last Fifty Years.

"There is no great infusion, in his most finished pieces, of fine fancy, romantic feeling, or fervid eloquence."—JAMES MONCKMERRY: Lects. on Genl. Lit., Poet., &c., Lect. VI.

"Few writers of verses have been more over-rated than Henry Kirke White, and it is a shame that, while there has never appeared in this country [America] a single edition of the poetical writings of Landon, Kenyon, Milnes, Miss Barrett, and others of similar merit, there have been more impressions of White than there have been of Milton, or Pope, or Coleridge. . . . I doubt whether if he had lived to the maturest age he would have produced any thing in poetry above elegant mediocrity."—R. W. GRISWOLD: Poets and Poetry of England, 1844.

"During late years an attempt has been made to underrate the young poet, apparently from the feeling that he has received more than his due modicum of praise. This is, in my opinion, alike ungenerous and unjust; and it is a depreciation in which I cannot conscientiously concur; for, depend upon it, the poetry which has commanded the sympathies of a very large circle of readers through half a century cannot be destitute of some rare merit. No such permanent temple of fame as that which Kirke White has reared was ever built on sand."—D. M. MOIR: Sketches of the Poet. Lit. of the Past Half-Century, 3d ed., 1856, 23.

"Kirke White's poetry is popular because it describes feelings, passions, and associations which all have felt and with which all can sympathise. It is by no means rich in metaphor, nor does it evince great powers of imagination; but it is pathetic, plaintive, and agreeable; and, emanating directly from his own heart, it appeals irresistibly to that of his reader."—SIR N. H. NICOLAS: Memoir of White.

It does not become an American to omit to notice that a tablet to White's memory, with a medallion by Chantrey, was placed in All Saints' Church, Cambridge, by Mr. Francis Boot, of Boston, Massachusetts. The poetical inscription was furnished by Professor William Smyth, of Cambridge.

DLF, REV. JOSEPH EDMOND, A Latin-English Dictionary, April 15, 1862, imp. 8vo, pp. 2128.

"This Dictionary is founded on Andrews's translation of Dr. Freund's 'Wörterbuch der Lateinischen Sprache,' but is no mere revision of it. Almost every article has been rewritten and reconstructed on a uniform plan; while entirely new matter to the extent of nearly 500 pages has been added. . . . An inconvenient thickness has been prevented by its being printed on a peculiar paper made expressly for the work."—Publishers' (Longmans') Advert., Lon. Athen., 1862, i. 272, 517. But see Lon. Reader, 1865, ii. 173, 234.

"We may, therefore, safely say that whatever can be effected by time, labour, scholarship, care, and expense has been done to render this dictionary a new and complete thesaurus of the language, worthy of the great originals by Forcellini and Freund from which it is derived."—Lon. Athen., 1862, i. 657.

It is also highly commended by The Guardian, Spectator, John Bull, Parthenon, Museum, Critic, and Educator. Times, and by the three last-named styled the best Latin Dictionary in existence: see Lon. Reader, 1864, i. 501. The London Bookseller of May 31, 1862, finds serious defects, yet pronounces it "the most complete Latin-English Dictionary we possess."

We sincerely hope that this may be the last of the manufactured lexicons. . . . The most convenient Latin Dictionary in English."—G. M. LAKE, Prof. of Latin in Harvard Univ.: *N. Amer. "It occupies a very useful middle position between the formidable octavos and quartos which belong to the sixth form and under-graduates' lecture-room on the one hand, and the lesser elementary dictionaries which are suited to beginners."—Lon. Guardian, May 12, 1869.

We recapitulate the titles by which White's Dictionaries are known, (1870:) I. White and Riddle's Large Latin-English Dictionary, (the parent work,) founded on the larger Dictionary of Freund, as last revised by himself, 3d ed., 2 vols. 4to, pp. 2128, 42s. II. White's College Latin-English Dictionary, (intermediate size:) abridged, for the Use of University Students, from No. I., med. 8vo, pp. 1048, 18s. III. White's Junior Student's Complete Latin-English and English-Latin Dictionary, (in which the formation of words, which forms one prominent feature of the Public-School Latin Primer, is exhibited to the eye at a glance:) Revised edition, sq. 12mo, pp. 1058, 12s.; or separately, 5s. 6d. and 7s. 6d. To which add: 10. White's First Latin Parsing-Book, 1867, 12mo, 2s. 11. White's Latin Exercise-Book, 1867, 12mo, 2s. 6d.

Mr. White edited Rev. Robert Lynam's History of the Roman Emperors, from Augustus to the Death of Antoninus, 1850, 2 vols. 8vo, and improved impressions of Rev. C. Bradley's Cornelius Nepos, Eutropius, Selections from Phædrus, and Ovid's Metamorphoses, in all 4 vols. 12mo. See, also, DALZEL, ANDREW; LINDELL, HENRY GEORGE, No. 1, 6th ed., 1870, cr. 8vo, pp. 1865; RIDDLE, JOSEPH EDMOND, No. 21, (Passow's Greek Lexicon:); VALPY, REV. F. E. J., Nos. 3, 6.

White, Joseph, D.D., an eminent Oriental scholar, the son of a weaver, who designed him for the same calling, was b. at Gloucester, 1746; educated at, and in 1774 became Fellow of, Wadham College, Oxford: Laudian Professor of Arabic, Oxford, 1774: Preb. of Gloucester, 1788; Preb. of Oxford, 1802; Regius Professor of Hebrew, Oxford, 1802; d. 1814. 1. De Utilitate Lingue Arabicæ in Studiis Theologicis Oratio, Oxon., 1776, 4to. Masterly. 2. Testamenti Novi Libri Historici et Epistolæ tam Catholicæ quam Pauline, Versio Syriacæ Philoxeniana, ex Codd. MSS. Ridelianis in Bibl. Coll. Novi Oxonii repositis, nunc primum editis, cum Interpretatione et Annotationibus, Josephi White, Oxonii, à Typographeo Clarendoniano, 1779-1803, 4 vols. 4to.

"Dr. White, whose memory Dr. Parr respects, was a very learned man and a very fine writer, with the most profound knowledge of Oriental languages and of the text of the New Testament. Every candidate for orders should be well versed in the Diatessaron, [No. 8, infra,] and every reader of the New Testament will derive from it the greatest advantage; for it collects the facts of the Gospel into a clear historical form."—DR. PARR.

"Dr. White, whose Bampton Lectures have obtained the applause of every man of taste, and extorted the praise even of Gibbon."—CHARLES BUTLER.

"Elegant and ingenious. . . His observations on the character and religion of Mahomet are always adapted to his argument, and generally founded in truth and reason. He sustains the part of a lively and eloquent advocate, and sometimes rises to the merit of an historian and philosopher."—GIBBON: Decline and Fall, ch. liii., n. See, also, i. n.

"I have praised, and I still praise, the eloquent sermons which were preached in St. Mary's pulpit, at Oxford, by Dr. White. . . I smiled at a passage in one of his private letters to Mr. Badcock: 'The part where we encounter Gibbon must be brilliant and striking.'"—GIBBON: Memoirs, ed. 1837, 98.

The letter which Gibbon quotes, (we do not find the word "striking" in it,) dated Jan. 8, 1784, is one of the melancholy evidences which proved to the world that White had preached, as his own, compositions which owed a large part of their merit to the Rev. Samuel Badcock (p. 98, supra) and Dr. Samuel Parr. For a history of this discreditable transaction, see Dr. Johnstone's Memoirs of Parr, in his Works of Parr, 1828, 8 vols. 8vo, (and Parr's Correspondence:) and for a list of pamphlets on the subject, see Bohn's Lowndes, Part 10, (1864,) 2901. White, or Anglus ex Albis, Candidus, Bianchi, Richworth, Blackloe, or Vitus, Thomas, an eminent English philosopher and Roman Catholic priest, a nephew of Edmund Plowden, and a native of Hatton, Essex, was ordained priest at Douay, 1617, and was employed in teaching philosophy and divinity, residing at Douay, Rome, and Paris, with occasional interruptions, until 1633, when he was chosen President of the English College at Lisbon; in 1630 he returned to England, and for some years served the duty of the mission; resided for a considerable time with Sir Kenelm Digby, whose philosophy he supported in several of his works. In 1650 he was again a Professor at Douay, and Vice-President of the English College; soon after returned to England, where he spent his latter years; d. in Drury Lane, London, July 6, 1676, aged 94.

"By his death the Roman Catholics lost an eminent orator from among them; and it has been a question among some of them whether ever any secular priest of England went beyond him in secular matters."—Wood.

Whitefield, Francis. Utility and Importance of Human Learning Stated: a Sermon, Lon., 1782, 4to.

Whitefield, George, the founder of the Calvinistic branch of Methodists, the great-grandson of the Rev. Samuel Whitefield, and son of Thomas Whitefield, wine-merchant of Bristol, and subsequently inn-keeper of Gloucester, was b. in the latter place, Dec. 16, (O.S.) 1714, and lost his father in 1716; admitted a servitor of Pembroke College, Oxford, 1733; ordained deacon, 1736; embarked on his first expedition to Georgia, Dec. 23, 1737, and returned at the close of the next year; commenced preaching in the open air, Feb. 17, 1739, and from that time until his death, which occurred at Newburyport, Massachusetts, Sept. 30, 1770, was actively engaged in public, chiefly itinerant, ministrations. From his ordination until his death, a period of thirty-four years, he preached upwards of 18,000 sermons, crossed the Atlantic seven times, and travelled many thousands of miles both in Britain and America. When his strength was failing, he put himself on what he called "short allowance," viz.: preaching only once every weekday and thrice on Sunday. He published a number of journals, sermons, &c., g. v. in Watt's Bibl. Brit.; Bohn's Lowndes, Part 10, 1864, 2904; Cat. Lib. Mass. Hist. Soc., 1860, ii. 598; and some of the authorities subjoined. The Works of the Rev. George Whitefield, M.A., to which is prefixed an Account of his Life, were published Lon., 1771-72, 6 vols. 8vo: to which add, as vol. vii., Memoirs of his Life, by the Rev. John Gillies, D.D., 1772, 8vo; Falkirk, 1798, 8vo; Lon., 1813, 8vo, (reviewed in Eclec. Mag., Dec. 1812: also in J. Foster's Essays, ed. 1856, ii. 62.) See, also, SEYMOUR, AARON CROSSLEY HOBART, No. 2. A collection of his Letters, 1734-1770, was published 1772, 3 vols. 8vo; again, 1779, 3 vols. 8vo. His Letters are comprised in vols. i., ii., iii. of his Works, 1771-72, 6 vols. 8vo. Collections of his Sermons were published 1738, 12mo, (Christian's Companion;) 1738, 8vo; 1739, 8vo; 1739, 8vo; 1739, 2 vols. 12mo; XII., 1740, 12mo; IX., 1742, 8vo; 1753, 12mo; XVIII., Revised by A. Gifford, 1771, 8vo; another ed., 1778, 8vo; LVII., 1782, 2 vols. 8vo. There are American editions of his Sermons: Phila., 1740, 2 vols. 12mo; Revised by A. Gifford, Springfield, 1803, 12mo; Sermons, Bost., 1820, 12mo; Life and Sermons, Hartford, 8vo; Life and Sermons, with Introd. by Rev. C. C. Stone, Phila., 1859, 8vo. LXXV. of his Sermons on Important Subjects were published Lon., 1812, 3 vols. 8vo; 1825, 8vo; with Memoir by Samuel Drew, 1828, 8vo; 1833, 8vo; 1835, 8vo; 1861, 8vo; 1864, 8vo.

"There are extant seventy-five of the sermons by which Whitefield agitated nations, and the more remote influence of which is still distinctly to be traced in the popular divinity and the national character of Great Britain and of the United States. . . . Deficient in learning, meagre in thought, and redundant in language as these discourses, they yet fulfil the one great condition of genuine eloquence. They propagate their own kindly warmth, and leave their stings behind them."—SIR JAMES STEPHEN: Edin. Rev., lxvii. 519, 520; and in Stephen's Miscell. Writings.

"He is the most extraordinary man in our times. He has the most commanding eloquence I ever heard in any person; his abilities are very considerable; his zeal unquenchable; and his piety and excellence genuine, — unquestionable."—LORD BOLINGBROKE: Life of the Countess of Huntingdon.

"He served to awaken to a consciousness of their deplorable state thousands to whose apathy and ignorance a colder preacher might have spoken in vain; and perhaps even the Church of England herself has been less impaired by the schism than benefited by the effects of emulation upon her learned clergy."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

"From the days of Paul of Tarsus and Martin Luther to our own, history records the career of no man who, with a less alloy of motives terminating in self, or of passions breaking loose from the control of reason, concentrated all the faculties of his soul with such intensity and perseverance for the accomplishment of one great design. . . . Whitefield was a great and a holy man; amongst the foremost of the heroes of philanthropy; and, as a preacher, without a superior or a rival."—SIR JAMES STEPHEN: Edin. Rev., lxvii. 513, 514.

David Hume—certainly not an indiscriminate admirer of what is termed "evangelical preaching"—declared that it was worth while to travel twenty miles to hear Whitefield; and John Newton was accustomed to leave his bed at four o'clock in the winter mornings to attend his discourses in the Tabernacle, which was lighted by the lanterns carried by thousands of people. And a most memorable triumph of his oratory is thus honourably recorded by the vanquished,—one of the most sagacious, resolute, and dispassionate of men. Whitefield had much at heart the establishment of an Orphan House in Savannah, and when in Philadelphia he consulted his friend Franklin on the subject:

"I did not disapprove of the design; but, as Georgia was then destitute of materials and workmen, and it was proposed to send them from Philadelphia at a great expense, I thought it would have been better to have built the House at Philadelphia and brought the children to it. This I advised; but he was resolute in his first project, rejected my counsel, and I therefore refused to contribute. I happened soon after to attend one of his sermons, in the course of which I perceived he intended to finish with a collection, and I silently resolved he should get nothing from me. I had in my pocket a handful of copper money, three or four silver dollars, and five pistols in gold. As he proceeded, I began to soften, and concluded to give the copper. Another stroke of his oratory made me ashamed of that, and determined me to give the silver; and he finished so admirably that I emptied my pocket wholly into the collector's dish, gold and all. At this sermon there was also one of our club, who, being of my sentiment respecting the building in Georgia, and suspecting a collection might be intended, had by precaution emptied his pockets before he came from home. Towards the conclusion of the discourse, however, he felt a strong inclination to give, and applied to a neighbour, who stood near him, to lend him some money for the purpose. The request was fortunately made to perhaps the only man in the company who had the firmness not to be affected by the preacher. His answer was, At any other time, friend Hopkinson, I would lend to thee freely; but not now, for these seems to be out of thy right senses."—Franklin's Autobiography, ch. viii.

"MEMORIAL OF GEORGE WHITEFIELD.—The corner-stone of Whitefield's Tabernacle was recently laid with appropriate ceremonies in London. This building is about to be erected on the site of the old chapel raised in 1740 by Rev. George Whitefield, and long the scene of his ministerial labours in Tabernacle Row, Finsbury, a borough of London. The new edifice will afford seats for one thousand persons, and will cost about $35,000 in gold. The change in the condition of the Dissenters in England since Whitefield's time is very remarkable; for when he built his tabernacle in the open fields of Finsbury there were only three clergymen of his way of thinking in London, and their chapels were hidden in obscure courts."—Sept. 25, 1868.

Whitelaw, Alexander, one of Dr. Robert Watt's amanuenses in the compilation of the Bibliotheca Britannica, edited the following books. 1. Casket of Literary Gems, Series I. and II., Glasg., 1829, 4 vols. 12mo. Contains upwards of 700 extracts from nearly 300 authors, with 25 illustrations.

"An extensive and valuable selection of our finest prose and poetry."—Edin. Lit. Gaz.

2. Republic of Letters: a Selection in Poetry and Prose from the Works of the Most Eminent Writers, with many Original Pieces, 1833, 4 vols. 12mo. With 25 illustrations.

"We do not know a more agreeable companion."—Aberd. Jour.

3. The Book of Scottish Songs: a Collection of the Best and Most Approved Songs of Scotland, [1270 in number,] with Critical and Historical Notices regarding them and their Authors, sq., 1843; 1845; 1853; 1862.

"Decidedly the best and most extensive collection of songs that has ever issued from the press."—Liverp. Albion.

4. Book of Scottish Ballads, with Historical and Critical Notices, sq., 1845; 1853; 1863.

Whitelocke, Whitlocke, or Whitlock, Bulstrode, the son of Sir James Whitelocke, (infra), was b. in London, August 2, 1605; admitted a gentleman commoner of St. John's College, Oxford, 1620, and subsequently entered himself at the Middle Temple; M.P. for Great Marlow, 1640, and soon became distinguished as a moderate opponent of the arbitrary measures of Charles I.; Governor of Windsor Castle, 1644; a Commissioner of the Admiralty, 1645; a Commissioner of the Great Seal, March, 1647-48, and Feb. 1648-9; High Steward of Oxford, 1648; disapproved of the trial and execution of Charles I.; Ambassador to Sweden, 1653, and created by Queen Christina Knight of the Order of Amarthia, (whence he is sometimes styled Sir Bulstrode;) M.P. for Buckinghamshire, 1654; resigned the Great Seal, and was made a Commissioner of the Treasury, 1655; Speaker of the House of Commons, 1656; appointed one of the Lords of the Other House, Dec. 1657; created by Cromwell (only nine days before his death) a Viscount, which title he declined; was one of the Commissioners of the Great Seal under Richard Cromwell, and President of the Council of State after his displacement; at the Restoration, by the advice of Charles II., retired to his estate of Chilton, in Wiltshire, and remained there until his death, Jan. 28, 1676.

1. Monarchy Asserted to be the Best, Most Ancient, and Legal Form of Government, Lon., 1660, 8vo. He also published a number of speeches. After his death appeared: 2. Memorials of the English Affairs: or an Historical Account of what passed from the Beginning of the Reign of King Charles I. to the Restoration of King Charles II., 1682, fol. Pub. (the Preface is by Rymer) by the Earl of Anglesey, (see ANNESLEY, ARTHUR,) who mutilated and altered the text: hence this is known as the truncated edition: see HUME, DAVID, p. 916, (supra), and D'Israeli's Curios. of Lit., ed. Lon., 1851, 248, 337. New Edition, with many Additions never before Printed, with Index, 1732, fol. This contains the passages which the Earl omitted. Dent, Part 2, 1458, £5 18s.; Willett, 2699, £6 10s. New edition, Oxford, Univ. Press, 1852, (some 1853,) 4 vols. 8vo, £1 10s. The absence of a new and copious Index is disgraceful. Look, too, at the new editions, from the same press, of Clarendon, 1839, and Burnet, 1833. Is there no one connected with the Oxford University Press able to construct an Index?

"Whitlock, that has been so much cried up, is a meagre diary, wrote by a poor-spirited, self-interested, and self-conceited lawyer of eminence; but full of facts."—BISHOP WARBURTON: Letters to a Late Em. Prelate, Lett. LVIII. See, also, Letters LIX. and XCI.

"Let me remark, in passing, as a singularity, how much English history has been beholden to four great men who have possessed the highest dignity in the law: More, Bacon, Clarendon, and Whitlocke. . . . Whitlocke, with his usual candour. . . . Whitlocke. . . a man of great abilities and merit. . . . Clarendon's History of the Civil Wars does honour to his memory, and, except Whitlocke's Memorials, is the most candid account of those times composed by any contemporary author."—DAVID HUME: Hist. of Eng., chaps. xxvi., liv., lxii., lxiv. See, also, lvi.

"Whitlocke's journal is a collection of facts, with occasional disquisitions, very short and very few, but always very interesting and important. It must by all means be looked over in conjunction with the more regular narrative of other historians. . . . The most important passages are generally in Italian."—PROF. SMYTH: Lects. on Mod. Hist., Lects. XVI., XVII.

"[Bowles] Praised Whitlocke's book. Lord Lansdowne, said his father had told him that one day in calling on Lord Chatham he found he had been setting his son Pitt to make an abstract of Whitlocke's Memorial as a task. How much more sensible than to set a boy to make dull Greek or Latin verses!"—T. MOORE: Memoirs, &c., 1853, iv. 159.

"The book is not very important,—not at all interesting. . . . No duller writer ever wrote the English language. He has no style, scarcely a method; his facts are tumbled into type, with-cut order,—and his opinions on the great acts of the Revolution are contradictory. . . . The man who preferred the galleys to Guicciardini would have hanged himself after three pages of White Locke."—Lon. Athen., 1855, 170.

See, also, Ireland Vindicated, by M. Carey, Phila., 1819, 8vo. Referring to Hume's notice (ut supra) of Clarendon, we are pleased to see that the University of Oxford intends to publish A Catalogue of the Letters and Papers of the Earl of Clarendon; and we recommend, as a supplement to Clarendon and Whitelocke, The Bosobel Tracts, Relating to the Escape of Charles the Second after the Battle of Worcester, and his Subsequent Adventures; Edited by J. Hughes, Edin., 1857, demy 8vo. See, also, KENNET, WHITE, D.D., No. 8.

3. Essays, Ecclesiastical and Civil, Lon., 1706, 8vo; 1724, 8vo. 4. Memorial of the English Affairs from the Supposed Expedition of Brute to this Island to the End of the Reign of King James I.; Published from his Original Manuscript, with some Account of his Life and Writings, by William Penn, Esq., Governor of Pennsylvania, and a Preface by James Welwood, M.D., 1709, fol.; with new title-page, 1713, fol. 5. Notes upon the King's Writ for Choosing Members of Parliament, 13 Car. II., being Disquisitions on the Government of England by King, Lords, and Commons; published by Charles Morton, M.D., 1766, 2 vols. 4to.

"Written in times of great enquiry into the contents of legal records, by Bulstrode Whitelocke, who appears to have possessed from his master (Coke) a great fund of this branch of learning; and who, it is observed, in a Comment upon a dry and confined Text, conducts the reader to the deepest recesses of law and antiquity."—Bridgman's Leg. Bibl., 236.

6. Journal of the Swedish Embassy in the Years 1653 and 1654, &c.; with an Appendix of Original Papers; published by Charles Morton, M.D., 1772, 2 vols. 4to; New Edition, Revised by Henry Reeve, Esq., F.S.A., 1855, 2 vols. 8vo, £1 8s.; red. to 12s., 1860. This edition was pub. at the recommendation of Lord Macaulay, who had a high opinion of the work. Mr. Reeve has modernized the orthography throughout, added illustrative notes, and prefixed an Introduction containing Morton's sketch of the author and his own estimate of Whitelocke. Would that we could say that he had added a copious Index!

"It is the best written of Whitelocke's works, and it has an enduring interest as the picture of a country and a court then at the zenith of its greatness. . . . In short, his [Mr. Reeve's] task is undertaken with zeal and executed with moderation. This is no slight praise to accord an antiquary."—Lon. Athen., 1855, 170.

Clarendon says that Whitelocke "never led, but followed; and was rather carried away with the torrent than swam with the stream."

"He was an excellent com. lawyer, was as well read in books as in men, and well vers'd in the oriental tongues, and therefore belov'd of Selden (who would have made him one of his executors) and the virtuosi of his time."—WOOD: Athen. Oxon., Bliss's ed., iii. 1044, (q. v.)

We should be glad to see in print a MS. autobiography left by him, entitled Remembrances of the Labours of Whitelocke in the Annales of his Life, for the Instruction of his Children: see Morton, in Pref. to No. 5, and D'Israeli's Curiosities of Lit., ed. 1851, 249. He took the hint from his father's Liber Famelicus, (see WHITELOCKE, JAMES.)

There has also been published Memoirs of Bulstrode Whitelocke, Lord Commissioner of the Great Seal, &c., Biographical and Critical, by R. H. Whitelocke, Esq., Royal Professor, Würtemberg, Dec. 1860, demy 8vo.

Whitelocke, Sir James, father of the preceding, and a man of considerable learning, was b. in London, 1570; educated at St. John's College, Oxford; became M.P. for Woodstock, and Chief-Justice of Chester, and subsequently a Justice of the King's Bench; d. June 22, 1632. He published several Speeches, and Lectures or Readings in the Middle Temple Hall, and was the author of some antiquarian papers in Hearn's Curious Discourses: in which see also an Account of his Life and Writings. See, also, Biog. Brit. He left a work referred to in our notice of WHITELOCKE, BULSTRODE: this has recently been given to the world, viz.: Liber Famelicus of Sir James Whitelocke, a Judge of the Court of King's Bench in the Reigns of James I. and Charles I.;

Now first Published from the Original Manuscript; Edited by John Bruce, Esq., 1858, sm. 4to, (Camden Soc., lxx.) Mr. Bruce (b. 1802, d. 1869) furnished a valuable Introduction. The volume was reviewed in Lon. Athen., 1858, ii. 354. The Original Manuscript was lent to Mr. Bruce by the great-great-grandson of Bulstrode Whitelocke. For notices of Sir J. Whiting, John, of Naylesy, afterwards of Wington, in Somersetshire, removed to London, where he d. 1722, aged 67. Of his many works (see list in J. Smith's Cat. of Friends' Books, 1867, ii. 917-22) we notice the following: 1. An Abstract of the Lives, Precepts, and Sayings of the Ancient Fathers which immediately succeeded Christ and his Apostles, Lon., 1684, 4to. 2. Judas and the Chief Priests conspiring to Betray Christ and his Followers, &c.; in Answer to George Keith's Fourth (False Partial) Narrative, &c., 1701, 4to. 3. Truth and Innocence Defended, &c.; in Answer to Cotton Mather (a Priest of Boston) his Calumnies, Lyes, and Abuses of the People called Quakers in his late Church History of New England, &c., Lon., 1702, 8vo. 4. The Admonishers Admonished, &c., 1705, 4to. 5. A Catalogue of Friends' Books: written by many of the People called Quakers, from the Beginning or First Appearance of the said People: Collected for a General Service by J. W., 1708, 8vo. Hunter, Dec. 1861, £1 16s.; J. R. Smith's Bibl. Amer. Nova, 1865, 3312, £1 1s. and 18s. Contains the titles of many curious early tracts relating to America, with notices of the authors.

"Honest John Whiting has surely in this work [catalogue-making] quite borne away the garland, and left it a choice legacy to painful librarians; and as a looking-glass even to learned academies."—WILLIAM OLDYS.

"It is well known to all who are interested in the history and literature of the Society of Friends, that in the year 1708 a Catalogue of Friends' Books was published by John Whiting. This work having been long out of print, and, in consequence, become very scarce, it occurred to me that it would be desirable to compile a new Catalogue down to the present time; and, feeling much interest in the subject, about twenty years ago I commenced my labours, which have resulted in the work now before us. It will be seen that the plan originally adopted by John Whiting has been adhered to, as it can scarcely be improved upon."—JOSEPH SMITH: Cat. of Friends' Books, 1867, i. Preface.

"A large portion of the titles recorded in this volume [Whiting's Catalogue] relate to America. Few bibliographical works exist, on any subject, more exhaustive or more honestly done. It has been incorporated, after the manner of latter-day bibliography, entire (but with reverent hands) in Joseph Smith's great work on Quaker Literature; but it is refreshing to consult old Whiting, in his truthful simplicity, in his own volume."—HENRY STEVENS: Bibl. Historica, 1870, 8vo, 2371.

To Joseph Smith's Catalogue of Friends' Books, 1867, 2 vols. demy 8vo, add—A Catalogue of Friends' Portraits, Views of Meeting-Houses, Schools, Books, with Portraits, and Quaker Caricatures, &c.: Issued by Joseph Smith, 6, Oxford Street, London, 1870.

Whiting, William, b. in Concord, Mass., 1813, graduated at Harvard College, 1833, and subsequently studied law, which he practised in Boston for many years; Solicitor to the U. States War Department, 1863-65. He was for five years President of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society. He is the author of a number of pamphlets, consisting chiefly of legal arguments before the U. States Courts, &c.; a Memoir of Rev. Joseph Harrington, prefixed to a volume of his Sermons, Bost., 1854, 16mo, and pub. sep., 1854, 16mo, (see N. Amer. Rev., lxxix. 535;) and of the following very important treatise: The War Powers of the President and the Legislative Powers of Congress, in Relation to Rebellion, Treason, and Slavery, Bost., 1862, 8vo, pp. 143; 10th ed., with large additions, Sept. 1863, 8vo. See Amer. Lit. Gaz., Oct. 1, 1863, 363.

"This work first formulated the war powers of the country. It was called for from all quarters, and more than one edition was sent for from England, France, and other foreign countries. It has passed through ten editions in Boston and seventeen in New York, and is still the hand-book of the American statesman. The later editions are printed with other more recent writings on the same class of subjects, viz.: Military Arrests in Time of War; Reconstruction of the Union, or, The Return of the Rebellious States; and Military Government."—Duckinck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit., Supp., 1866, 100.

With the soundness or unsoundness of the reasoning of this volume we have, in this place, nothing to do: the style comes within our province, and we do not see how this could possibly be better.

Mr. O'Connor's pamphlet (ubi supra) "boldly pits Walt Whitman not only against all the poets of the day, but demands for him place and rank beside the great masters, Æschylus, Homer, Dante, and Shakspeare. It proclaims him the inspired bard and prophet of his era and land." On the other hand, (for it is our wont to give both sides,) Public Opinion says that any man in England who might issue such senseless trash as Walt Whitman's poems would be considered a proper inmate for an asylum; but it is to be remembered that Public Opinion is an English journal, and a natural jealousy for the fame of Milton, Shakspeare, and Spenser (and there is a good deal in Whitman that will be found in neither of these) is not to be harshly censured.

Whittier, John Greenleaf, a descendant of a family belonging to the Society of Friends, (with which body Mr. Whittier is also connected,) and long settled on the banks of the Merrimack, was b. at the homestead near Haverhill, Massachusetts, 1808, and spent his first twenty years chiefly on his father's farm; in 1829 removed to Boston, to become editor of The American Manufacturer, a protective-tariff paper; in 1830 removed to Hartford, to take charge of the New England Weekly, a connection which terminated in 1831, when he returned to Haverhill and resumed his agricultural pursuits, which occupied him for the next five or six years,—not so closely, however, as to prevent his attendance in 1835 and 1836 in the Massachusetts Legislature as member for his native town; in 1836 became one of the Secretaries of the American Anti-Slavery Society, and soon afterwards removed to Philadelphia, where he remained until 1840, engaged during most of the time in editing The Pennsylvania Freeman, a vigorous opponent of negro bondage; in 1840 removed to Amesbury, Massachusetts, where he has since resided, (1870,) employing a portion of his hours in the discharge of his duties as Corresponding Editor of The National Era, an anti-slavery paper published at Washington, D.C.

"Mr. Whittier is essentially a lyric poet, and the fervor of his temperament gives his pieces of that kind a remarkable force and effectiveness. . . . Mr. Whittier, if the most fervid of our poets, is sometimes hurried away by this very quality, in itself an excellence, into being the most careless. . . . "Whittier's Ballads of New England," beautifully illustrated, has just been issued by Fields, Osgood & Co. Whittier is a poet who deserves to be better known this side the water. "Whittier, it seems to us, is the most thoroughly American of all our native poets, selecting home subjects to illustrate a genius which appears not yet to have attained full maturity, but in each new production exhibits decided improvement: at least we find his imagination stronger and higher in his flight in 'Snow-Bound' and 'The Tent on the Beach,' his recent, than in his previous productions, beautiful and elevating as many of them are. . . . Fields, Osgood & Co., who have published about three-fifths of all good American poetry, have just issued a handsome library edition of Whittier's Poems, in two volumes, containing all that he has written since he first ventured to print, —now thirty-five years ago. Indeed, 'Mogg Megone,' the first poem in the collection, was composed still earlier. It is surprising to find in two stout volumes like these so little that is not good. There never was an exceptionable line written by John Greenleaf Whittier; and few poets have written so entirely for the greatest happiness of the greatest number."—R. S. MACKENZIE, D.C.L.

We are informed that Mr. Whittier "first ventured to print"—in The Newburyport Free Press—in 1826.

Barry, of Boston, taken in 1858, was said to be the best likeness of the poet.

"John Greenleaf Whittier is one of our most characteristic poets. Few excel him in warmth of temperament. . . . A common thought comes from his pen 'rammed with life.' He seems in some of his lyrics to pour out his blood with his lines. There is a rush of passion in his verse which sweeps every thing along with it. His fancy and imagination can hardly keep pace with their fiery companion. His vehement sensibility will not allow the inventive faculties fully to complete what they may have commenced. The stormy qualities of his mind, acting at the suggestions of conscience, produce a kind of military morality which uses all the deadly arms of verbal warfare. . . . Whittier has the soul of a great poet, and we should not be surprised if he attained the height of excellence in his art."—EDWIN P. WHIPPLE: N. Amer. Rev., Jan. 1844, (lviii.) 30, 31, 32; and in Whipple's Essays and Reviews, i. 68, 69, 71.

"His poetry bursts from the soul with the fire and energy of an ancient prophet. And his noble simplicity of character is the delight of all who know him."—WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, D.D.

"To the descriptive talent as related to natural scenery which we have noted as the gift of our best poets, John G. Whittier unites the enthusiasm of a reformer and the sympathies of the patriot. There is a prophetic anathema and a hard-like invocation in some of his pieces. He is a true son of New England, and, beneath the calm, fraternal bearing of the Quaker, nurses the imaginative ardour of a devotee, both of nature and humanity."—HENRY T. TUCKERMAN: Sketch of Amer. Lit., appended to Shaw's Eng. Lit., N. York, 1852, 481, or ed. 1867, 522.

"His writings are characterized by earnestness of tone, high moral purpose, and energy of expression. His spirit is that of a sincere and fearless reformer; and his fervid appeals are the true utterance of a brave and loving heart. . . . He describes natural scenery correctly and beautifully, and a vein of genuine tenderness runs through his nature."—GEORGE S. HILLARD. F.-C. Reader, 1856, 488.

"M. Whittier, quaker de croyance, et abolitioniste par religion et par principe politique, porte dans sa lutte contre l'esclavage une ardeur qui nui même à son talent. Sa poésie alors, pleine d'élan et de vigueur, laisse beaucoup à désirer pour la forme et la netteté de l'expression."—G. VAPEREAU: Dict. univ. des Contemp., Paris, 1858, 1773.

"His faults—harshness and want of polish—are evident; but there is more life, and spirit, and soul, in his verses than in those of eight-ninths of Mr. Griswold's Poets and Poetry of America immortal ninety."—Fraser's Mag., July, 1850, (same in Internat. Mag., i. 168.)

A recent writer (Jan. 1865) remarks,

"Whittier's 'Barbara Frietchie' was, we are informed by Rev. Mr. Fletcher, so much appreciated by the Emperor of Brazil that he read it again and again in English in the presence of a number of gentlemen of the court, and then brought it before the Princesses and their husbands just arrived from Europe, (the Count d'Eu and the Prince of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha,) as one of the finest specimens of poetry in any language, embodying heroic female patriotism."

"An institution of learning called 'Whittier College,' in honor of the Quaker poet, has been opened at Salem, Henry county, Iowa. It is to be conducted according to the principles of the Society of Friends, and open to all alike who will conform to its rules and regulations."—May, 1868.

Whittingham, or Whittingham, William, b. at Chester, 1524, and educated at Brazenose College, Oxford, whilst at Orleans married the sister of Calvin; subsequently took orders in the Geneva form, and succeeded Knox in the ministry at Geneva; returned to England, and in 1563 was promoted to the deanery of Durham, which, notwithstanding efforts to dislodge him, he held until his death, 1589. Whilst at Geneva he translated into metre five of the Psalms, of which the 119th was one, together with the Ten Commandments, and a Prayer, all of which make part of the collection known as Sternhold and Hopkins's; see Howard's Psalmists, i. 115; Cotton's List. of Edits. of the Bible, &c.; Bohn's Lowndes, Part 7, (1861), 1994. "Mr. Whitty is a genuine satirist, employing satire for a genuine purpose. You laugh with him very much; but the laughter is fruity and ripe in thought. His style is serious, and his cast of mind severe. . . . The author has a merriment akin to that of Jacques and that of Timon. He works with a desire to influence rather than with a wish to amuse."—Lon. Athen., 1857, 303.

"Mr. Bruce Whyte, in his curious volumes, 'Histoire des Langues Romanes,' [vol. iii. ch. xl.] has given a careful analysis of Petrarch's 'Africa,' which he has actually read, and discovered some passages of real merit."—MILMAN: Hist. of Lat. Chris., vol. viii. b. xiv. ch. v. See, also, ch. vi. n.

"The authenticity of this note [in Petrarch's Virgil: 'Laura propriis virtutibus illustris et meis longum celebrata carminibus,' &c.] is still disputed by those who wish to overturn the whole history of Laura. Mr. Whyte, a learned Englishman, who discovered at Florence an unedited Life of Petrarch, written soon after his death, by Luigi Peruzzi, who had known him, also rejects the evidence of this note. But it is written in a tone which ought to silence incredulity, because feigned emotions never bear the stamp of nature and reality. [Curious style of criticism, this!] The Virgil of Petrarch has long been in the royal collection at Paris." In Bohn's Lowndes, ut supra, we also find a list of small Spanish Tracts, also republished by B. B. Wiffen, viz.: 21. Carta á los Reyes D. Fernando y Da. Isabél de su Embajador en Roma en 1498, inédita, San Sebastian, 1842, 8vo, 12 leaves. 22. Wiffen, Jeremiah Holme, a member of the Society of Friends, b. near Woburn, Bedfordshire, 1792; after some years' experience as a schoolmaster, was appointed Librarian to the Duke of Bedford, at Woburn Abbey, and retained this position until his death, May 2, 1836.

"In his versification Mr. Wiffen very frequently imitates Moore, and sometimes not most successfully. He is also rather too much attached to double rhymes."—Lon. Mon. Rev., xciii. 260.

4. The Works of Garcilasso de la Vega, surnamed the Prince of Castilian Poets; Translated into English Verse: with a Critical and Historical Essay on Spanish Poetry, and a Life of the Author, 1823, demy 8vo, pp. 407; 25 copies on l. p.: Utterson, 1857, £2 2s.

"His translations uniformly rise with the subject; and he has shown very considerable dexterity in rendering with fidelity, yet in an improved shape, some of those prosing passages which occur here and there in many of Garcilasso's poems. . . . We cannot say that we admire his Sonnets, (which, by-the-by, are but indifferently translated by Mr. Wiffen)."—Edin. Rev., xl. 457, 463: Lyric Poetry of Spain.

"His translation in general is both spirited and elegant, but is occasionally uneven and obscure, especially in the Sonnets: though allowance must certainly be made for the difficulty of rendering some of the latter, with any effect, into English."—Lon. Mon. Rev., ci. 405.

"Our translator is a perfect master of the language in which Garcilasso wrote; and he renders him into English with the ease, the gracefulness, and the majestic flow of an English poet. . . . Mr. Wiffen's own prose introduction is a model of that species of composition, full, clear, yet concise, and, above all, entirely unaffected."—Blackw. Mag., xiv. 26.

"Has executed his task in a manner highly creditable to his taste and judgment."—New Month. Mag.

"The translation is constrained, and fails in the harmony that so much distinguishes the original, and the Life is heavy, and not always accurate in its statement of facts."—GEORGE TICKNOR: Hist. of Span. Lit., 3d Amer. ed., Bost., 1863, i. 456, n. See, also, 447, n.

5. Jerusalem Delivered: an Epic Poem, in Twenty Cantos; Translated into English Spenserian Verse from the Italian of Tasso: together with a Life of the Poet, interspersed with Translations of his Verses to the Princess Leonora of Este; and a List of English Crusaders; with 20 vignette engravings, (also pub. separately on India paper, with a head of Tasso, 1825,) 1824—25, Lon., 2 vols. r. 8vo, £4 4s.; l. p., (of this 1st ed. nearly all the copies were destroyed by a fire at the printer's in 1824 or 1825,) imp. 8vo, £6 6s.; 2d ed., 1826, 3 vols. demy 8vo; 3d ed., 1830, 2 vols. r. 18mo; 4th ed., 1836, 3 vols. 8vo; N. York, 1846, &c., 18mo; 5th ed., (Bohn's Illust. Lib., xxx.), 1854, p. 8vo; 1857, p. 8vo; N. York, 1868, 16mo, (Appleton's Globe Edition.) Tasso's Life only, with a Review of "Jerusalem Delivered," by M. Sismonde de Sismondi, N. York, (Delisser & P.'s House. Lib., viii.,) 1859, 18mo. Upon this translation Wiffen was employed more or less during six or seven years. He published in 1821, 8vo, pp. 93, as a Specimen, Book the Fourth; accompanied by a Prefatory Dissertation on Existing Translations. This was commended by Rev. Encyc. de Paris, Avril, 1822, and (with qualifications) by Lon. Mon. Rev., June, 1821, (xcv.) 161. We quote some opinions on the whole work:

"Mr. Wiffen's translation will rank with those of Cary and Rose. . . . While he leaves the train of all other translators far behind, he has executed his task with no less spirit, and with far more fidelity and consistent elegance, than Fairfax himself; and while he enthusiastically worships the genius of his Italian master, he has caught the inspiration and reflected the light of his ethereal mind."—Lon. Mon. Rev., Nov. 1825, (cviii.) 311, 318.

"Few translations in any language give a better notion of the spirit of the original."—Eccl. Rev., Nov. 1825.

"On the whole, we cannot consider this work as a close version of Tasso; and Mr. Wiffen's composition, though respectable, has many deformities. . . . We think ourselves warranted, then, in saying that Mr. Wiffen (though he has fairly distanced Hoole and Hunt) cannot hope to contend successfully with Fairfax."—Lon. Quar. Rev., June, 1826, (xxiv.) 12, 14, (a valuable paper on translations.)

"The best scholar among a' the Quakers is Friend Wiffen, a capital translator, Sir Walter tells me, o' poets w' foreign tongues, sic as Tawso, and w' an original vein too, sir, which has produced, as I opine, some verra pure ore."—SHEPHERD: Noctes Ambros., April, 1831: Blackw. Mag., xxix. 699.

A volume of his Speeches and Addresses, 1841 to 1861, was announced in 1861, but has not yet (1870) appeared. A notice of his career as author, orator, and prelate was published in The Churchman's Family Magazine for June, 1864. See, also, People's Magazine, 1867, (portrait,) and The Position of the Bishop of Oxford in Reference to Ritualism, by a Senior Resident, 1867, 8vo. Mr. Shuttle projected (in 1862) a detailed biography of the Bishop; but his Lordship objected to the republication of his private letters, and we are still without the promised Memoir.

Wilberforce, (anciently Wilberfoss,) William, a son of Robert Wilberforce, a merchant of Hull, and grandson of William Wilberforce, twice mayor of that town, was b. in High Street, Hull, August 24, 1759, and educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, (graduating B.A. 1781, M.A. 1788,) where he formed an intimacy with William Pitt and Isaac Milner, with both of whom, in 1784–85, he made a tour on the continent. Milner's influence, aided by the solemn admonitions of Doddridge's Rise and Progress, revived in his heart the serious impressions which he had acquired from the instructions of a zealous aunt, a warm admirer of Whitefield's sermons,—impressions which resulted in the enthusiastic consecration of his long life to the glory of God and the good of man. He sat as M.P. for Hull, 1780–1784, for York, 1784–1812, for Bramber, 1812–1825. He commenced his parliamentary efforts for the extermination of the iniquitous slave-trade (by notice of intention to bring in his bill) in 1787, and was well rewarded for twenty years' toil, in 1807, when the Abolition Bill passed the Lords and Commons.

"During the debate on the second reading of the Abolition Bill, when Sir Samuel Romilly entreated the young members of Parliament to let this day's event be a lesson to them how much the rewards of virtue exceeded those of ambition, and then contrasted the feelings of the Emperor of the French, in all his greatness, with those of that honoured individual who would lay his head upon his pillow and remember that the slave-trade was no more, the whole house, surprised into forgetfulness of its ordinary habits, burst forth into acclamations of applause,—a tribute of approbation 'such as was scarcely ever before given,' says Bishop Porteus, 'to any man sitting in his place in either house of Parliament.'"—Life of Wilberforce, in Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., xxi., 1860, 865.

"He spent the remainder of his days in comparative retirement,—an affectionate, cheerful, benevolent, and devout old man,—devoting, as he had done through life, much of his time and from one-third to a fourth of his income to acts of private charity. Family bereavements and loss of fortune were borne with pious resignation, and his last days were cheered by the abolition of slavery. He died in Cadogan-place, when nearly seventy-four years old, on Monday, July 28, 1833; and at the very last sitting of the House of Commons on the preceding Friday the bill for the abolition of slavery was read a second time. 'Thank God,' he exclaimed, 'that I should have lived to witness a day in which England is willing to give twenty millions sterling for the abolition of slavery.' He was buried in Westminster Abbey, with all the honours of a public funeral, and a statue, by Joseph, is there erected to his memory."—Life of Wilberforce, in Knight's Eng. Cyc., vi., 1858, 691.

Mr. Wilberforce was married May 30, 1797, to Barbara, eldest daughter of Isaac Spooner, Esq., and niece by her mother to the first Lord Colthorpe. With this lady he received a large accession to the handsome fortune which he inherited from his grandfather and his uncle. He had two daughters, who died in his lifetime, and left four sons, viz.: I. William; II. Robert Isaac, (supra); III. Samuel, (supra); IV. Henry William, (supra).

"Impartial judges will, we think, award to the book the praise of fidelity and diligence and unaffected modesty. . . . As an orator Wilberforce early "distinguished himself in Parliament by an engaging natural eloquence, set off by the sweetest and most exquisitely modulated of human voices;" whilst his "affectionate heart, caressing manners, and brilliant wit made him the most delightful of companions." (Lord Macaulay's Life of Pitt, in Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., xvii., 1859, 731. See, also, 744.)

On another occasion (Warren Hastings: Edin. Rev., Oct. 1841, 238) the same eminent authority, not accustomed to a profuse use of laudatory epithets, characterizes him as "That great and good man, the late William Wilberforce." Sir Samuel Romilly esteemed him "the most efficient speaker in the House of Commons;" and Pitt often remarked, "Of all the men I ever knew, Wilberforce has the greatest natural eloquence." Not the least of the many evidences of sterling Christian character presented by the author of the Practical View, were the subordination of rare powers of sarcastic wit to genial benevolence, and an occasional conscientious refusal to reciprocate in kind the votes and influence which had been exerted on behalf of his own parliamentary measures. To join issue with his friend and illustrious coadjutor, William Pitt, on the questions of peace with France in 1795, and the impeachment of Lord Melville in 1805, "was 'a stern task of soul,'"—but the Christian Statesman was equal to the trial.

"Mr. Pitt, it is reported, said of Wilberforce, that he was 'always to be had except when he was wanted.'"—ARCHBISHOP WHATELY: Bacon's Essays with Annotations: Of Praise.

When the cause was one of which he approved, it was not likely that he would be "wanted;" if otherwise, it was well that his absence should cause the want to be felt.

At least a few opinions from the many before us, on Wilberforce's characteristics, must be adduced:

"He is the very model of a reformer. Ardent without turbulence, mild without timidity or coldness, neither yielding to difficulties, nor disturbed or exasperated by them; patient and meek, yet intrepid; persisting for twenty years, through good report and evil report; just and charitable even to his most malignant enemies; unwearied in every experiment to disarm the prejudices of his more rational and disinterested opponents, and supporting the zeal without dangerously exciting the passions of his adherents."—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH: Diary, May 23d, 1808: Life, i. ch. viii.

See, also, his works, ed. 1854, iii. 376, and, by the same, Edin. Rev., lxvii. 148, and N. Amer. Rev., xxxv. 448, n.

Mackintosh says, "I never saw any one who touched life at so many points."

"The basis of Mr. Wilberforce's natural character was an intense fellow-feeling with other men. No one more readily adopted the interests, sympathized with the affections, or caught even the transient emotions of those with whom he associated. . . . The most somnolent company was aroused and gladdened at his presence. The heaviest countenance reflected some animation from his eye; nor was any one so dull as not to yield some sparks of intellect when brought into communication with him. . . . 'God has set before me the reformation of my country's manners,' is the solemn persuasion which he recorded in his twenty-seventh year, and from which, to the last hour of his life, he never swerved. . . . If in elevating the moral and religious character of our people during the last century the first place be due to the illustrious founder of Methodism, the second may be justly claimed for Mr. Wilberforce."—SIR JAMES STEPHEN: Edin. Rev., lxvii. 147, 160, 161. See, also, by the same, lxxx. 258.

"His Christianity was of the most amiable and attractive character,—his temper was cheerful even to playfulness,—his pleasantries, though measured, was copious,—and his wit, though chastened, ready and enlivened."—J. W. CROKER: Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxii. 285.

"Few persons have ever either reached a higher and more enviable place in the esteem of their fellow-creatures, or have better deserved the place they have gained, than William Wilberforce. . . . His nature was mild and amiable beyond that of most men; fearful of giving the least pain in any quarter, even while heated with the zeal of controversy on questions that roused all his passions; and more anxious, if it were possible, to gain over rather than to overpower an adversary,—to disarm him by kindness, or the force of reason, or awakening appeals to his feelings, rather than defeat him by hostile attack. . . . His eloquence was of a very high order. It was persuasive and pathetic in an eminent degree; but it was occasionally bold and impassioned, animated with the inspiration which deep feeling alone can breathe into spoken thought; chastened by pure taste, varied by extensive information, enriched by classical allusion, sometimes elevated by the more sublime topics of Holy Writ,—the thoughts and the spirit Wilberforce University, in Green county, Ohio, three miles from Xenia, was founded and is owned solely by coloured men. It was in the full tide of successful operation until April 14, 1865, when it was destroyed by fire. It is now (1870) partially or wholly rebuilt. It has prepared one hundred and twenty-seven young men and women for teachers, most of whom went South to act in that capacity, and thirteen men for the ministry. York, and at Huntington, Newton, and Norwalk, all in Connecticut; was Pastor of the North Congregational Church, Hartford, Conn., 1824-26; supplied the pulpit at Danbury, Conn., Dec. 1826-Jan. 1827; d. May 29, 1827. His great literary project was a poem on The Age of Benevolence, in Five Books. Of this he published Book the First, at New Haven, in 1822, 1000 copies. He left in MS. the Second, Third, and Fourth Books. Fragments of the poem will be found in his Remains, published after his death, (Hartford, 1828, 8vo, pp. 430,) which also contains a poem entitled The Religion of Taste, (delivered before the Phi Beta Kappa Society of Yale College in 1824,) fourteen Sermons, and a Memoir of the Author. In his descriptions of country scenery in the various seasons, "the pomp of groves, and garniture of fields," and the tenantry of meadow and woodland, (see his Spring in New England, Summer Noon, Sunset in September, Summer Evening, Lightning, all in The Age of Benevolence,) Wilcox is often peculiarly happy. A notice of his Life will be found in Sprague's Annals, ii., Trin. Congreg., 652, and biographical sketches and specimens of his poetry in Cheever's, Griswold's, Duyckinck's, and Cleveland's works on American Literature. See, also, N. Amer. Rev., xxxiii. 315, (by A. He left in MS. one volume of his long-projected Life of Dante, (Giotto's portrait of whom, in the Bargello, he was the means of restoring;) a poem entitled Hesperia; lyrics translated from the Italian, (which were to have been accompanied with Lives of their authors;) Law Lectures, &c. For some of these, at least, accompanied by a Memoir, we hope to be indebted to the author's son, William Cummings Wilde, Esq., of New Orleans. Since the above was written has appeared: Hesperia, a Poem, by Richard Henry Wilde; edited by his Son, Bost., 1867, 8vo. Mr. Wilde translated from the Spanish and French, as well as from the Italian. He contributed to the Southern Review and other periodicals. As an English poet he acquired distinction by his beautiful lines commencing

"My life is like the summer rose,
That opens to the morning sky," which has been rendered into Greek. (See G. P. Marsh's Lects. on the Eng. Language, N. York, 1860, 8vo, Lect. XXV.)

"Mr. Richard Henry Wilde, once a member of Congress from Georgia, and an accomplished scholar, had written some beautiful verses beginning, 'My life is like the summer rose,' &c., which, being published in the newspapers, became widely known. Some time after, Mr. Wilde was surprised to find in a Georgia newspaper a Greek Ode purporting to have been written by Alcæus, an early Eolian poet of somewhat obscure fame, and it was claimed that Mr. Wilde's verses were simply a translation of this Ode, the ideas in both being almost identical. As Mr. Wilde had never heard of Alcæus, he was much puzzled to account for this resemblance of the two poems. At the suggestion of a friend, the Greek Ode was sent to Mr. Binney for examination and criticism. He at once, much to the relief of Mr. Wilde, pronounced it a forgery, pointing out wherein its style differed from that of the classical Greek. It turned out afterwards that the Ode in question had been written by an Oxford scholar on a wager that no one in that University was sufficiently familiar with the style of the early Greek poets to detect the counterfeit. To carry out this scheme, he had translated Mr. Wilde's verses into Greek."—A Memoir of Horace Binney, Jr., by Charles J. Stillé, Phila., 1870, 8vo, 8, n.

We are not a little amazed at the alleged skepticism of this plain-spoken "Oxford scholar."

"New York, April 28, 1870.—George Wilkes, the proprietor of the Spirit of the Times, has received from the Emperor of Russia the grand cross of the Order of St. Stanislas, as a recognition for the suggestion made to the Russian Government in reference to an overland railway to China and India by the way of Russia. This mark of royal favour entitles the holder to have his male children at the Military School of Russia at the expense of the State."

Wilkes, John, the son of a distiller of Clerkenwell, and b. at that place, Oct. 17, 1727, was educated at the University of Leyden, where he acquired a taste for classical literature, which he retained through life; married in 1749 to Miss Mead, ten years his senior, from whom he was separated after the birth of one daughter, well known to the readers of his Letters; M.P. for Aylesbury, 1757, and again, 1761; commenced The North Briton, (weekly,) June, 1762, and in No. 45 (April 23, 1763) of that paper published an attack on the King, which led, April 30, to his arrest under a General Warrant, (declared by Chief-Justice Pratt, afterwards Lord Camden, to be "unconstitutional, illegal, and also absolutely void,") and caused his expulsion, Jan. 19, 1764, from the House of Commons; convicted in the Court of King's Bench, Feb. 21, 1764, of republishing No. 45 of The North Briton, and of printing and publishing an Essay on Woman; chosen M.P. for Middlesex, March 28, 1768, and expelled as the publisher of Lord Weymouth's Letter and author of the preface which accompanied it; re-elected at four successive elections by the same constituency, and four times refused admittance, on the ground of incapacity in consequence of previous expulsion; Alderman of Farringdon Without, April 24, 1770; Sheriff of London, 1774; M.P. for Middlesex, Oct. 10, 1774; took his seat without molestation, and sat in the House for many years, his last election, still for Middlesex, occurring in 1784; Chamberlain of London from Dec. 1, 1779, until his death, Dec. 26, 1797. Perhaps no unprincipled demagogue could ever more directly trace the successes of his life to the indiscretion of his enemies. In the two great questions—General Warrants and alleged legislative incapacity—with which his name was prominently connected, he was so clearly in the right that many who despised the man were obliged by their regard for the principles of constitutional liberty to do battle in his cause. But of his character we shall have more to say—or quote—hereafter.

1. Observations on the Papers relative to the Rupture with Spain, laid before both Houses of Parliament on Friday, Jan. 29, 1762, Lon., 1762, 8vo. Anon.; and attributed by Wilkes, by sly insinuations, to Dr. Douglas or Mr. Mauduit. Noticed in Lon. Mon. Rev., Mar. 1762, 230. It was very successful. 2. The North Briton, July, 1763, 2 vols. 12mo. There were 46 Nos. in all. No. 45, which was suppressed, is often wanting. See Lon. Mon. Rev., 1763, ii. 79, 157, 158, 398. Some sets are bound in 3 vols. fol., 1763. New ed., 1769, 4 vols. fol. Again, The North Briton, by John Wilkes, Charles Churchill, and others; Illustrated with Explanatory Notes, and a collection of all the Proceedings against Wilkes for No. 45, his Essay on Woman, Election, &c., 1772, 4 vols. 12mo. Has the 46 Nos. complete, and portraits of Wilkes, Churchill, Lord Camden, and Serjeant Glynn. The North Briton, vol. iii., 1763.

"A few copies of a third volume of the North Briton were printed at his own private press, but were never published."—KINGELL: Narrative of a Libel, Essay on Woman, 1763, 4to. See, also, Lou. Gent. Mag., 1763, 256.

8. An Essay on Woman, in Three Epistles, London: Printed for the Author, and sold by Mr. Grettton, in Bond Street, and Mr. Pottenger, in Paternoster Row, 1763, 8vo, pp. 40. Printed in red, with an obscene print on the title-page. Also with a French translation, 1763, 8vo, pp. 40. This infamous poem, a fitting production for the "Monks of Medmenhall Abbey," was printed at Wilkes's private press. It was, according to Horace Walpole, (see his Letter to Mann, Nov. 24, 1747,) the joint work of Wilkes and Thomas Potter: but see below. The Essay on Woman, a parody on Pope's Essay on Man, with Notes, (pretended to be written by Bishop Warburton,) is followed by a parody on Pope's Universal Prayer, and the Veni Creator. Almon (Life of Wilkes, i. 140) says that twelve copies were struck off; Horace Walpole (Letters to Lord Hertford) says fourteen; a friend of Mr. Martin (Martin's Bibl. Account of P. P. Books, ed. 1854, 565, see, also, 58) asserts that "there never was a perfect edition of the original work, or an edition at all. Only four sheets are said to have been printed;" and Wilkes himself tells us (Letter to the Electors of Aylesbury, in Gent. Mag., 1764, 583) that "Not quite a fourth part of the volume had been printed at my own private press. The work had been discontinued for several months before I had the least knowledge of the theft [of a copy for the Government prosecutor.] Of that fourth part, only twelve copies were worked off, and I never gave one of these copies to any friend."

It is the duty of a general bibliographer to notice—it may be neither his duty nor his pleasure to minutely describe—books of this class. We cannot even characterize the volume without danger of giving just offence. To the authorities already cited may be added Kidgell's Narrative of a Libel, Essay on Woman; Lou. Gent. Mag., 1763, 526; Walpole's Mem. of Geo. III., i. 309; Lord J. Russell's Corresp. of Fox, i. 14; Barbier's Dict. des Anonymes, No. 5613; Bohn's Lowndes, Part 10, (1864,) 2920; Edin. Rev., lxxx. 562. (by Lord Macaulay;) Brunet's Manuel, 5th ed., v. (1864) 1448.

"The author of this 'indecent patchwork,' as Walpole himself afterwards discovered, was not Wilkes, but Thomas Potter, son of the Archbishop of Canterbury. See Walpole's George III., vol. i. p. 310-312, and Churchill's Dedication of his Sermons to Warburton. See, also, Notes and Queries for July, 1857. For Potter, who died in 1759, see vol. ii. p. 99."—PETER CUNNINGHAM: Walpole's Letters, ed. 1861, iv. 126, n. (See Walpole to the Earl of Hertford, Nov. 17, 1763.)

"A copy is not now known to exist. . . . My friend Mr. Burt, of the Public Record Office, made a long but fruitless search among the papers of the Solicitor to the Treasury for a copy of this Essay."—CUNNINGHAM: Walpole's Letters, ut sup., iv. 135, n. 158, n. See, also, 132, 147, 158, 172, 198.

We give some more quotations from Walpole respecting (we can find very little respecting) Wilkes:

"Wilkes is here, and has been twice to see me in my illness. He was very civil, but I cannot say entertained me much. I saw no wit; his conversation shows how little he has lived in good company, and the chief turn of it is the grossest badinage."—To George Montagu, Paris, Oct. 16, 1765: Letters, ut sup., iv. 421.

"What instance is there of such a demagogic subsisting and maintaining a war against a king, minister, courts of law, a whole legislature, and all Scotland, for nine years together? Masaniello did not, I think, last five days. Wilkes, in prison, is chosen member of Parliament, and then Almon of London. His colleagues betray him, desert him, expose him, and he becomes Sheriff of London. I believe, if he were to be hanged, he would be made King of England.—I don't think King of Great Britain."—To Sir Horace Mann, July 6, 1771: Letters, ut sup., p. 313.

"London, Westminster, Middlesex, seem to have no monarch but Wilkes, who is at the same time pushing for the majority of London, with hitherto a majority on the poll. It is strange how this man, like a phoenix, always revives from his embers. . . . Wilkes is a more conspicuous personage in modern story than the Pontifex Maximus of Rome."—To Sir Horace Mann, Oct. 4, 1774: Letters, ut sup., iv. 128, 130.

Walpole declares (Letter to the Duke of Richmond, Oct. 27, 1775: Letters, ut sup., vi. 274) that the prosecution of Wilkes cost the government "above £100,000."

"September the 23d, [1762.] Colonel Wilkes, of the Buckinghamshire Militia, dined with us. . . I scarcely ever met with a better companion; he has inexhaustible spirits, infinite wit and humour, and a great deal of knowledge. He told us himself that in this time of public dissension, he was resolved to make his fortune."—EDMUND GIBSON: Memoirs, ed. 1837, 64.

Gibbon, on another occasion, thus characterizes him: "A thorough profligate in principle as in practice; his life stained with every vice, and his conversation full of blasphemy and indecency. These morals he glories in; for shame is a weakness he has long since surmounted."

"Mr. Wilkes was the pleasantest companion, the politest gentleman, and the best scholar I ever knew."—LORD MANSFIELD.

"Did we not hear so much said of Jack Wilkes, we should think more highly of his conversation. Jack has a great variety of talk, Jack is a scholar, and Jack has the manners of a gentleman. But, after hearing his name sounded from pole to pole as the phoenix of convivial felicity, we are disappointed in his company."—DR. JOHNSON, 1777: Croker's Boswell's Johnson, ch. ix.

"When we came to John Wilkes, whose ugly countenance in early youth was very striking, I asked earnestly who he was. . . I came to know Wilkes very well afterward, and found him to be a sprightly, entertaining fellow,—too much so for his years, as he was but eighteen; for even then he showed something of daring profligacy, for which he was afterward notorious."—REV. ALEXANDER CARLYLE: Autobio., 1860.

"Wilkes had, till very lately, been known chiefly as one of the most profane, licentious, and agreeable rakes about town. He was a man of taste, reading, and engaging manners. His sprightly conversation was the delight of green-rooms and taverns, and pleased even grave hearers when he was sufficiently under restraint to abstain from detailing the particulars of his amours and from breaking jests on the New Testament. His expensive delinquencies forced him to have recourse to the Jews. He was soon a ruined man, and determined to try his chance as a political adventurer. In Parliament he did not succeed. His speaking, though pert, was feeble, and by no means interested his hearers so much as to make them forget his face, which was so hideous that the caricaturists were forced, in their own despite, to flatter him. As a writer he made a better figure."—LORD MACAULAY: Essays: The Earl of Chatham, from Edin. Rev., lxxxv. 560.

"That worthless demagogue, Wilkes."—Ibid.: Essays: Lord Clive, from Edin. Rev., lxx. 339.

"About liberty, for which he cared little, and would have sacrificed less, he made a loud and blustering outcry, which was only his way of driving his trade; but to purity of private life, even to its decencies, he made no pretence; and, during the time of the mob's idolatry of his name, there never existed any belief in his good character as a man, however much his partisans might be deceived in their notion that he was unlikely to sell them."—LORD BROUGHAM: Contrab. to Edin. Rev., (from lxx. 102.) 1856, i. 232, and supra.

"Wilkes desired that his tomb should be inscribed, 'J. W., a friend to Liberty.' I am glad he was not ashamed to show a little gratitude to her in her old age; for she was a great friend to him."—JOHN HORNE TOOKE: Recollec. by Samuel Rogers, 1859, 143.

"The recollections of all my intercourse with Wilkie, and I knew him for about twenty years, are altogether delightful. I had no reason ever to alter the opinion I first formed of him, that he was a truly great artist and a truly good man. . . How admirably he performed every duty of a son, a brother, and a friend, is sufficiently shown in Allan Cunningham's memoirs of him."

Wilkie's works were popular from the first, because the public could understand his subjects, and his composition is always responded to. But the beauty of his composition, the truth of his effects, the taste of his execution, were no more felt by the multitude than such qualities are felt in any class of painting by any but those whose perceptions of art are cultivated."—C. Wilkie, William, D.D., known among his friends by the title of "The Scottish Homer," was b. at Eghlin, co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 1721; educated at the University of Edinburgh, and subsequently became a successful farmer; was ordained assistant and successor to Mr. Guthrie, minister of Ratho, 1753; Professor of Natural Philosophy in the University of St. Andrews, 1759; d. 1772. 1. The Epigoniad; a Poem, in Nine Books, Edin., 1757, 8vo; 2d ed., with a Dream, in the Manner of Spenser, Lon., 1759, 8vo. Of this poem, intended to be "in the manner of" Homer, the main incident is the sacking of Thebes by the Epigoni, or descendants of those who had been slain at the first siege of the city.

"I have done all in my power to forward it, particularly by writing a letter to the Critical Review. . . . If you want a little flattery to the author, (which I own is very refreshing to an author,) you may tell him that Lord Chesterfield said to me he was a great Poet."—David Hume to Dr. Robertson, 29th May, 1750: Stewart's Life of Robertson, Appendix. But see Burton's Life of Hume.

"A poem of great merit, not only as possessing much of the spirit and manner of Homer, but also a manly and vigorous style of poetry, rarely found in modern compositions of the kind."—HENRY MACKENZIE: Life of John Hume.

"This is the first volume of a book which is obviously destined to become, when finished, the most complete and important work upon the subject yet given to the world. Although it is true, as the editor well remarks, that the Concilia of Wilkins was a monument of gigantic labour and learning, and worthily claimed both to rival and to supplant the work, for the date equally wonderful, of Wilkins's own predecessor Spelman,—yet, looking to the new materials for such a collection which have been discovered of late years, and the sounder canons of present historical and philological knowledge, it must be admitted that the Concilia is not calculated to satisfy the requirements of modern scholarship."—Notes and Queries, Feb. 27, 1869, 207.

Wilkins, John, D.D., grandson of John Dod the Decalogist, brother-in-law of Oliver Cromwell, and step-father of the wife of Archbishop Tillotson, was b. at Fawsley, Northamptonshire, 1614, and admitted a student at New Inn Hall, Oxford, 1627, but soon removed to Magdalen Hall; at 21 took orders, and became successively chaplain to William Lord Say, George Lord Berkeley, and Charles Count Palatine of the Rhine; attended and zealously promoted the meetings of savans which resulted in 1663 in the formation of the Royal Society, (to which he left £400;) upon the breaking out of the Great Rebellion, took the Solemn Oath and Covenant, and on April 13, 1648, became Warden of Wadham College, in place of the ejected loyalist John Pitt; resigned his wardenship, 1659; appointed by Richard Cromwell Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, 1658-9, but ejected, 1660; Preb. of York, 1660; Rector of St. Lawrence Jewry, London, 1662; Preb. of London, Mar. 26, and of Exeter, July 1, 1667; Bishop of Chester, 1668; d. 1672.

1. Discovery of a New World; or, A Discourse tending to Prove that 'tis probable there may be another habitable World in the Moon; with a Discourse concerning the Possibility of a Passage thither, Lon., 1638, sm. 8vo; anon.; 3d ed., 1640, sm. 8vo; 4th ed., 1684, 8vo. See No. 5.

"We cannot but express our astonishment that, in this our day of speculation, no projector should have attempted to do that of which Bishop Wilkins has here, in some sort, shown the possibility."—Retrospec. Rev., viii. (1823) 336, (q. v.)

See No. 5. 5. Essay towards a Real Character and a Philosophical Language; with an Alphabetical Dictionary, (and an Index by Dr. William Lloyd,) 1668, fol. John Ray, the botanist, was persuaded by Wilkins to translate this into Latin. The MS., still unpublished, is in the Library of the Royal Society. Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, and an Abstract of No. 5, with a Life of the Author and an Account of his Works, were published together, under the title of Mathematical and Philosophical Works, in 1 vol. 8vo, 1798, and again in 2 vols. 8vo, some l. p., 1802. Respecting No. 5, which is still of some value, at least as a philosophical curiosity, see DALGARNO, GEORGE, (supra;) Phil. Trans., No. 35; *Encyc. "I discovered an alliance between Bishop Wilkins's art of flying, and his plan of universal language; the latter of which he no doubt calculated to prevent the want of an interpreter when he should arrive at the moon."—Horace Walpole to Hon. H. S. Conway, Oct. 15, 1784: Letters, ed. 1861, viii. 511.

We are now to consider the Bishop's theological works. 6. Ecclesiastes, or a Discourse concerning the Gift of Preaching as it falls under the Rules of Art, 8vo, 1646, '47, '51, '53, '56, '69, '75, '93, '1718, and, called the best ed., 1778. Commended by Bickersteth's C. Student, 4th ed., 379, 390, and Robinson's Notes to Claude's Essay. An abridgment will be found in Williams's C. Preacher. It was sometimes pub. in same vol. with No. 8, (q. v.) 7. Discourse concerning the Beauty of Providence, in all the Rugged Passages of it, 1649, 12mo; 5th ed., 1677, 8vo; 7th ed., 1704, 24mo. 8. Discourse concerning the Gift of Prayer, 1651, '53, 8vo; 7th ed., 1694, 8vo; 8th ed., (with No. 6,) 1704, 8vo; 1718, 8vo. In French, by Mr. Montague, 1665. He published a number of sermons. After his death, Archbishop Tillotson, his literary executor, published from his MSS. the two following, with prefaces: 9. Sermons [15] preached upon Several Occasions before the King at Whitehall, (with No. 7,) 1675, 8vo; 2d ed., 1680, 8vo; 1682, 8vo. 10. Of the Principles and Duties of Natural Religion, 8vo, 1675, '78, '83, '93, 1704, '15, '22, '34.

"The first twelve chapters [about half the volume] were written out for the press in his lifetime; the remainder hath been gathered and made up out of his papers."—Tillotson's Preface.

"How far natural religion will carry us is admirably explained by Dr. Wilkins."—Dr. WOTTON.

"Some good remarks on the several kinds of evidence."—Bickersteth's C. S., 4th ed., 382.

It is recommended by Bishops Cleaver and Watson. See, also, WARD, SETH, D.D., No. 5.

An eminent authority thus records his verdict on Bishop Wilkins's theological writings:

"His method is very exact, but too scholastic; his style almost as easy and pure as Tillotson's; many excellent thoughts are thrown together in a very intelligible manner. His Discourses on Natural Religion, the Beauty of Providence, Prayer, and Preaching, I think are almost all his Practical Works; and all deserve reading."—Dr. DODDRIDGE.

"This Dr. Wilkins was a person endowed with rare gifts: he was a noted theologian and preacher, a curious critic in several matters, an excellent mathematician and experimentalist, and one as well seen in mechanisms and new philosophy (of which he was a great promoter) as any of his time."—Woot: Athen. Ozon., Bliss's ed., iii. 968, (q. v.)

"He was a man of as great a mind, as true a judgment, as eminent virtues, and of as good a soul as any I ever knew."—BISHOP BURNET: Life of Sir Matthew Hale.

"He was naturally ambitious, but was the wisest clergyman I ever knew. He was a lover of mankind, and had a delight in doing good."—BISHOP BURNET: Hist. of my Own Times.

"Almost all that was preserved and kept up, of ingenuity and good learning, of good order and government, in the University of Oxford, was chiefly owing to his prudent conduct and encouragement."—ARCHBISHOP TILLOTSON: Pref. to Wilkins's Sermons.

Wilkins, Peter, (pseudonym.) A Letter to Isaac Tomkins, Lon., 1839. This was elicited by Thoughts upon the Aristocracy of England, by Isaac Tomkins, Gent., 1835, 8vo, of which the Edin. Rev., lxi. 64, remarked,

"This tract relates mainly to the privileges of the Aristocracy and their House of Parliament. It is very small, but very sharp,—indeed, bitter."

"Common report has ascribed to his Lordship's [Lord Brougham's] versatile pen the pages which his Lordship's agent, Mr. Hooper, has just published as the production of 'Isaac Tomkins, Gentleman.' We have, from internal evidence, no sort of doubt that public report is in this instance correct."—Lon. Quar. Rev., liii. 540.

Wilkinson, Sir John Gardner, Knt., D.C.L., one of the most eminent of modern travellers and archaeologists, who has given us the results of many years' observations (made during several visits) in Egypt in a series of very valuable works, is a son of the Rev. John Wilkinson by a daughter of the Rev. Richard Gardner; was b. 1798, and educated at Harrow School and Exeter College, Oxford; and knighted 1840. 1. Materia Hieroglyphica, containing the Egyptian Pantheon, and the Succession of the Pharaohs, from the Earliest Times to the Conquest by Alexander, and other Hieroglyphical Subjects, with Appendix, with plates, Malta, sm. 4to, Parts 1 and 2, 1828, £5 5s. Privately printed. See No. 2. 2. Extracts from several Hieroglyphical Subjects found at Thebes, with Remarks, Malta, 1830, sm. 4to, pp. 28, with 4 folding plates. This is a necessary supplement to No. 1, and is usually appended. 3. Topography of Thebes and General View of Egypt, being a Short Account of the Principal Objects worthy of notice in the Valley of the Nile, 1835, 8vo. 4. Manners and Customs of the Ancient Egyptians, &c., derived from a Comparison of the Paintings, Sculptures, and Monuments still Existing, with the Accounts of Ancient Authors; illustrated by Drawings of those Subjects, 1837, 3 vols. 8vo, £3 3s.; 2d ed., 1842, 3 vols. 8vo. Second Series, 1841, 3 vols. (1 vol. being plates) 8vo. Both series, 3d ed., 1847, 5 vols. 8vo, with 600 illustrations, £4 4s. See No. 9. See reviews and notices in Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxiii. 120; Lon. Gent. Mag., 1838, ii. 235; Lon. Mon. Rev., 1838, i. 313; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1838, 18, 38, and 1841, 241; Lon. Athen., 1838, 9, 32; 1841, 315; and 1860, i. 349, 411, 511, 547; Blackw. Mag., xlv. 110; N. Amer. Rev., July, 1861, 198, (by D. W. Cheever, M.D.); Horne's Bibl. Bib., 393; LANE, EDWARD WILLIAM; WATHEN, GEORGE H., No. 1.

"I need scarcely mention the admirable work of Sir Gardner Wilkinson, in which he has availed himself of the paintings, sculptures, and monuments of the ancient Egyptians to restore their manners and customs, and to place their public and private life before us as fully as if they still occupied the banks of the Nile. I shall frequently have occasion to refer to it in the course of this and the following chapters."—A. H. LAYARD, D.C.L.: Nineveh and its Remains, ed. 1849, ii. 154, n.

"Indefatigable in research, full of learning, accurate in facts, Sir Gardner Wilkinson has at the same time treated his subject with the enthusiasm of genius and the liveliness of poetry."—LORD RIPON: Address to the Roy. Soc. of Lit.

"Wilkinson . . . has contributed more than all others towards opening to us the interior of the social life of this interesting people."—PRESCOTT: Hist. of the Conquest of Mexico, 23d ed., 1865, i. 71, n. See, also, iii. 417, n.

"The work of Sir Gardner Wilkinson upon Ancient Egypt, which speaks to the eye, is far more instructive than the efforts to address the mind through the restored language of the Egyptians."—SIR GEORGE CORNEWALL LEWIS: Historical Survey of the Astronomy of the Ancients, 1862, 8vo.

5. Modern Egypt and Thebes, 1843, 2 vols. 8vo, £2 2s.; 2d ed., 1844, 2 vols. 8vo. New ed., Corrected and Condensed, entitled Hand-Book for Travellers in Egypt, (Murray), 1847, p. 8vo; 1857, p. 8vo. 6. Dalmatia and Montenegro; with a Journey to Mostar in Herzegovina, and Remarks on the Slavonic Nations; the History of Dalmatia and Ragusa, the Uscocs, &c., 1848, 2 vols. 8vo, £2 2s.

"Like all that Sir Gardner Wilkinson has produced, replete with sound knowledge well digested and skilfully arranged."—Lon. Athen., 1848, 1320.

"The use of it will enable a man to travel in Dalmatia as a rational creature should."—Blackw. Mag., lxx. 202, (q. v.)

"His volumes, on the whole, afford more materials for grand study and meditation than for the entertainment of the passing hour."—N. Amer. Rev., lxx. 391, (by Francis Bowen.)

7. The Architecture of Ancient Egypt, in which the Columns are arranged in Orders, and the Temples Classified; with Remarks on the Early Progress of Architecture, &c., 1850, 8vo, with 18 plates in a vol., fol., £2 2s. Commended by Lon. Gent. Mag., 1850, ii. 520. 8. The Fragments of the Hieratic Papyrus at Turin, containing the Names of Egyptian Kings, with the Hieratic Inscription at the Back, 1851, 8vo, with 11 fac-similes in a vol., fol. Privately printed. 9. A Popular Account of the Ancient Egyptians, Revised and Abridged from his larger Work, (No. 4.), with 500 wood-cuts, 1853, (some 1854,) 2 vols. p. 8vo, 12s.: N. York, 1854, 2 vols. 12mo. This contains additions founded on a later visit of the author to Egypt, &c., and brings the history of discovery to 1853. Noticed in N. Amer. Rev., lxxix. 527, (by A. P. Peabody, D.D.) Add to it—the results of a visit to Egypt in 1855-56—10. The Egyptians in the Time of the Pharaohs: being a Companion to the Crystal Palace Egyptian Collection; to which is added An Introduction to the Study of the Egyptian Hieroglyphics, by Samuel Birch, with wood-cuts, 1857, or. 8vo, pp. 296.

"Will be found extremely interesting by many who will hesitate to encounter the previous more bulky works."—Lon. Critic, April 1, 1857.

11. On Colour and on the Necessity for a General Diffusion of Taste among all Classes; with Remarks on Laying out Dressed or Geometrical Gardens: Examples of Good and Bad Taste illustrated by Wood-Cuts and Coloured Plates in Contrast, 1857, 8vo.

"This is a sound but not a brilliant book. . . . It is one of those useful stock-taking books which all sciences at certain stages of progress require."—Lon. Athen., 1857, ii. 653.

Also reviewed in Lon. Quar. Rev., April, 1859. See, also, RAWLINSON, GEORGE, No. 1; and letters from Sir J. G. Wilkinson and others in N. York Hist. Mag., 1860, 46, and Lon. Athen., 1862, ii. 629, 663, 807, and 1863, i. 19. We hope that Sir J. G. Wilkinson will before long give to the world his unpublished (1870) Plants of the Egyptian Desert, with nearly 100 illustrations coloured on the spot, and his large Map of Egypt comprising the valley of the Nile and the deserts east of the Red Sea and west of the oases. Within the last few years this eminent antiquary has presented his collection of Egyptian antiquities to the Harrow School Library,—thus revisiting his "Eton" to some purpose. See, also, Photog. The ex-Emperor also "admired" the Governor's daughter, the famous Miss Wilks, (afterwards Lady Buchan,) whom the authoress of these Reminiscences declares to be "The most charming and admirable young person I ever before or have since met with in all my peregrinations in Europe, Asia, and Africa, for the space of thirty years. . . Governor Wilks having introduced his charming daughter to Bonaparte, the ex-Emperor, looking at her with a pleasing smile, addressed her in these words: 'I have long heard from various quarters of the superior elegance and beauty of Miss Wilks; but now I am convinced from my own eyes that report has scarcely done her sufficient justice.' Willard, Samuel, b. at Concord, Mass., Jan. 31, 1639–40; graduated at Harvard College, 1659; was installed as colleague pastor (with T. Thacher) of the Old South Church, Boston, 1678, and elected Vice-President (really President) of Harvard College, 1701, and retained his connection with both church and college until his death, Sept. 12, 1607. During the prevalence of what is generally styled "the witchcraft delusion" he displayed great boldness in stemming the tide of persecution. Among his publications are: 1. Sermon occasioned by the Death of John Leverett, Esq., Governor, &c., Bost., 1673, 4to. Puttick's, Mar. 1861, £2 15s. 2. The Duty of a People that have Renewed their Covenant with God; a Sermon, 1680, 4to. Puttick's, Mar. 1861, £2 5s. 3. He published many other sermons and treatises, (q. v. in Sprague's Annals, i., Trin. Congreg., 167, and Cat. of Lit. Mass. Hist. Soc., ii. 610), and left Expositions upon Psalms, Romans, Corinthians, and Galatians, and other compositions, in MS. From these was published by subscription, (nearly 500 names are in the list,) edited by Joseph Sewall and Thomas Prince, colleague pastors of the Old South Church, Boston—9. A Compleat Body of Divinity, in Two Hundred and Fifty Lectures on the Assembly's Shorter Catechism, &c., 1726, fol., pp. 914, double columns. Priced in T. Jepp's Clerical Circular, No. 4, 1854, £4 14s. 6d.; in W. Gowan's Cat., No. 15, (1862,) $25; sold at Puttick's sale, Mar. 1861, £1 16s.

"This is, without doubt, the first miscellaneous folio volume published in North America, and consequently a great curiosity. Any one making up collections of early American publications, this is an opportunity for adding a rarity."—Gowan's Cat., ut supra.

"The publication and printing of this work was the greatest undertaking that had been attempted in this country."

"One calls him an elegant, learned, and faithful historian, [J. Leland, Assert. Arth. fol. 4, b, & fol. 8, a.] Another says he is the only man of his time that has honestly discharged the trust of such a writer, [D. Hen. Savil., in Epist. Ded. and 5 Script.] And the third calls him the chief of all our historians, [Usher, in Ep. Ded. and Eccles. Hist.]—BRADSHAW, NICHOLSON: Eng. Hist. Lib., ed. 1776, 47. See, also, 40, 85, 88, 156.

"William of Malmesbury was the first English writer after the time of Bede who attempted successfully to raise history above the dry and undigested details of a chronicle. . . . Next to the Saxon Chronicle he is the most valuable authority for Anglo-Saxon history. In his annals of the Norman period, and of his own time, he is judicious, and, as far as could be expected, unprejudiced."—WRIGHT: Biog. Brit. Lit., A.-N. P., 137, 138.

Leland, also, in his De Scriptorib. Brit., i. 195, Lord Lyttelton in his Hist. of Henry II., Dr. Henry in his Hist. of G. Britain, vi. 136, Fuller in his Worthies, ed. 1840, iii. 332, and other authorities, concur in commending William as an historian. A recent critic, however, thus refers to him:

Williams, D. E. See LAWRENCE, SIR THOMAS.

Williams, Daniel, D.D., founder of the Red Cross Street Library, an eminent Presbyterian, b. at Wrexham, North Wales, 1644, was admitted as a preacher in 1663, and about 1668 became pastor of a congregation in Wood Street, Dublin, where he remained until 1687, when he returned to England: pastor of a church in Hand Alley, Bishopsgate Street, London, from 1688 until his death, Jan. 26, 1715-16. In 1691 he succeeded Richard Baxter at the Merchants' Lecture at Pinners' Hall, and subsequently became Preacher at Salters' Hall. He bequeathed the bulk of his large estate to benevolent objects. 1. The Vanity of Childhood and Youth: in Several Sermons, Lon., 1691, 8vo. He directed that this book should be translated into Welsh for schools, and often reprinted for the poor. 2. Gospel Truth Stated and Vindicated, wherein some of Dr. Crisp's Opinions are Considered, Lon., 1692, 12mo; new ed., 12mo. 3. A Defence of Gospel Truth; being a Reply to Mr. Chauncy's First Part, 1693, 4to.

"Dr. Crisp's sermons led to Daniel Williams's Gospel Truth: if you read that, read also [Isaac] Chauncy's Nominalism Unmasked, [1692, 8vo.]. . . He [Dr. Williams] took nearly the same stand as Baxter."—Zickerstett's C. S., 4th ed., 139, 293.

See, also, CRISP, SAMUEL; CRISP, TOBIAS. 4. Man made Righteous by Christ's Obedience: Sermons, 1694, 12mo. He also published some single sermons. After his death, appeared: 5. Discourses on Several Important Subjects, 5 vols. 8vo; i., with some Account of his Life, by W. Harris, and ii., 1733; iii., iv., v., 1750.

"Dr. Williams possessed a penetrating judgment, a copious invention, a faithful memory, and vigorous affections; his pulpit discourses were admirably adapted to answer the great end of preaching,—usefulness to the souls of men."—Wilson's Dissenters.

6. Tractatus Selecti, ex Anglicis Latine versi, et Testamenti sui jussu editi, 1760, 8vo. Contents: I. De Vita Auctoris; II. Veritas Evangelica; III. Homo Justificatus; IV. Responsio ad Relationem; V. Discordiarum Finis; VI. Officium Ministeriale.

Let us dwell for a moment on The Red Cross Street Library. His own collection and that of Dr. William Bates (purchased by him for between £500 and £600) was the foundation. In accordance with his will, his trustees purchased, in 1727, a site for a building, and in 1729 the library was opened to the public. The following catalogues of the Library should all be on the shelves of the bibliographer. I. Bibliothecæ quam Vir doctus et admodum Reverendus Daniel Williams, S. T. P., Bono Publico legavit, Catalogus, Lon., 1727, 8vo. II. 1801, 8vo. III. 1808, 8vo. IV. Appendix ad Catalogum Bibliothecæ D. Williams, 1814, 8vo. V. Catalogue of the Library in Red Cross Street, Cripplegate, &c., 1841, 2 vols. 8vo: i. Books; ii. Tracts and Pamphlets. Compiled by Mr. Richard Cogan, the Librarian. The Library now (July, 1870) contains about 20,000 volumes.

Robertson,) and Sept. 1868, (Louis XVII. and Eleazar Williams—Were they Really the Same Person? by Rev. Francis Vinton, S.T.D.) Dr. Vinton's conclusions "strongly lean toward the belief that Eleazar Williams was really Louis XVII. of France." (Ed. Putnam's Mag., Sept. 1868, 331, n.) It is said that "John Williams, son of Rev. Eleazar Williams, (the Dauphin, or Lost Prince,) is captain of a steamboat on Lake Winnebago." (1867.) This may do for an interregnum, but how will he justify the laches to his descendants?

Williams, John, alias Anthony Pasquin, rena-dered memorable by William Gifford and Lord Erskine; adjudged by Lord Kenyon in 1797 "a common libeller;" stigmatized by Dr. Watt (Bibl. Brit.) as "a literary character of the lowest description;" and more tersely than politely characterized by Lord Macaulay as "a malignant and filthy baboon," (Edin. Rev., lxxiv. 250,) and a "polecat," (ibid., lxxvi. 537;) emigrated to the United States, ("Alas! my country!") where he became editor of a Democratic newspaper, and where, having long survived his literary progeny, he died.

Among his publications (most of his works appeared under the name of Anthony Pasquin) are: 1. The Royal Academicians; a Farce, 1786, 8vo. 2. The Children of Thespis; a Poem, 4to: Part 1, 1786; Parts 2, 3, 1788. Williams, John, D.D. Sermon, Matt. ix. 36, Lon., 1821, 8vo.

Williams, Sir John, b. at Bunbury, Cheshire, 1777, and educated at, and Fellow of, Trinity College, Cambridge, was called to the Bar, 1804; elected M.P. for Lincoln, 1823; Queen's Attorney-General, 1830 to 1832; a Baron of the Exchequer, 1834: and a Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench from 1834 until his death, Sept. 15, 1846. He was the author of articles in Edin. Rev., (see especially The Greek Orators in No. for Oct. 1821, 82-110,) and of Memoirs of Sir J. Bayley and Mr. Commissioner Boteler in Law Rev., i. 405, and iii. 327, and of a paper on Capital Punishment in Law Rev., iii. 110. Notices of Mr. Justice Williams will be found in Lon. Gent. Mag., 1846, ii. 537, (Obituary,) and, by Lord Brougham, in Law Rev., Nov. 1846, 183: repub. in his Statesmen of the Time of Geo. III., ii. 312.

Williams, John, a Baptist divine, b. in Caernarvonshire, Wales, 1767; emigrated to the city of New York, 1795; became pastor of the Oliver (then Fayette) Street Church, N. York, 1798, and retained this connection until his death, May 25, 1825. He published Sermons and several Association Letters. See Amer. Baptist Mag., vol. v., (by his son, William Williams, D.D., infra;) Fowler's Amer. Pulpit, 213, 245; Sprague's Annals, vi., Baptist, 358.

Williams, John, b. at Ystradmeirig, Cardiganshire, South Wales, 1792, and educated at Balliol College, Oxford, taught at Winchester College for two years, and at Hyde Abbey School for four years; presented to the living of Lampeter, Wales, where he remained until 1824, when, by the influence of Sir Walter Scott, he became Rector of the New Edinburgh Academy; Archdeacon of Cardigan, 1833; d. at Bushey-heath, Herts, Dec. 27, 1858. 1. Life and Actions of Alexander the Great, Lon., (Murray's Fam. See Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1854, 269, 750, and 1855, 533.

"In 'Gomer,' a dissertation on the early forms and history of the language, he expressed himself with such positiveness on doubtful subjects, and such vehemence on unimportant ones, as to weaken his authority. He had announced a translation of the poems of ANEIRIN. [see WILLIAMS, JOHN, AB ITHEL, No. 3.] Taliesin, and the other primitive bards, with a critical revision and re-establishment of the text, which was looked for with much interest; but, though the announcement was made in 1841, nothing had been done towards carrying it out at his death in 1858."—THOMAS WATTS: art. on Welsh Lang. and Lit., in *Knight's Eng. "The only literary Welshman of great abilities and erudition I know, has been too busily occupied with the important functions of his own useful and honourable profession to become a contributor to Maga."—NORTH: Notes Ambros.: Blackw. Mag., xxiv. (Oct. 1828) 528.

With Wilson, Lockhart, Lord Jeffrey, Lord Cockburn, Sir Thomas Dick Lauder, Colonel Mure, and Sir Walter Scott, Williams had long been on terms of literary companionship; and over the remains of the last and greatest of these we have seen him (SCOTT, SIR WALTER, p. 1971) reading the solemn services of the Church when all that was mortal of the Great Magician was deposited in the sepulchre of his ancestors in Dryburgh Abbey.

He lived for some time in the family of Dr. Franklin, at Paris, and aided the philosopher in the adjustment of his accounts, which service the doctor was disposed to compensate by the present of a new watch procured for the purpose. Mr. Williams, with great presence of mind, instead of taking the watch from the doctor's hand, remarked, "I would much prefer, sir, to have your old one." He was gratified; and this valuable keepsake is now (1870) in the possession of his son, Henry J. Williams, Esq., of Philadelphia, from whose lips I heard this anecdote.

"The author being unlearned, and only tutored by experience, hath penned the said history with very exquisite judgment, he being an actor in the said actions or wars."—WOOD: ubi supra, q. v. for notices of some minor pieces and letters of Sir Roger.

Williams, Roger, b. in Wales, according to the Oxford University entry, in 1606, according to Arnold and most biographers, in 1599; placed in Sutton's Hospital (now the Charter-House) by Sir Edward Coke, June 25, 1621; obtained an exhibition, July 29, 1624; according to Elton, (1852), matriculated at Jesus College, April 30, 1624; according to Arnold, the latest authority, (1860), matriculated at Pembroke College, Cambridge, 1625, and graduated B.A. there, Jan. 1626-7; studied law with Sir Edward Coke, to whom, when a youth, he had recommended himself by his expertness in taking "in short-hand sermons and speeches in the Star Chamber;" after taking orders in the Church of England, was induced by his partiality to Puritan principles to emigrate to Boston, where he arrived Feb. 5, 1631, and was settled as co-pastor, with the Rev. Samuel Skelton, of the church in Salem, April 12 ensuing; rendered uncomfortable by disputes with the magistrates, who disapproved of his liberal views of religious toleration, in a few months (about August, 1631) he removed to Plymouth, and became assistant to Ralph Smith, pastor of the church in that place, and retained this connection for about two years; returned to the church at Salem in the summer of 1633, officiated ministerially for a year, and in the summer of 1634, after the death of Mr. Skelton, was settled as pastor, notwithstanding the protest of the General Court. In April, 1635, the Governors and Assistants summoned him to appear at Boston, to answer to the charge of having "taught publicly that a magistrate ought not to tender an oath to an unregenerate man, for that we thereby have communion with a wicked man in the worship of God, and cause him to take the name of God in vain."—(Winthrop's Journal.)

Again: he denounced the law requiring every man to attend public worship and to contribute to its support. The civil power, he affirmed, "extends only to the bodies, and goods, and outward estates of men;" with conscience and with religious opinions "the civil magistrate may not intermeddle, even to stop a church from apostasy and heresy." In July, 1635, he was solemnly arraigned before the General Court to answer the following indictments:

"First, That the magistrate ought not to punish the breach of the first table, otherwise than in such cases as did disturb the civil peace.

"Secondly, That he ought not to tender an oath to an unregenerate man.

"Thirdly, That he ought not to pray with such, though wife, child, &c.

"Fourthly, That a man ought not to give thanks, nor after meat."

The debates terminated in a resolution to accord to him and the church in Salem "time to consider these things till the next General Court, and then either to give satisfaction or to expect the sentence." The next General Court convened in October, 1635, and on the 3d of the next month passed an act (approved by all of the ministers save one) banishing the stout contestant from the colony; but, hearing that he still proclaimed his obnoxious opinions and contemplated the establishment of a colony upon Narragansett Bay, the Court determined to send him to England by a ship lying in the harbour, then ready for sea. Williams, however, escaped: founded (probably about the 29th of May) in 1636 the settlement of Providence, Rhode Island; lived to preserve his old adversaries from the wrath of the Indians and to render many services to his fellow-colonists and their descendants, and to preach the gospel of Christ not only to his own people but to the Children of the Forest, who revered the missionary and loved the man; closed his earthly career at a good old age, in 1683. In March, 1639, he founded the first Baptist church in the United States; but a few months after its organization he withdrew from it and became a Seeker, (one dissatisfied with existing sects,) and never afterwards united himself to any religious body, though retaining his zeal and activity for the spiritual good of others. He was buried at Providence, on the spot which he had selected as the last resting-place of his family, with "all the solemnity the colony was able to show."

All that could be found of his remains was recently (May 22, 1860) exhumed by the pious care of a descendant, Mr. Randall, of North Providence, (see Hist. Mag., 1860, 777, and Proceed. Mass. Hist. Soc., 1860-62, 46;) and a "Roger Williams Monument Association" promises to spare our children the burden of a reproach which "we and our fathers"—not much to our credit—have been found "able to bear." In 1771 the town of Providence voted a monument to Roger Williams: let us hope that by 1871, at farthest,—one hundred years should suffice for such a purpose,—the monument will be visible.

"We spoke of our mutual friend, Mr. Roger Williams, of Rhode Island, . . . that noble confessor of religious liberty. . . . We rejoiced in the zeal of that extraordinary man and most enlightened legislator, who, after suffering persecution from his brethren, persevered, amidst incredible hardships and difficulties, in seeking a place of refuge for the sacred ark of conscience."—JOHN MILTON: Letter to the Count Palavicini de Saluces, the Genoese Envoy into England. Quoted in the Piedmontese Envoy, 292-294, and in Rev. Dr. Francis Winton's Oration on the Annals of Rhode Island, &c., N. York, 1863, 8vo, 53, note i.

"Roger Williams asserted the great doctrine of intellectual liberty. It became his glory to found a State upon that principle, and to stamp himself upon its rising institutions in characters so deep that the impress has remained to the present day, and can never be erased without the total destruction of the work. . . . He was the first person in modern Christendom to assert, in its plenitude, the doctrine of the liberty of conscience, the equality of opinions before the law; and in its defence he was the harbinger of Milton, the precursor and superior of Jeremy Taylor."—GEORGE BANCROFT: Hist. of the United States, vol. i.

"If ever a Welsh Fuller should write the Worthies of Wales, Roger Williams will deserve, if not the first place, a place among the first; for he began the first civil government upon earth that gave equal liberty of conscience. . . . His history belongs to America rather than England; but we must not even thus casually mention his name without an expression of respect and reverence, for he was one of the best men who ever set foot upon the new world,—a man of genius and of virtue, in whom enthusiasm took the happiest direction and produced the best fruits."—ROBERT SOUTHET: Lon. Quar. Rev., x. (Oct. 1813) 107, 113.

"I hold his memory in veneration."—Ibid.: Letter to Bernard Barton, Dec. 19, 1814: Life and Correspondence, ch. xix.

"The celebrated 'Pilgrim Fathers' . . . compelled the ever-venerated Roger Williams, the great champion of toleration, to fly from them to Rhode Island, where he founded a colony on his own truly Christian system."—ARCHBISHOP WATTELET: Annals on Bacon's Essays, Essay V.: Of Adversity.

"His industry in every enterprise which he undertook was indefatigable. . . . He placed the highest estimate upon the value of time. 'One grain of its inestimable sand,' says he, 'is worth a golden mountain.' . . . His knowledge, especially in history and theology, appears to have been extensive, and his scholarship in the classic languages unusually varied and exact. As a writer, he had little time, and it may be, little taste, for the elegances of language."—WILLIAM GAMMELL: Life of Roger Williams, ch. xv.

He was the author of the following works: 1. A Key into the Language of America, or an Help to the Language of the Natives in that Part of America called New England; together with Briefe Observations of the Customs, Manners, and Worships, &c. of the aforesaid Natives in Peace and Warre, in Life and Death, &c., Lon., Gregory Dexter, 1643, sm. 12mo. pp. 216. New ed., Providence, 1827, 8vo, (Rhode Island Hist. Soc. Coll., vol. i. pp. 17-163.) Edited by John Pickering, LL.D. The greater part of it was repub. in Collee. Mass. Hist. Soc., 1st Ser., vols. iii., v.

"The 'Key' is by far the best-known of Mr. Williams's works, and is still [1844] of the highest authority respecting the subject of which it treats."—GAMMELL: Life of R. Williams, Appendix, No. 2.

2. Mr. Cotton's Letter, lately printed, Examined and Answered, Lon., Imprinted in the Yeere 1644, sm. 4to, pp. 47, preceded by an address of two pages To the Impartial Reader. There are at least five copies in America and England. See No. 3.

3. The Bloody Tenent of Persecution for Cause of Conscience, discussed, in a Conference betweene Truth and Peace, who, in all tender Affection, present to the High Court of Parliament (as the Result of their Discourse) these (amongst other) Passages of the highest Consideration, Lon., vine author or publisher, 1644, sm. 4to, pp. 24, 247. Two editions in 1644. There are at least eight copies in America and England. A copy was sold at Sotheby's, May, 1860, for £9. This and No. 2, and Cotton's Letter, (original, 1643, sm. 4to, pp. 13,) were repub., with an Introduction of 46 pp. by Edward Bean Underhill, in 1 vol. 8vo, pp. 485, Lon., 1848, by the Hanserd Knollys Society. This volume is now very rare. Cotton responded to No. 3 in The Bloody Tenent, washed and made white in the Blood of the Lambe; being discussed and discharged of Bloud Guiltinesse by Just Defence, &c. Whereunto is added a Reply to Mr. Williams's Answer to Mr. Cotton's Letter, Lon., Printed by Mathew Symmons, &c., 1647, sm. 4to, pp. 195, 144. Sotheby, 1856, £2 13s. Compare with these books, Wholesome Severity Reconciled with Christian Liberty, &c., Lon., C. Meredith, 1645, 4to, pp. 40. Author unknown. Puttick's, Mar. 1861, £1. Williams answered Cotton in—

4. The Bloody Tenent yet more Bloody, by Cotton's Endeavour to wash it white in the Blood of the Lambe, &c., Lon., Printed by Giles Calvert, &c., 1652, sm. 4to, pp. 18, 7, 12, 16, 320. There are two copies in the Library of Brown University, one copy in the library of John Carter Brown, and a copy of the Preface and Dedicatory Epistles in the Library of Harvard University.

5. The Hirling Ministry None of Christ's, or a Discourse touching the Propagating the Gospel of Jesus Christ, &c., Lon., Printed in the Second Moneth, 1652, sm. 4to, pp. viii., 36. There are at least four copies in America, and there is a copy in The Red Cross Street Library, London.

6. Experiments of Spiritual Life and Health and their Preservatives, &c., Lon. Printed in the Second Month, 1652. sm. 4to, pp. 4, 450. Very rare. A copy was sold in 1863 for $100, and from this a reprint, with an Introduction by Rev. Francis Wayland, D.D., was made at the expense of S. Randall, Esq., Providence, Sidney S. Rider, 1863, cap 4to, 200 copies. It is in the form of a letter to his wife, Mary, on her recovery from illness, commencing with, "My dearest love and companion in this vale of tears."

7. George Fox digg'd out of his Burrowes, or an Offer of Disputation on fourteen Proposals, made this Last Summer, 1672, (so call'd,) unto G. Fox, then present on Rode Island, in New England, by R. W., &c., Bost., Printed by John Foster, 1676. sm. 4to, pp. 327. There is a copy in the Library of Harvard University; and a copy lacking 55 pages, (which have been supplied by a reprint from the former,) with MS. corrections, alterations, and additions by the author, was presented to the Library of Brown University, in 1863, by Mr. John Daggett, of Attleborough, Mass. Williams's attack elicited, A New England Fire-Brand Quenched: being an Answer unto a Slanderous Book, entitled George Fox digg'd out of his Burrowes, &c.; by George Fox and John Burnyeat, (Lon.) Printed in the Year MDCLXXIX., 4to. See, also, Fox's Something in Answer to a Letter, &c., Lon., 1677, 4to, pp. 11. The style of all three is sufficiently vigorous; and to assert that either Williams or his opponents wasted many words in idle compliments would be hardly correct.

8. Letters from Roger Williams to John Winthrop and John Winthrop, Jr., Governor of Connecticut, Bost., 1863, 8vo, pp. 127. (Mass. Hist. Coll., 4th Ser., vol. vi.) These letters, 65 in number, extend from 1636 to 1675. For other Letters and papers of Williams, see Mass. Hist. Coll., 1st Ser., vols. i., ix., 2d Ser., vols. vii., viii., 3d Ser., vols. i., ix., x. Exam., xvi. 72, (by F. Parkman) and Mar. 1859; Meth. Quar. Rev., xii. 199, (by R. W. Allen); Hist. Mag., 1857-61, Indexes; Bibliography of Rhode Island, by J. R. Bartlett, ("a workman that needeth not to be ashamed,") 1864, 275-281. For all these memorials of this great and good man we are duly thankful; but we would that Rhode Island should honour herself and her founder by the erection of a monument (more enduring than brass or marble) having this superscription: The Works and Correspondence of Roger Williams, the Great Champion of Civil and Religious Liberty; republished from the Originals; preceded by a Life of the Author and a History of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, 1636 to 1836, and accompanied by a copious Analytical Index.

"The Newport Historical Society have found a treasure in the bottom of an old chest. It is an autograph volume written by Obadiah Holmes in 1675. Mr. Holmes was minister of the First Baptist Church, but he went to Massachusetts to preach, and, having no license, was arrested by the Puritan magistrate, confined in jail, and finally sentenced to be publicly whipped at the tail of a cart. He gives the history of the Rhode Island colony that he founded with the charter that he obtained from Charles II.; the incidents of his life; his faith in Christ; with a letter to his family, his church, and the world. Mr. Holmes also gives an account of his public whipping in Boston, and attests, 'I did there shed my blood.'"—April, 1868.

We are now (1870) enabled to state that the first stones of the monument we suggested have been laid, viz.: Publications of the Narragansett Club, First Series, vol. i., Providence, R.I., 1866, 4to, pp. 8, 396. Contents: I. Biographical Introduction to the Writings of Roger Williams, by Reuben Aldridge Guild, A.M. II. A Key into the Language of America, by Roger Williams; Edited by J. Hammond Trumbull. III. Letter of John Cotton, and Roger Williams's Reply; Edited by Reuben Aldridge Guild, A.M. Nor is this all: Rhode Island has contracted for statues of Roger Williams (by Simons) and General Nathaniel Greene for the National Gallery of Statuary at Washington; which—if they can forbear speech-making long enough to pay it a visit—ought to be a profitable school of examples for American legislators.

Williams, Rowland, D.D., b. in Flintshire, Wales, 1817; was educated as King's Scholar at Eton, where he was Newcastle Medallist; proceeded thence to King's College, Cambridge, and obtained in his first year Battie's University Scholarship; as a Fellow of King's, graduated B.A. in 1841; was for eight years tutor of his College; became Vice-Principal and Professor of Hebrew of St. David's College, Lampeter, and Chaplain to the Bishop of Llandaff in 1850; Select Proacher to the University of Cambridge, 1855; Vicar of Broadehalke, Wilts, 1859; resigned his place in David's College, Aug. 1862; defended himself before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council against a charge of heresy, founded upon his contribution to Essays and Reviews, (infra), 1863, and obtained in Feb. 1864 a reversal of such parts of the judgment of the Court of Arches as had been unfavourable to him: d. "In fact, so much was the pencil in requisition, that my father had not time to accomplish—what were his ardent aspirations—more than a few paintings in oil-colours. Had he been able to do more, his name would have ranked high as a painter."—JOSEPH LIONEL WILLIAMS: Lon. Athen., 1853, 1262.

Williams, Samuel Porter, b. at Wethersfield, Conn., 1779; graduated at Yale College, 1796; minister at Mansfield, Conn., 1807-17, and at Newburyport, Mass., 1821, until his death, Dec. 23, 1826. He published a number of sermons, addresses, &c., 1813-26; and 20 of his sermons, with a memoir, were published, in one vol. 8vo, in 1827: reviewed in Chris. Mon. Spec., x. 98, (by Leonard Withington.) See Sprague's Annals, iv., Presbyterian, 370.

Williams, Samuel Wells, LL.D., b. at Utica, N. York, 1812, a resident of China since about 1835, formerly as a missionary, (A. B. C. F. M.), and subsequently as Secretary and Interpreter, American Legation, Peking, is the author of the following valuable works:

1. Easy Lessons in Chinese; or, Progressive Exercises to facilitate the Study of the Language, especially adapted to the Canton Dialect, Macao, 1842, 8vo, pp. 298. 2. A Chinese Commercial Guide, containing Tariffs, Tables, &c.; with Appendix of Sailing Directions, 2d ed., Macao, 1844, 8vo; 3d ed., Canton, 1848, 8vo; 4th ed., 1856, 8vo; Shanghai, 1859, 8vo; 5th ed., Hong-Kong, 1863, 8vo. 3. An English-and-Chinese Vocabulary in the Court Dialect, Macao, 1844, 8vo, pp. 536. "Admirable."—Trübner's Bibl. Guide to Amer. Lit., ed. 1869, lxiv.

The Middle Kingdom: a Survey of the Geography, Government, Education, Social Life, Arts, Religion, &c. of the Chinese Empire and its Inhabitants; with a New Map of the Empire, and numerous Illustrations, N. York, 1848, 2 vols. p. 8vo; 1853, 2 vols. p. 8vo; 3d ed., 1857, 2 vols. p. 8vo, pp. xviii., 590, viii., 614. See Appleton's Amer. Cyc., xvi. 448.

"This is a promising title; but we are compelled to say, after a diligent examination of the contents of the volumes, that they have little of novelty."—Lon. Athen., 1848, 503.

"The work now before us is second to none in thoroughness, comprehensiveness, and all the tokens of accuracy of which an 'outside barbarian' can take cognizance."—A. P. PRABODY, D.D.: N. Amer. Rev., Oct. 1848, 269.

"Williams's 'Middle Kingdom' remains unrivalled as the most full and accurate account of China—its inhabitants, its art, its science, its religion, its philosophy—that has ever been given to the public. Its minuteness and thoroughness are beyond all praise."—Ibid.: N. Amer. Rev., April, 1862, 480. See, also, MILNE, REV. WILLIAM C.

"Probably the best account ever published of the Chinese Empire as it had been and was in 1848."—RUFUS ANDERSON, D.D.: Memorial Volume A. B. C. F. M., 1862, 380.

Next to Williams's volumes should stand the following later works upon the same subject: I. Social Life of the Chinese; with Some Account of their Religious, Governmental, Educational, and Business Customs and Opinions, with Special, but not Exclusive, Reference to Fuchau; by Rev. Justus Doolittle, Fourteen Years Member of the Fuchau Mission of the American Board, with over 150 Illustrations, N. York, 1865, 2 vols. 12mo. II. China and the Chinese: a General Description of the Country and its Inhabitants; its Civilization and Forms of Government; its Religious and Social Institutions; its Intercourse with other Nations; and its Present Condition and Prospects; by the Rev. John L. Nevius, Ten Years a Missionary in China; with a Map and Illustrations, 1869, 12mo. III. The Oldest and the Newest Empire: China and the United States; by William Speer, D.D., Hartford, 1870, 8vo. The author, a Philadelphian, formerly Missionary in China, and to the Chinese in California, is now Corresponding Secretary to the Presbyterian Board of Education.

"In the years 1840 to '42 the Opium War strongly drew Mr. Speer's attention toward China, where was presented the strange spectacle of a heathen, but civilized, nation suffering the bombardment and destruction of numerous cities, and the slaughter of thousands of its people, in its natural and righteous, but vain, resistance to the fraudulent introduction among them of what is justly styled 'a flood of poison, the track of which in society was black and desolate as that of a stream of lava down a mountain's side.' In 1846 he was sent by the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions to the province of Canton, and in 1852 to California, where he was the first to preach the gospel in their own language to the Chinese coming there."

The conduct of the Government of Great Britain in forcing opium upon the Chinese, and the murder and robbery connected with this disgraceful business, are not calculated to very warmly recommend Christianity to the Chinese; and now, (1870,) when reflection and shame should have done their work, we find members of the British House of Commons, instead of "repenting in sackcloth and ashes" over the national disgrace, apologizing for this abominable traffic,—abhorred of God and all good men. See Jour. of Amer. Orient. Soc., 1860, for a paper entitled On Dr. Samuel Wells Williams's Tonic Dictionary of the Chinese Language in the Canton Dialect, by Rev. William H. Macy. The following work is of great importance: English- and -Chinese Dictionary, with the Puntí and Mandarin Pronunciation, by the Rev. W. Lobscheid, Hong-Kong.

"For scope and practical service this work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive character. . . . The work was commenced in 1864, and has actively occupied a large staff ever since. It will comprise between two and three thousand large quarto pages, and is being published in four parts. Parts 1 and 2 are already issued; Part 3 will be ready next month, (April, 1868), and the last Part before the end of the year."—Tümler's Amer. and Orient. Record, April 30, 1868.

Williams, Taliesin, ab Iolo, a poet of Merthyr-Tydvil, Wales, son of Edward Williams, Iolo Morganwg, (supra), d. 1847. 1. Prize Essay on the Bardic Alphabet, in Welsh, 1840, 8vo. Much doubt having been thrown on the discovery of the "Coelbren y Beirdd," or Alphabet of the Bards, announced by Iolo Morganwg, an essay on its genuineness was proposed as the subject of a prize at an Eisteddod in 1840.

"The dissertation is pronounced by impartial critics, Dr. Williams of Llangadwaladr, and Dr. Tregelles, to be a masterpiece, and the author is said to have shown satisfactorily that there were traces of the alphabet in Welsh literature long before his father's time."—THOMAS WATTS: Welsh Language and Literature, in Knights' Eng. Cyc., (q. v.)

2. Iolo Manuscripts: a Selection of Ancient Welsh MSS. in Prose and Verse; From the Collections made by the Late Edward Williams; Edited, with Translations and Notes, by his Son, Taliesin Williams, [ab Iolo,] Llan-dover, 1848, r. 8vo, (Welsh MS. Soc., ii.) See, also, WILLIAMS, EDWARD, IOLO MORGANWG, No. 3. For twenty years Taliesin Williams was under a druidical training with his father, (Cambrian Jour., 1857, 224); but the son also "died and made no sign;" and the "Secret of the Bards" still remains as impenetrable as—to say the least—any mystery which the Masonic order can boast of. When shall we have the Bardic Triads?

"Much of the real Cyvrinach alluded to is still extant, as we ourselves can testify, and we sincerely trust that measures will be adopted by the Welsh Manuscript Society for the speedy publication of the whole. Until this is done, the early literature and history of our country can never be properly understood."—REV. JOHN WILLIAMS AB ITHEL: Cambrian Jour., 1857, 57.

Lord Kenyon (1 Townsend's Twelve Judges, 122) and Mr. Dunning (3 Law and Magis. Mag., 175, 177) recommend Cox's Peere Williams as part of a course of professional reading for young men. We venture to add—with an apology for offering the opinion of a laic in such juxtaposition—that intelligent "young men" of all classes can seldom find more instructive and entertaining reading than is contained between the covers of the standard English and American Reports.

Williams, William R., D.D., son of the Rev. John Williams, late pastor of the Oliver Street (New York) Baptist Church, (supra), was b. in the city of New York, Oct. 4, 1804; graduated with the highest honours of his class at Columbia College, 1822; studied law with Peter Jay, and spent one year in its practice in the same office; entered the ministry, 1831, and in the same year became pastor of the Amity Street (New York) Baptist Church, which post he has ever since retained, (August, 1870.) He has paid three visits to Europe.

In July, 1865, The Hudson River Baptist Association preferred a request to Dr. Williams to "undertake the preparation of expository notes on the New Testament for use in the Family, Sunday-School, and Church;" and in June, 1870, it was announced that Harper & Brothers would "shortly publish a History of the Baptists, by Rev. W. R. Williams, D.D."

"The Rev. Dr. William R. Williams, of New York, is well known as one of the ablest preachers and most accomplished writers of the day."—WILLIAM B. SPRAGUE, D.D.: Annals, vi., Baptist, 1860, 361.

Nor must we fail to call the attention of the bibliographer to the description of Rev. Dr. Williams's Collection (about 9000 volumes) in Dr. Wynne's Private Libraries of New York, 1860, 433-446.

Williams, Zachariah, father of Anna Williams, (supra), a physician of North Wales, under the impression that he "had been fortunate enough to ascertain the Longitude by magnetism, and that the variations of the needle were equal at equal distances East and West," about 1730 visited London to reap the benefits of his supposed discovery; was disappointed in his hopes, and became an inmate of the Charter-House, from which a dispute with the Masters (detailed by him in No. 1, infra) obliged him to remove; spent the rest of his life in poverty, and d. in London, 1755.

1. A True Narrative, Lon., 1749, 4to. 2. An Account of an Attempt to ascertain the Longitude at Sea, by an Exact Theory of the Variations of the Magnetic Needle, &c., 1755, 4to. This was really written by his friend Dr. Samuel Johnson. It is accompanied by an Italian translation on the opposite pages, supposed to be by Baretti. It was briefly noticed in Lon. Mon. Rev., 1755, i. 147. For notices of Williams, see Nichols's Lit. Anec., ii. 179; Chalmers's Biog. Diet., xxxii. 96; Croker's Boswell's Johnson, ed. 1848, ch. xi.

Williamson, Hugh, M.D., LL.D., b. in West Nottingham township, Penna., Dec. 5, 1735; graduated at the College of Philadelphia, 1757; was licensed in Connecticut to preach, 1759, and was subsequently admitted to the Presbytery of Philadelphia, and preached in all about two years, but, partly in consequence of ill health, was never ordained nor assumed a pastorate; Professor of Mathematics in the College of Philadelphia, 1760-64, when he sailed for Europe, and during his absence studied medicine in Edinburgh, London, and Utrecht; after his return, practised medicine in Philadelphia for some years; again travelled in Europe, 1773-76, and in 1774 was examined before H. M. Privy Council respecting politics in America; settled in North Carolina, where he became in 1782 a Member of the House of Commons; was for three years in the Continental Congress, in 1787 a Delegate to the Convention which formed the Constitution of the United States, in 1789 a Representative in the U. Brit.*, 8th ed., viii., 1855, 575. As regards the vexata questio of the unearthing of the Hutchinson and Oliver Letters, we have nothing new to offer, save the late affirmation of John Williamson. Dr. John W. Francis

(in 1858, ubi supra, 99) asserted that John Williamson stated to him, what he also communicated to Dr. Hosack, that his brother Hugh was the chief actor in the prosecution. The eminent critics Bancroft and Sparks have decided adversely to this claim; and it is certainly not an "honour" (considering the manner in which Dr. Williamson is said by Dr. Hosack to have obtained the Letters) which we should covet for one whose memory we held in veneration.

Willis, Nathaniel Parker, a descendant in the seventh generation of the Rev. John Bailly, (see Sprague's Annals, i., Trin. Congreg., 201,) and a son of Nathaniel Willis, founder of The Eastern Argus, 1803, The Boston Recorder, 1816, and The Youth's Companion, (and who d. May 26, 1870, aged 90,) was b. in Portland, Maine, Jan. 20, 1806; graduated at Yale College, 1827; edited for S. G. Goodrich (Peter Parley) The Legendary in 1828, and The Token in 1829, and established and conducted The American Monthly Magazine, published 1829 to 1831, and then merged in The New York Mirror, of which he became editor in conjunction with George P. Morris,—under which name we have already sketched Mr. Willis's subsequent editorial career. We are to add, however, that in 1839 Dr. T. A. Porter and Mr. Willis established a short-lived weekly, entitled The Corsair: a Gazette of Literature, Art, Dramatic Criticism, &c., N. York, 4to. Mr. Willis travelled in Europe, 1831 to 1835, and in the latter year was married in England to Miss Mary Leighton Stace, daughter of Commissary-General William Stace, then of the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich; returned to the United States in 1837, and retired to his beautiful estate on the Susquehanna, called "Glenmary" in compliment to his wife, from whom he was separated by death in 1844; revisited Europe in 1839, and again in 1844; was married to Miss Grinnell in 1845, and subsequently chiefly resided—with the exception of a Health-Trip to the Southern and Western States and the West Indies (see No. 21, infra) in 1851-52—at "Idlewild," near Newburgh, on the Hudson,—the charms of which he described with a freedom highly honourable to his character for hospitality,—for many who were delighted to read were still more delighted to see. He d. at Idlewild, Jan. 20, 1867. Whilst at college he gained a prize of $50 offered by The Album for the best poem; and also published in The Boston Recorder, under the signature of Roy, several pieces of religious poetry.

"The heart that never wanted in good nature has gained in wisdom. . . The book altogether is, of its kind, amusing and agreeable: its writer's best book, we think."—Lon. Athen., 1859, i. 674, 675.

"A most agreeable book. . . One circumstance there is which often interrupts the agreeableness of Mr. Willis's pages. Not contented with the clear, free, pleasant style which he is master of, he is continually coining new words and phrases which are ingeniously discordant and utterly at variance with the spirit of the English language. So perverse a habit is doubly hurtful and doubly to be blamed in a writer who is on other grounds so deservedly popular as the author of 'The Convalscent.'"—Lon. Gent. Mag., 1859, ii. 175.

It will be observed by the preceding list (of some of the numbers there have been several editions) that some of Mr. Willis's works have appeared in more than one shape.

In 1846 J. S. Redfield, of New York, published a collection advertised as "The Prose and Poetical Works of N. P. Willis, complete, in one large [royal] octavo volume, [pp. about 900,] containing everything written by Mr. Willis to the present time." A collective edition of his Prose Works was published by Carey & Hart, Philadelphia, in 1 vol. r. 8vo, 1848, and a vol. entitled his Miscellaneous Works has been issued in New York. An edition advertised as Willis's Complete Prose Works is pub. by Scribner & Company, of New York, in 12mo volumes, viz.: I., Rural Letters, and other Records of Thought at Leisure; II., Life Here and There; III., Famous Persons and Places; IV., Fun Jottings; V., People I Have Met; VI., Pencilings by the Way; VII., A Summer Cruise in the Mediterranean on Board of an American Frigate; VIII., The Rag-Bag; IX., Hurry-graphs; X., Out-Doors at Idlewild; XI., A Health-Trip to the Tropics; XII., Paul Fane; XIII., The Convalscent.

Collective editions, some illustrated, of his Poems, (some entitled Sacred Poems), in one volume, each 8vo et infra, have been published by Carey & Hart, Phila., and Clark, Austin & Smith, (formerly Clark & Maynard,) New York; last editions, Clark, Austin & Smith: I., Sacred Poems, with more than 100 engravings, cr. 4to, pp. 250, Oct. 1859; again, Clark & Maynard, with Illustrations by Darley, Herriek, Chapman, Parsons, Whitney, Lumley, Ehringer, White, and Hitchcock, Sept. 1868, sm. 4to; II., Poems, Sacred, Passionate, and Humorous, "complete edition," blue and gold, with a new portrait, 16mo, pp. 370, Nov. 10, 1860; Sept. 25, 1864. Routledge, of London, also publishes a collective edition of his Poems, in 1 vol. r. 24mo, 1850, 1853, 1860; with a Memoir, 1867, 12mo; 1869, 12mo. Specimens of his composition will be found in Cheever's American Poetry, Bost., 1829, (see N. Amer. Rev., xxxiii. 297; Selections from the American Poets, Dublin, 1834, 8vo, (see *Edin. "The prose and poetry of Mr. Willis are alike distinguished for exquisite finish and melody. His language is pure, varied, and rich, his imagination brilliant, and his wit of the finest quality. Many of his descriptions of natural scenery are written pictures; and no other author has represented with equal vivacity and truth the manners of the age."—R. W. GRISWOLD, D.D.: Poets and Poetry of America.

"As a writer of 'sketches,' properly so called, Mr. Willis is unequalled. Sketches—especially of society—are his forte, and they are so for no other reason than that they afford him the best opportunity of introducing the personal Willis,—or, more distinctly, because this species of composition is most susceptible of impression from his personal character. . . . As a poet, Mr. Willis is not entitled, I think, to so high a rank as he may justly claim through his prose. . . . His style proper may be called extravagant, bizarre, pointed, epigrammatic, without being antithetical, (this is very rarely the case,) but, through all its whimsicalities, graceful, classic, and accurate. He is very seldom to be caught tripping in the minor morals. His English is correct; his most outrageous imagery is, at all events, unmix'd."—EDGAR A. POE: The Liberator.

"His style is airy and graceful; his perception of beauty is keen and discriminating; and his descriptive powers are of a high order. Few men can present a visible scene, a landscape, or a natural object, more distinctly to the eye. His poetry has the same general characteristics. It is sweet, flowing, and musical, and, in its best specimens, marked by truth of sentiment and delicacy of feeling."—GEORGE S. HILLARD: P.-C. Reader.

"M. Willis est peut-être le plus infatigable et le plus varié des écrivains de l'Amérique; il appartient à ce que ses compatriotes [see Griswold, Prose Writers of America] appellent l'école vénétrienne, c'est à dire, se préoccupant moins de la pensée que de la forme, il cherche surtout l'effet, l'original, l'imprévu, le pittoresque, les contrastes ou les images du style.

"Comme M. Alexandre Dumas, avec lequel il a certains points de ressemblance, il dépense beaucoup d'esprit et de verve dans une multitude d'œuvres qui n'ont qu'un succès éphémère. Poète, philosophe, voyageur, critique, journaliste, romancier, auteur dramatique, il a traité sans peine tous les genres, mais sans obtenir une grande supériorité dans aucun; ses impressions de voyage restent jusqu'ici son meilleur titre à la célébrité."—G. VAPERAUD: Dict. univ. des Contemp., Paris, 1858, 1777.

It is to be regretted that one capable of writing so well should have disfigured many of his pages by puerile affectations and unscholarly conceits,—outrages against the statute law and common law of the language. An expurgated edition of some of the best of Mr. Willis's works, or one in which the barbarous jargon complained of should be translated into English, might be dedicated To Posterity with a very good prospect of reaching its destination. For that which would be thus rejected, an excellent substitute can be offered by the accomplished author. Who, for instance, could better paint a portrait-gallery, illustrated by notices of their respective compositions, of The Literary Men of America from 1825 to 1865?—(The above was written before Mr. Willis's death.)

Willoughby, Sir Hugh, was admiral of a fleet fitted out for a voyage of discovery by the Company of Merchants Adventurers, whose Governor was Sebastian Cabot. Of the three vessels which sailed from Deptford, May 10, 1553, not one returned, and of the crews, only a few of the common sailors of the Edward Bonaventura. An account purporting to be Sir Hugh Willoughby's Journal was published in Hakluyt, (see the MS. in the Cottonian Collec. in Brit. Mus., Otho. E. viii.) and notices of the expedition occur in Clement Adams's account of Chancellor's adventures, and in the voyages of Burregh and Jenkinson in 1756, also in Hakluyt. See, also, Pinkerton, i.; Purchas, iii. 463; and the notice of Willoughby in Knight's Eng. Cyc., Biog., vi. (1858) 742. Willughby, Francis, already noticed in our Life of his preceptor and friend, John Ray, the only son of Sir Francis Willughby, Knight, of Eresby, was b. 1635, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge: travelled with Ray extensively in England, and in 1663-64 on the Continent, collecting materials, subsequently digested by Ray, (ut infra), for works on natural history; d. whilst contemplating a voyage to America for further acquisitions, July 3, 1672. His museum of animal and fossil productions was a valuable one for its day. He contributed five papers to Phil. Trans., 1669-71, (see Watt's Bibl. Brit.), and Ray after his death prepared from his MSS. and inserted in Phil. Trans. other papers. Ray also published the two following: 1. Francisci Willughbeii Arm. Ornithologiae Libri tres, &c.; Totum Opus recognovit, digessit, supplevit Johannes Raius, with 77 plates, Lon., 1676, fol.: Hibbert, 8645, 11s.; 1. p.: Hibbert, 8644, with coloured plates, £1 19s.: Sotheby's, Feb. 1823, £3. Ornithology, translated into English and enlarged by John Ray, to which are Added Three Discourses, with 78 engravings, and 2 at page 28, (sometimes wanting,) 1678, fol. Roxburghe, 1800, £3.

"This book first gave me a taste for Natural History."—THOMAS PENNANT.

Cuvier says that all subsequent writers have followed Willughby, and that his descriptions are wonderfully correct. "The fishes of the Mediterranean are described with rare precision; and it is frequently easier to find species in Willughby than in Linnaeus."—Cuvier: Bog. Univ., art. Ray.

Cuvier also notices (Hist. Nat., Premier Discours) the obligations of Willughby, in common with Gesner, Aldrovandus, Artedi, Linnaeus, and Lacepède, to Rondelet's Piscibus Marinis, Lugd., 1554-55, 2 Parts, in 1 vol. fol., some 1. p.

"Willughby was the most accomplished Zoologist of this or any other country; for all the honour that has been given to Ray, so far as concerns systematic Zoology, belongs exclusively to him. He alone is the author of that system which both Ray and Linnaeus took for their guide, which was not improved by the former or confessed by the latter."—SWAINSON.

But this alleged superiority to Ray will be disputed. For Willughby's Iter Hispanicum and his Letters, see RAY, JOHN, Nos. 6, 21. His Travels in Spain are also in Harris's Voyages, vol. ii. Wilson, Alexander, whose name will be held in lasting remembrance as the founder of American ornithology, was b. at Paisley, Scotland, July 6, 1766; from July 31, 1779, to August, 1782, worked at the loom as a weaver's apprentice, and subsequently passed several years in weaving and peddling; published a volume of Poems at Paisley in 1790, 8vo, 2d ed.,—Poems, Humorous, Satirical, and Serious,—1791, 8vo; gave to the press anonymously, in 1792, his poem of Watty and Meg, of which (it was ascribed by the public to Robert Burns) one hundred thousand copies were sold in a few weeks; emigrated to Philadelphia in 1794, and, after a short experience at copper-plate printing and a fresh trial for a few months of weaving and peddling, settled down to school-keeping, first near Frankford, subsequently at Milestown, about six miles from Philadelphia, then at Bloomfield, New Jersey, and almost immediately afterwards (this was in 1802) at Kingessing, where he became intimate with William Bartram, (p. 137, supra), who stimulated his taste for natural history, and Alexander Lawson, (see LAWSON, MARY LOCKHART,) who instructed him in drawing, colouring, and etching, and at a later period engraved the plates of his Ornithology.

To this great work Wilson henceforth devoted himself with unwearied assiduity—collecting his specimens in personal explorations of the fields, forests, and rivers of the country, and delineating their portraits with his own pencil, pen, and brush—until his death, at Philadelphia, August 23, 1813. He was interred in the cemetery of the Old Swedes' Church, Southwark, Philadelphia, where his remains still repose, (1870.) He was never married. One of his friends, who long survived him, remarks in his reminiscences, recently published,

"Mr. Bradford, the same liberal patron who enabled me to study painting, enabled Wilson to publish the most interesting account of birds, and to illustrate it with the best representations of their forms and colours, that has ever appeared. Wilson was engaged by Mr. Bradford as tutor to his sons, and as editor of the American edition of 'Rees's Cyclopædia;' while at the same time he was advancing his Ornithology for publication. I assisted him to colour some of its first plates. We worked from birds which he had shot and stuffed; and I well remember the extreme accuracy of his drawings, and how carefully he had counted the number of scales on the tiny legs and feet of his subject. He looked like a bird: his eyes were piercing, dark, and luminous, and his nose shaped like a beak. He was of a spare, bony form, very erect in his carriage, inclining to be tall; and, with a light, elastic step, he seemed qualified by nature for his extraordinary pedestrian achievements."—CHARLES R. LESLIE: Autobiog. Recollec., 1860, ch. xii.

American Ornithology; or, The Natural History of the Birds of the United States; Illustrated with Plates Engraved and Coloured from Original Drawings taken from Nature, with 76 coloured plates, including 320 figures of 278 genera, Phila., 1808-14, 9 vols. imp. 4to. See ORD, GEORGE. Mr. Ord also edited vol. viii. The subscription price was $120. Sold, 9 vols., in Russia, Sotheby's, in 1824, £31 10s.

"The types, which were very beautiful, were cast in America; and, though at that time paper was largely imported, he [Mr. Bradford] determined that the paper should be of American manufacture; and I remember that Ames, the paper-maker, carried his patriotism so far that he declared he would use only American rags in making it. The result was that the book far surpassed any other that had appeared in that country, and I apprehend, though it may have been equalled in typography, has not before or since been equalled in its matter or its plates. Bewick comes nearest to it; but his accounts of birds are not so full and complete, and his figures, admirably characteristic and complete as they are in form, have not the advantage of the much larger scale of Wilson's, or of colour. Unfortunately, Wilson's book was necessarily expensive, and therefore not remunerative; but nothing discouraged him."—C. R. LESLIE: ubi supra.

Second edition, N. York and Phila., 1828-29, 3 vols. sm. 4to, and atlas of 76 coloured plates, fol.; i. p., 3 vols. 4to, and vol. of plates. The plates of this edition are the same as those contained in vols. i.-vii. of the original work, but were retouched by Alexander Lawson, by whom they were engraved. II. American Ornithology, with a Continuation by Charles Lucien Bonaparte, New and Enlarged Edition, completed by the Insertion of above 100 Birds omitted in the Original Work, and Illustrated by Notes, with a Life of the Author, by Sir William Jardine, Bart., with 97 plates, representing 363 figures, Lon. and Edin., 3 vols. 8vo, 1832, (some 1835.) Coloured boards, £6 16s. 6d.: extra coloured, half-bound, morocco, £10 10s. Red. to £3 3s.; coloured, £4 4s. The edition was purchased by H. G. Bohn in 1836, and the plates coloured with more care and finish than before. Utterson, in 1837, coloured plates, £4 11s.; Sotheby's, Mar. 1863, £4 4s. See Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1832, 582.

"This is by far the best edition of the American Ornithology, both on account of the beautiful plates and the most interesting notes of the editor. Every Ornithologist must, of course, possess the work, and he should, if possible, procure this edition."—NEVILLE WOOD.

III. American Ornithology, by Wilson, with Notes by Jardine, to which is added a Synopsis of American Birds, including those described by Bonaparte, Audubon, and Richardson, edited by T. M. Brewer, 8vo, pp. 746, with 26 plates, containing 400 figures, Bost., 1840, and N. York, 1852, &c.

IV. Wilson and Bonaparte's Ornithology, new edition, edited by T. M. Brewer, without plates, 8vo, N. York, 1852, &c.

V. The American Ornithology, by Alexander Wilson, with a Life of the Author by George Ord, and Numerous Additions from Audubon, Bonaparte, Nuttall, Richardson, and Jardine, by T. M. Brewer, 2 vols. 8vo, and plates in 1 vol. r. 4to, Phila., 1856. A new edition of Wilson's Ornithology is now (1865) in course of preparation in the city of New York. To either of the above editions add: Illustrations of the American Ornithology by Alexander Wilson and Charles Lucien Bonaparte, with the Addition of numerous [161] recently discovered Species, and Representations of the whole Sylva of North America, by Captain Thomas Brown; to which is added a Systematic Index, with 124 coloured plates, comprising 522 figures of birds and 167 shrubs and trees, Edin., r. fol., (1832-35,) 1835, £26.

It is difficult to speak extravagantly of Wilson's Ornithology:

"All his pencil or pen has touched is established incontestably: by the plate, description, and history he has always determined his bird so obviously as to defy criticism and prevent future mistake. . . . We may add, without hesitation, that such a work as he has published in a new country is still a desideratum in Europe."—CHARLES LUCIEN BONAPARTE.

"The History of the Birds of the United States, by Wilson, already equals in elegance our most beautiful works in ornithology. If ever that of M. Audubon be completed, then it will have to be granted that America, in magnificence of execution, has surpassed the Old World."—BARON CUVIER: Report to the Roy. Acad. of Sci. of Paris. See, also, AUDUBON, JOHN JAMES, (quotation from Cuvier.)

"Wilson contemplated Nature as she really is, not as she is represented in books: he sought her in her sanctuaries:—the shore, the mountain, the forest, were alternately his study, and there he drank the pure stream of knowledge at the fountain-head."—SWAINSON.

"With an enthusiasm never excelled, this extraordinary man penetrated through the vast territories of the United States, undeterred by forests or swamps, for the sole purpose of describing the native birds."—LORD BROUGHAM: Architecture of Birds.

As regards his style:

"Alexander Wilson was the great pioneer in this branch of American science; and who that appreciates his chaste and eloquent style, his accurate and happy delineation of a class of the most lovely objects in nature, can fail to experience the greatest delight in reviewing the pages of the 'American Ornithology'?"—JOHN K. TOWNSEND: Ornithology of the United States, Introd., iii.

"Alexander Wilson . . . whose descriptions . . . are simple, strong, vivid, and pure, and written, with the exception of a few pleasant Scotchisms, in perfectly good English, if we mistake not, direct and idiomatic. By the mere force of native genius and of delight in nature he became, without knowing it, a good, a great writer."—Blackw. Mag., xviii, 872.

"With regard to the literary merit of his American Ornithology, passages occur in the prefaces and descriptions which, for elegance of language, graceful ease, and graphic power, can scarcely be surpassed."—Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., xxi, 1860, 873.

In early life Wilson wrote for The Glasgow Advertiser (afterwards The Glasgow Herald) and Dr. Anderson's Bee; and figured in The Laurel Disputed; or, The Merits of Allan Ramsay and Robert Ferguson Contrasted, in Two Poetical Essays, by E. Picken and A. Wilson, Edin., 1791. After his emigration to America he contributed a poem entitled The Solitary Tutor to C. B. Brown's Literary Magazine; The Foresters, a Poem descriptive of a Pedestrian Tour to the Falls of Niagara, (also Paisley, 1825, 12mo, &c.,) to Dennie's Port-Folio; and other pieces to Moses Thomas's Analectic Magazine. He composed a song called Jefferson and Liberty, and published an Oration on the Power and Value of National Liberty, Phila., 1801, 8vo.

A Collective edition of his Poems, with an Account of his Life, was issued at Paisley, 1816, 12mo; the last edition—The Poetical Works of Alexander Wilson, with an Extended Memoir of his Life and Writings—was published at Belfast, 1857, 12mo: condemned by Lon. Athen., 1857, 1002. See, also, Moir's Sketches of Poet. Lit., ed. 1856, 101. Two of his poems—The Blue-Bird and The Humming-Bird—will be found in The Philadelphia Book, 1836, 221, 257. We have already noticed the Life of Wilson by Mr. George Ord: this gentleman (now fourscore-and-five) is still with us in Philadelphia, having survived his friend and fellow-tourist more than half a century, (Sept. 1865.) New Chapter in his Life, embodying many Letters hitherto Unpublished, by Allan Park Paton, 1863, 8vo, pp. 32. Reviewed in Lon. Athen., 1863. See, also, The Life of John James Audubon, the Naturalist; Edited by his Widow, &c., N. York, 1869, 12mo.

Our countrymen have long claimed Wilson as at least as much an American (save the accident of birth) as a Scotchman; but his fellow-townsmen have at last concluded that the time has come for a standing memorial of their relationship; and there is to be erected at Paisley, by Mr. Mossman, a Glasgow sculptor, a statue of the ornithologist, dressed for his work,—a dead bird, which he has just shot, in his hand, his gun slung round his shoulder, a sketch-book and parrot at his feet. It is to be of bronze, a little larger than life, and to rest on a pedestal of Aberdeen granite nine feet in height. This is well; but it is our duty to add that the project of erecting a monument to the memory of Wilson at Paisley originated with our fellow-townsmen George Ord, his friend and biographer, when on a visit to Wilson's birth-place. He subscribed liberally towards it himself, and afterwards sent funds from this city (Philadelphia) for the purpose. America and Scotland may well be content to share honours which are only increased by division.
